Love Revealed In Pet Cemetery

The tiny grave is overgrown with dandelions and wild violets. The headstone is weather-worn and cracked, but readable.

When he died in 1943, the marker indicates, Dock was only 11 years and a day old. Figured in terms of human years, he would have been 77.

567 Pet Buried

In all, 567 pets are buried in marked graves just east of the Lincoln Humane Society. Another 1,400 are buried in a field just north of Dr. Robert White's veterinary clinic on West Charleston.

Most are dogs and cats, but there are a few parakeets and at least one skunk.

On Memorial Day, both cemeteries are likely to be crowded with people.

"A lot of folks come out and leave flowers," said Metta Patton, wife of Humane Society Director Bernard Patton. Sometimes people send big bouquets and floral sprays as well, she said.

People Not Silly

Mrs. Patton said she doesn't think people are silly if they want their pets buried in a cemetery.

"To some people, their pets are almost like kids," she said.

She remembered an elderly woman who wanted her pet Boxer buried in a fancy casket with tufted lining.

"She had never married and never had any kids or anything," Mrs. Patton said. "The dog was probably the only thing she had.

"The casket plus burial expenses must have cost her $70 or $80," Mrs. Patton said.

Cost Is $37.94

To have a pet buried in a marked grave at the Humane Society costs $37.94, she said. Of that, $25 is for the lot; $17.50 is for the flat, stone marker and $.44 is state tax.

The Humane Society also has a kind of pauper's field, where pets are laid side-by-side in a trench and covered with dirt. This costs only $7.50, she said.

There is even a horse or a pony buried in one of the trenches, Mrs. Patton said. The Humane Society charged the owners extra because the animal took up enough space for three or four smaller animals.

At Dr. White's pet cemetery, lot and headstone costs $35, according to his secretary, Elaine Erdelt. Burial in a pasture area is $5, she said, unless the animal is put to sleep. Then it runs about $7.50.

Little Caskets

People have their pets buried in just about anything, Mrs. Patton said, from cardboard boxes and ice chests to little caskets with satin linings and tiny pillows.

Dr. White orders caskets in either wood or a type of hard plastic from a pet drug company, Ms. Erdelt said. They cost about $40 a piece.

She said a Lincoln woman lines them and makes little pillows at owners' requests.

A few people even buy baby caskets from funeral homes.

Mrs. Erdelt said one family has had three pets buried in baby caskets so far. They have two other plots reserved, she added.

Little Ceremony

Sometimes people perform a little ceremony at the grave, Mrs. Patton said.

"We used to have a little poem or something that we read," she said.

Actually, city residents don't have much choice of what they do with dead animals if they don't let their veterinarian handle it, Mrs. Patton said.

Most dead animals brought to the Humane Society are cremated, she said. That costs only $1.50.

According to Ken Widergren, supervisor of community health for the City Health Department, animals cannot be buried within the city limits or within five miles of city limits without special permission.

He speculated that the City Ordinance, passed in 1936 and amended in 1955, was adopted for sanitary reasons.

Colson To Be Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee said Tuesday that the panel's impeachment staff will interview Charles W. Colson to determine if the former Nixon aide should be called as a witness.

Rodino declined to say when the staff would talk to Colson, who pleaded guilty on Monday to obstruction of justice and promised to cooperate with the special Watergate prosecutor.

The chairman made the announcement at a briefing after the committee had spent nearly seven hours in closed session hearing evidence on the White House involvement in the ITT antitrust settlement.

Republican members of the committee said later they felt no serious evidence against the President had been presented in the ITT matter.

"I don't think there's any question this is one of the weaker parts of the case against the President," said Rep. Lawrence J. Hogan, R-Md.

"I would say it is not as serious as other allegations that have been made," said Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill.

The committee heard tapes of three conversations including one in which the President angrily ordered then deputy Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst to drop plans to appeal a court decision favorable to ITT.

Rep. James R. Mann, D-S.C., said, "It was a very tough call."

"It was a flat order to cut it out . . . poor Dick Kleindienst didn't get a word in edgewise," said Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y.

Kleindienst later denied in testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee that he had received any White House guidance in the ITT case.

Asked what criminal offenses might be involved if the President knew that Kleindienst was not giving the Senate committee the correct story, Albert Jenner, minority counsel for the committee, said it could involve obstruction of justice or failure to carry out Constitutional responsibilities.

The telephone conversation took place on April 19, 1971, in the middle of another presidential conversation with aides John D. Ehrlichman and George Shultz. The committee heard the tape which included both discussions. It also heard excerpts from a presidential conversation two days later with then Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell during which Mitchell convinced Nixon to reverse his order to drop the appeal.

Kleindienst and Mitchell testified before the Senate committee in March 1972 at hearings on confirmation of Kleindienst to succeed Mitchell as attorney general. Most of the questioning focused on the ITT settlement and an allegation it was influenced by a $200,000 pledge from an ITT subsidiary to help underwrite the cost of the Republican National Convention.

At his confirmation hearings, Kleindienst was asked if he had talked to anyone at the White House about the ITT case.

"Not that I can recall," he replied, "It is possible that some casual reference could have been made to it, but so far as discussing any policy or any aspect of the case, I did not and I do not discuss antitrust matters there."

Mitchell was asked if he had ever discussed the case with the President.

"Senator, the President has never talked to me about any antitrust case that was in the department," Mitchell replied. Mitchell had left the ITT case to Kleindienst because the attorney general's former New York law firm had represented the conglomerate.

But in a White House statement issued last Jan. 8, it was acknowledged that the President had called Kleindienst and ordered him not to appeal a court decision favorable to ITT in a government suit challenging its acquisition of Grinnell Corp.

On May 16, Kleindienst pleaded guilty in federal court to a misdemeanor charging that he "did refuse and fail to answer accurately and fully" the Senate committee's questions about the case.

Colson pleaded guilty on Monday to a single charge of obstruction of justice in connection with the Pentagon Papers trial and promised to cooperate with the special Watergate prosecutor's office, Colson issued a statement expressing his desire to "tell everything I know."

White House lawyer James D. St. Clair told newsmen as he entered the House Judiciary Committee session that he thought the panel "definitely" should call Colson as a witness.

He said he thought Colson's testimony "would be highly supportive of the President."

Colson had a key role in the Kleindienst hearings and also in the milk price support decision that also will be examined by the committee this week. The panel will look at an allegation that the milk price support increase was ordered after dairy cooperatives pledged substantial contributions to the President's re-election campaign. The White House has denied the charge.

Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, asked about an Associated Press report that at least 16 members of the committee had received campaign contributions from the same dairy cooperatives that gave to the Nixon campaign, said:

"I don't think members should disqualify themselves. This is not a judicial proceeding . . . If every member disqualified himself because of a political view or what-not, no members would be qualified."

Seiberling, who was not one of those listed as receiving dairy money, said the cooperatives "must have felt the people were sympathetic to their point of view. There is great difference between that and if you give me a contribution and I say I'll vote your way."

Brown, Flournoy Go Into California Lead

By The Associated Press

Moderate Republican Houston Flournoy took a commanding early lead and liberal Democrat Edmund G. Brown Jr. edged narrowly ahead Tuesday as Californians chose candidates for governor.

Flournoy, the state controller, held a margin of almost 3-1 over indicted Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke in the Republican primary with about 3 per cent of the vote counted.

Reinecke, a conservative, had been the favorite until April 3 when a Watergate grand jury charged him with lying to a Senate committee about his role in the ITT case.

Brown, meanwhile, edged ahead of San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti for the Democratic nomination.

Elsewhere in the eight states that held primary elections Tuesday, a former prisoner of war won the Republican nomination to oppose Sen. George S. McGovern's re-election bid in South Dakota, and said his victory was due to his nonpolitical new look.

In Mississippi, James Meredith, a black man who integrated the University of Mississippi a decade ago, won his way into the runoff for a Democratic congressional nomination.

In the California primary, Brown based his race on support for Proposition 9, a Watergate-inspired initiative that would reform political campaign practices.

With about 4 per cent of the vote counted, Proposition 9 had 142,559 yes votes to 61,626 no votes.

In other California races. Sen. Alan Cranston, a Democrat, won renomination against token opposition.

Rep. Paul McCloskey, a political maverick, trailed narrowly in a see-saw Republican primary race against a conservative opponent.

In South Dakota, Leo Thorsness, a retired Air Force colonel who spent six years in a North Vietnamese prison camp, defeated two opponents in the Republican senatorial primary. He faces McGovern, whom he vowed to unseat because of McGovern's antiwar views during the 1972 presidential campaign.

South Dakota's Democratic governor, Richard Kneip, was renominated over Lt. Gov. William Dougherty, his former running mate.

James Meredith, whose enrollment at the University of Mississippi in 1962 touched off riots, outpolled five other candidates in a Democratic congressional primary in Mississippi. But Meredith failed to get 50 per cent of the vote and will face runnerup Kenneth Dean, a white civil rights advocate, in a runoff June 25.

In Iowa, State Rep. David Stanley took an early lead in the search for a Republican candidate to run for the Senate seat being vacated by Harold R. Hughes. Rep. John Culver was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

In Iowa, State Rep. David Staley won the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Harold R. Hughes. Rep. John Culver was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

In the Iowa gubernatorial race, State Senate Minority Leader James Schaben defeated two other candidates for the Democratic nomination. Republican Gov. Robert Ray was unopposed for renomination.

In New Mexico, Joseph Skeen, a rancher, won the Republican nomination for governor and State Sen. Jerry Apodaca, at 39 the youngest candidate in a six-man field, won the Democratic nomination. Democratic Gov. Bruce King was barred by law from seeking renomination.

In Montana, Max Baucus won the Democratic congressional primary in the eastern district over two candidates, including former Congressman Arnold Olsen. In the western district, Jack MacDonald, a rancher and a former Democrat, won the Republican nomination. Both will face incumbents.

In Alabama, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley won renomination by defeating millionaire industrialist Charles Woods in the Democratic primary. Woods defeated Beasley in the first primary last month but failed to get the 50 per cent necessary to avoid a runoff.

In New Jersey, there were 69 candidates in the 15 Congressional districts, but incumbents won renomination easily. Among the winners was Rep. Peter W. Rodino, the chairman of the House Judicary Committee, which is lookign into the possibility of President Nixon's impeachment.

DEC Directorship Is Highly Coveted

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The directorship of the State Department of Environmental Control (DEC) has turned out to be a highly coveted post.

The Nebraska Environmental Control Council's screening committee chairman reported Tuesday that approximately 100 applicants have expressed interest in the post vacated by the death of the DEC's first director, James L. Higgins.

Richard Veach, screening committee chairman, said the committee hopes to narrow that field Wednesday from 100 to ten or fewer. He said those final candidates will be interviewed by the council at its June 28 meeting and the names of at least two will be forwarded to Gov. J. James Exon for the final selection.

'Very Fortunate'

Veach told The Star the council was "very fortunate" to attract the number and caliber of applicants for the post that it did. Applications came from people as far away as Pennsylvannia and Colorado, he said.

When the council first set out to find a new director, a number of members had expressed concern about being able to attract a sufficient number of qualified candidates.

Veach said Tuesday that all of the finalists chosen by the committee will meet all of the requirements. The council at its April meeting drew up a 13-point list of qualifications for the new director.

The qualifications exclude some industry and municipal persons interested in the post. The council agreed to waive advanced degree requirements in lieu of administrative experience in an environmental field.

Won't Discuss Names

Veach declined to discuss the names of applicants, saying a number had requested strict confidentiality for fear of jeopardizing their present jobs. He also refused to comment on speculation that a DEC staff member has applied for the post.

However, according to reliable sources, Carl Clopeck, the Environmental Protection Agency's representative on the Missouri River Basin Commission, has applied for the post. It is not known whether Dr. Larry Holcomb, an Omaha biology professor, has applied.

Veach indicated that Exon has agreed to a starting salary between $17-$23,000 for the new director. Council members had expressed concern that it would not be able to meet the salary demands of qualified applicants.

At the time of his death, Higgins was reportedly earning $17,300 per year. Council members felt the director's salary should be in the $20-$25,000 range.

Probate Code Lobbying Hit

. . . Carstens Wants To Investigate

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Pointing specifically to the Nebraska Press Association, Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice Tuesday said the Legislature should look into lobbying activities which led to enactment of the new probate reform code.

Carstens said an article in NPA's May publication represented "the most complete confession I've ever seen."

The law, approved by the 1974 Legislature over Carstens' strenuous objections, is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, 1977.

Permission Asked

Carstens has asked the Legislative Council's executive board for permission to conduct hearings into the matter prior to his retirement from the Unicameral next January.

The hearings on lobbying practices would be held by the Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee, of which Carstens is chairman.

His request was submitted to the board by letter, but it decided Tuesday to forego any decision until Carstens can personally present his case to the board.

"I want to look into whatever lobbying was involved, including the press association," Carstens said in a telephone interview.

Interest Revived

His interest was revived by an article in Nebraska Newspaper, NPA's monthly publication, which reviewed the 1974 legislative session.

Carstens pointed to a number of specific portions of the story.

"In terms of man hours and money expended, the passage of the massive uniform probate code bill, LB354, should get first mention," the article stated.

"NPA employed Jim Ryan, Lincoln attorney, for special lobbying services."

'Cooperation' Obtained

Ryan, it stated, "was effective in obtaining cooperation from backers of the bill in seeing things our way" so that, through amendments, the law retained provisions for three-time publication of legal notices.

In its final form, the article stated, the bill is now "calling for even a few more notices than are required in present probate procedures."

In its general lobbying activities, NPA established "a roster of publishers across the state to serve as 'contact men' with specific state senators when the need arose," the article stated.

"I'm amazed they published this article," Carstens said.

"It turns out that not only the trust companies, but also the press, was against me. No wonder they beat the hell out of me."

Carstens said the new probate code continues to "enrage my sense of justice."

'Legalized Robbery'

The bill "gives great advantage to the unscrupulous and does not protect the unsophisticated," he said. It could turn into "a legalized form of robbery."

Too much power is given to the guardians, the administrators and the executors of estates, Carstens said.

"Anything that can be abused will be abused," he warned.

In sum, he said, a bill advertised as reform "borders on a hoax."

Colson To Be Questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee said Tuesday that the panel's impeachment staff will interview Charles W. Colson to determine if the former Nixon aide should be called as a witness.

Rodino declined to say when the staff would talk to Colson, who pleaded guilty on Monday to obstruction of justice and promised to cooperate with the special Watergate prosecutor.

Probate Code Lobbying Hit

. . . Carstens Wants To Investigate

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Pointing specifically to the Nebraska Press Association, Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice Tuesday said the Legislature should look into lobbying activities which led to enactment of the new probate reform code.

Carstens said an article in NPA's May publication represented "the most complete confession I've ever seen."

The law, approved by the 1974 Legislature over Carstens' strenuous objections, is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, 1977.

Permission Asked

Carstens has asked the Legislative Council's executive board for permission to conduct hearings into the matter prior to his retirement from the Unicameral next January.

The hearings on lobbying practices would be held by the Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee, of which Carstens is chairman.

His request was submitted to the board by letter, but it decided Tuesday to forego any decision until Carstens can personally present his case to the board.

"I want to look into whatever lobbying was involved, including the press association," Carstens said in a telephone interview.

Interest Revived

His interest was revived by an article in Nebraska Newspaper, NPA's monthly publication, which reviewed the 1974 legislative session.

Carstens pointed to a number of specific portions of the story.

"In terms of man hours and money expended, the passage of the massive uniform probate code bill, LB354, should get first mention," the article stated.

"NPA employed Jim Ryan, Lincoln attorney, for special lobbying services."

'Cooperation' Obtained

Ryan, it stated, "was effective in obtaining cooperation from backers of the bill in seeing things our way" so that, through amendments, the law retained provisions for three-time publication of legal notices.

In its final form, the article stated, the bill is now "calling for even a few more notices than are required in present probate procedures."

In its general lobbying activities, NPA established "a roster of publishers across the state to serve as 'contact men' with specific state senators when the need arose," the article stated.

"I'm amazed they published this article," Carstens said.

"It turns out that not only the trust companies, but also the press, was against me. No wonder they beat the hell out of me."

Carstens said the new probate code continues to "enrage my sense of justice."

'Legalized Robbery'

The bill "gives great advantage to the unscrupulous and does not protect the unsophisticated," he said. It could turn into "a legalized form of robbery."

Too much power is given to the guardians, the administrators and the executors of estates, Carstens said.

"Anything that can be abused will be abused," he warned.

Senate Votes For Beagles

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to bar the Army from testing poison gas on beagle puppies and told the Pentagon it may not spend any funds added to the defense budget solely to prime up the economy.

In a second day of debate on the $21.8 billion 1975 arms procurement bill, the Senate turned back proposals to publish annually an overall figure on U.S. intelligence operations overseas, and to set up a fund to convert U.S. war industries to peace-time production

Senate leaders scheduled a series of controversial proposals for major cutbacks of U.S. forces in Europe and Asia for action Thursday, and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex. told newsmen he and other Republicans were concerned one of them might pass.

It would undercut the current mutual troop reduction negotiations between NATO and the Warsaw Pact if that came to pass, Tower said after a meeting of the Republican Policy Committee on Capitol Hill.

Sponsored By Humphrey

The Senate approved the beagles measure on a vote of 76 to 12 after its sponsor, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., argued that "there are plenty of other animals they can use such as rats or mice."

A new Army bid for 450 beagles to be used at its Edgewood Arsenal, Md., Chemical Warfare Center was revealed last week by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis. Humphrey said he had once owned a beagle and would not have her memory "desecrated" by the Army experiments.

The budget limitation measure, by Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., was provoked by an acknowledgement earlier this year by Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger that the Pentagon budget had been considerably pumped up because the administration feared a recession.

It forbids the Pentagon to spend any funds for that purpose and directs Schlesinger to give Congress a written report within 30 days after the measure becomes law on just where the pump-priming money is located in the current budget.

Proxmire Loses

Earlier the Senate turned back a bid by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to have the administration publish annually a consolidated figure on expenses of the CIA, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency and other U.S. intelligence arms.

A proposal by Sen. George McGovern, D-S D., on reconversion of war industries was beaten back 55 to 27.

McGovern had sought to amend the $21.8 billion 1975 arms procurement bill, currently on the Senate floor, by adding a $100 million fund to pay for conversion of war plants to non-defense production and setting up a special office in the Pentagon to administer it.

He was offered similar proposals every year since 1966, when the Vietnam war was in full swing, and all have been defeated.

2-Year-Old Enjoys Smokin' Stogies

Bobby Wright of suburban Sterling Heights, Mich., enjoys a good cigar as much as the next fellow. At left, 2-year-old Bobby gets a light from his grandfather, Don Henderson, also of Sterling Heights. Then, with well-practiced ease, Bobby takes a puff. His family allows a few puffs about once a month. Bobby's mother said he picked up the cigar habit by imitating a 5-year-old cousin from Tennessee.

Would Smokers Rather Fib Than Quit?

Bloomington, Ind. (UPI) — Smokers go to extreme lengths in illogical reasoning, including lying and telling falsehoods to themselves, rather than giving up cigarettes forever, two Indiana University School of Business professors have concluded.

Associate Professors Richard W. Olshavsky and John O. Summers made a study among 108 students, more than three-quarters of them male, enrolled in the IU School of Business at graduate and undergraduate levels. All the volunteers were smokers.

The study was to determine under what conditions consumers will give up harmful products, said Olshavsky, a member of the marketing department.

Among things found in the study were.

— Those who plan to continue smoking at their present levels believe the dangers are not personally relevant.

— The more cigarettes smoked, the more the smoker denies responsibility for control over his habit.

— Heavy smokers more often agree that anti-smoking ads are simple-minded.

— Heavy smokers claim to derive more pleasures from smoking than light smokers.

Factual distortions by smokers are evident throughout the study, Olshavsky said.

For instance, there is a tendency to exaggerate the dangers of being overweight, presumed by many to develop when smokers quit, and a misconception that nicotine is addictive, he said.

Other misconceptions include ones that harmful effects can be detected by the smoker in time, that the harmful effects can be offset by exercise, and that cigarettes are only harmful if smoked all the way to the filter.

With respect to future intentions, 21.3% said they planned to continue smoking at their present levels, 18.5% planned to cut down and 60.2% said they planned to quit — sometime.

The two men also found that 59.3% claimed they would not smoke cigarettes if they had "it all to do over again."

Smallpox Plagues India

New York — Even though it is preventable, at least 10,000 — perhaps as many as 20,000 persons — in India's Bihar state have died so far this year from smallpox. More than 30,000 smallpox cases were reported in the last five weeks from virtually every village in Bihar, an official of the World Health Organization in Geneva said. But 65,000 persons in the same area south of the Nepal border have survived smallpox infections this year, according to Indian Health Officials.

Soviets Net Windfall Profits

Moscow — Owing to the jump in world oil prices, the Soviet Union, which supported the Arab oil embargoes and production restrictions, last year took in nearly a billion dollars more in oil revenue than a year earlier, with only a modest increase in exports. The windfall profits came from trade with a number of Western countries hit hard by Arab oil export restrictions, according to a 1973 Soviet foreign trade report.

Panel Intensifies Inquiry

Washington — Without publicity, the House Judiciary Committee has intensified its inquiry into the 17 so-called "national security" wiretaps authorized by President Nixon beginning in 1969. A series of letters filed in court in connection with a lawsuit by Morton H. Halperin, who had been subjected to one of the wiretaps, disclosed that officials of the committee completed arrangements last week for the turnover of highly classified wiretap logs and documents of the FBI.

Pollution Can Continue

St. Louis — Under a court decision, the Reserve Mining Co. may continue to pollute Lake Superior with industrial wastes from its plant in Silver Bay, Minn. Last April, Reserve Mining, owned jointly by the Armco and Republic Steel Companies, was ordered to immediately stop its waste discharge as a result of a suit brought by the Justice Department, three states and five environmental groups. But a higher court decided Tuesday that Reserve Mining may continue to use the lake while it converts to on-land disposal of its wastes, a process that company officials said may take from 3½ to 5 years.

'And Then What?'

Tulsa, Okla. (AP) — A rape charge was reduced to assault Tuesday in District Court after the alleged victim testified.

District Court Judge Raymond Graham questioned the woman:

"What did he tell you to do:" the judge asked.

"He told me to go into the bedroom."

"And then what?" the judge asked.

"He told me to undress."

"Did you?"

"I did. He looked at me and told me to get dressed again."

Order Abolishes Subversives List

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has abolished the Red-scare era list of subversive organizations maintained by the attorney general and used to screen applicants for government jobs, the White House and Justice Department announced Tuesday.

Nixon signed an executive order doing away with the list created in 1947 by President Truman.

Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said he recommended the action because the list "was a sort of vestigial tail on the federal government's security programs."

Saxbe said "it is now very apparent it no longer serves any useful purpose."

Truman ordered the Justice Department to prepare and maintain the list at a time of widespread national concern about alleged Communists and subversives in government.

The list was widely criticized and the Supreme Court in 1951 ruled that no group could be placed on the list without a hearing.

In subsequent hearings, the court made it virtually impossible to deny an applicant a government job simply because of membership in a group designated as subversive.

"This list has long been a source of contention over both its fairness and its effectiveness," Saxbe said.

Learning Can Be Exciting

The Year of the Arts in the Lincoln public school system has come to an end and Superintendent of Schools John Prasch has said that "it has been a great year, an impressive involvement of a community and its school system in a broad spectrum of art forms . . .

"The students of Lincoln will be influenced for years to come by the efforts that were begun in the Year of the Arts . . ."

And now that this special year of emphasis on the arts has become but a memory, it is time to look to another similar episode. As successful as the year was, it will undoubtedly be repeated some time in the future.

But the concept is one that need not be limited to the arts. To us, there is something in this kind of thing that ought to be more of a part of education more of the time than it is.

What we see here is a kind of bringing to life of the art of learning, a making of something into an integral part of one's life. Rather than a boring exposure to the facts, the students come to understand something by actually experiencing it.

The students, in a sense, live the subject matter that has been designated and there are no limits to this sort of thing. Why not a year of the philosophers, a year of economics, a year of Europe or the Middle East or a year of just about any subject that might be mentioned?

The beauty of the thing is that, like the Year of the Arts, the subject can be taken out of the standard classroom structure and made to have a kind of appeal and timeliness that ought to greatly stimulate the learning process. And that gets to the heart of one of education's major problems — the motivation of students.

The innovations of the Year of the Arts and others that could be devised could bring to life for students a host of areas of national and international significance. The possibilities, it seems to us, are endless and it would be a shame if the success of the Year of the Arts did not carry us into further such adventures.

Medical Care Indiscriminate?

Recently, a family called on an outpatient basis at one of Lincoln's hospitals, because their regular doctor was out of town. The problem involved a young daughter with persistent pain in the abdominal region.

The net results of this were x-rays of the back, a $52 bill from the hospital and a $20 bill from the "reading" radiologists. That is what you would call in the slang of the day a "rip off."

Knowing little else to do, the emergency room physician ordered x-rays, despite the fact that the back was not the area of pain. And seeing nothing wrong with the x-rays, he routinely sent them on to the "experts" to read.

No relief was given to the patient. In later contact with the family physician, the problem was correctly diagnosed as an inflammation of muscle lining and prompt relief was obtained through proper medication.

Only several days after the hospital visit, the family received a nasty billing for the emergency room use, with an insulting heavy-handed statement as to when the bill had to be paid.

The whole thing was simply badly bungled and gave the practice of medicine one more black eye. This is the kind of thing that cries out for far more discretion than was used at every step along the way.

It is the kind of "taking to the cleaners" that pushes people in their thinking onto the side of national health insurance and greater control over the health care delivery system. When the technology and wisdom of medicine is needed, it is wanted and one is more than willing to pay for it, but this is not the first time that the system has resorted to ridiculous overkill.

It is time the profession did something about this and time the hospitals started treating people as human beings, not as crooks, and as average wage earners rather than millionaires.

Butz Snug With Nixon Backers

KEVIN P. PHILLIPS

Secy. of Agriculture Earl Butz is probably the most intensely partisan cabinet-level official Washington has seen in some time. Looking at him — cocky, garrulous, personable, loyal to a fault and somewhat of a huckster — as he campaigned for President Nixon's re-election in 1972 and in behalf of Nixon's survival now, one gets the picture of a candidate for county sheriff or legislature or Congress rather than an administrator of a federal department.

Butz will not deny that picture. He has indicated he likes the image of a fighting partisan in the trenches.

Furthermore, Butz not only practices the "politics of impeachment" that Jack Anderson talks about elsewhere on this page today, but is one who will openly admit to it. At least there is something refreshing about that.

In a New York Times interview this week, Butz said he was indebted to the President and believes in him. As to the Department of Agriculture's relations with Congress, Butz said, "I make assessments myself as to who our friends are on the hill. I do not go out of my way to favor those who are against us." As for congressmen who support Nixon against impeachment, it's different: "I find myself playing pretty closely with some of these people . . . who believe in the presidency," said Butz.

One of the many unhappy consequences of Watergate is that the administration is shaping policy and legislative proposals to blunt impeachment rather than shaping them according to other, more important, criteria.

But it shouldn't surprise anyone. It is natural to try to survive. And it should be expected of an administration which has done it so often before to use whatever executive power that remains for political ends.

Charisma Over Talent

WASHINGTON — While the defeat of Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright in Arkansas' May 28 Democratic primary has cheered many of my conservative colleagues (who still have Vietnam on the brain), the whole affair also has its unfortunate dimensions.

American politics has not been kind to Senators who made their mark protesting U.S. war involvement, and the junior Senator from Arkansas is hardly the first Senator in the front rank of foreign policy debate to be knocked off in a homestate primary.

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.)

Three of the great isolationist Senators of the New Deal Era suffered a kindred fate. Wisconsin's Robert LaFollette, Jr. was toppled in 1946 by a young marine who ran (with some exaggeration) as "Tail-gunner Joe"; Nebraska's George Norris lost his 1942 primary to an Omaha Ford dealer. And Burton K. Wheeler was defeated in Montana's 1946 Democratic primary by a relative lightweight.

For the most part, these men are remembered with much more respect than the men who beat them. And I suspect this will also be true of future assessments of the scholarly Fulbright versus the likeable cliche-vendor who unhorsed him, Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers.

Whether or not one agrees with Fulbright, the fact that such men can be removed from U.S. politics by homestate mediocrities reflects a considerable weakness in our system. Senators who spend enough time in Washington to develop an expertise in a complex technical field often lose their grassroots touch, and they become vulnerable to defeat on local issues. I do not agree with the system of selecting Committee Chairmen by seniority, but a merit arrangement would also have the defect of subjecting chairmen to the Bumperses of U.S. politics. If a man can become a Senate or House Committee chairman through selection by his party on the basis of skill and knowledge, then there ought to be a way to see that he can be kept in Washington.

Towards this end, my own inclination would be to move in the direction of the British system wherein Members of Parliament do not usually reside in the district they represent. National party organizations slate candidates for local constituencies. Thus, the British parties are able to make fuller use of national talent.

When a Fullbright-like situation arose in Britain ten years ago, the outcome was quite different. In the 1964 election, the Labor Party's foreign policy expert, Patrick Gordon Walker, was defeated in his longtime constituency. Like Fulbright, he had been attacked for being too aloof, for living far away in London's affluent Hamstead Garden suburb, and for consorting with intellectuals rather than with the working-class electorate of Smothwick. But after Walker's defeat, his career was not over. His party ran him in another district, and although he lost in 1965, he returned to Parliament in 1966.

If the U.S. Congress is to grasp the technical challenges of the 20th Century, it must be able to count on skilled leaders. And this will be difficult so long as the politics of localism continue to prevail. Good local politicians — people good at pressing the flesh, building the post-offices and getting re-elected to Congress — are rarely men capble of great policy expertise.

The idea that a Dale Bumpers, whose stock in trade is a homely name and a sincere smile, is already being touted as a possible national Democratic candidate in 1976 strikes me as mind-boggling.

Yet similar qualifications — a homely name and a nice smile — appear to be the principal reasons why CBS has slated Roger Mudd as the eventual replacement for Walter Cronkite.

If talent has become unimportant, then the American people must blame themselves for the mess in Washington.

Derry: In The Name Of A Cause

TOM WICKER

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland — One day recently a British officer looked over reports of the previous night's action in Derry and snorted: "three shootings in the Creggan — peanuts!" It does not take much exposure to the unending violence of Northern Ireland to make three random shots in the night seem like peanuts.

The next night, for instance, in Derry, there were numerous attacks on army posts. Two gunmen were shot and captured; another was shot and escaped; a British soldier took a slug in the leg; and a British patrol, chasing a gunman, was surrounded by a crowd and had to use gas and rubber bullets in order to withdraw. So it goes in Derry.

This is a heavily Catholic city — 70 per cent of the population west of the River Foyle — which makes it unlike most of Northern Ireland, where protestants are a two-to-one majority. The Creggan is a hilltop Catholic housing area overlooking the Bogside, the low-lying Catholic population center of Derry (which the Irish have been reluctant for centuries to call Londonderry).

Once barricaded and proclaimed "Free Derry" by the Irish Republican Army, until British troops moved in on July 31, 1972 (a date Derrymen never forget), the area is still an I.R.A. stronghold in which no member of the largely protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary has dared set foot for five years.

Since Derry is so heavily Catholic, most of the fighting here is not between Catholics and protestants but between the Provisional I.R.A. (The terrorist provos) and the hated "Brits" — a Bogside grafitto reads: "Lizzie, call your pigs home" — sometimes it is particularly nasty fighting. This is where British fire killed 13 Irish on bloody Sunday; and the British tell of one form of "aggro" — aggravating the British — in which a group of playing children suddenly drop to the ground while the provos fire over them. Then the children stand up to prevent return fire.

For Americans, that brings back grim memories of Vietnam, where children could be lethal, too. Here, not a few teenagers carry guns and use them, and youngsters under 10 routinely stone passing British vehicles. In fact, the British and official I.R.A. agree — if on little else — that the terrorist provos are mostly "kids," and not too many of them at that.

As in Vietnam, however, a terrorist cannot be easily spotted in the crowd. Here, too, there is a nearby border, largely unguarded, which provides relatively safe haven (only two miles west of Derry). Booby traps are prevalent and a favorite provo tactic is to phone in a bomb report to the British — having first thoroughly booby-trapped the area to be searched. Not to carry the Vietnam parallel too far, Prime Minister Harold Wilson was heard to speak recently of winning "the hearts and minds of the people" of Northern Ireland and a British officer in Belfast conceded ruefully that "an acceptable level of violence" was all that could be hoped-for.

Bombing has become the favorite provo tactic here, despite the usual nightly shootings. Practically impossible to stop is fire-bombing, often by women who conceal the ingredients of a small incendiary device under their clothes, assemble the thing once they're in a shop or building, and hide it to go off at night.

The provos have a new technique of "proxy car-bombing" in which they hijack a car or truck, conceal a bomb in it, and force the driver to take it to a certain point under threat of murdering his or her family, or of setting off the bomb by remote control while the driver is still in the vehicle. When the British stop what they think may be a "proxy car bomb," they make the driver sit in it — while the bomb, if any, ticks away — until he talks.

The British government compensates property-owners for bomb damage — nearly $17 million so far — and the provos apparently hope to make it just too expensive for the "Brits" to stick it out in Northern Ireland. So, in the commercial center, bombed-out, burned and boarded buildings stand out like gap teeth in every block; in the Creggan and the Bogside, bulletholes are as commonplace as window-panes in cottages, schoolhouses, shops.

In the last three years, more than 5,200 homes have been destroyed or damaged in Derry, 124 business premises destroyed, more than 1,800 damaged. Life goes on here by the River Foyle, but so does the violence — all in the name of a cause, but to what end no rational man can say.

"ALL THOSE WISHING TO MAKE A 'DECISION FOR NIXON' WILL PLEASE COME FORWARD..."

JACK ANDERSON

Courting The Jury

WASHINGTON — White House aides have taken pains to remind members of Congress that they are sitting on the impeachment jury and, therefore, that it is improper for them to discuss the case against President Nixon.

It would seem to be even more improper, however, for Nixon as the defendant to court members of the jury. Yet he has taken key senators and representatives on dinner cruises down the Potomac. He has made White House planes, limousines and other privileges available to them. He has pampered them with sudden attention.

The President is even tailoring his legislative program, at least in part, to appeal to the conservatives whose votes he is counting upon to keep him in office. The politics of impeachment, rather than the merits of the legislation, now seems to determine what bills he will support.

For example, the President had halted the construction of a cross-Florida barge canal to preserve the beauty of northern Florida's Oklawaha River. As recently as six weeks ago, the White House reassured Florida conservationists of the President's support.

But the promises were forgotten after a contingent of conservative congressmen called upon the White House to go ahead with the barge canal. The President hastily withdrew his opposition.

The same thing happened to a federal land-use bill, which the President had described as his "number one environmental priority" in his State of the Union message last January. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., working closely with the Interior Department, drew up a bill to accomplish the President's objective.

But conservatives were afraid the bill would allow the federal government, for the sake of the environment, to infringe on private ownership. House Republican leader John Rhodes and Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., arranged a private visit with the President and urged him to abandon the Udall bill.

Although the bill simply codified his own proposals, Nixon accepted the suggestion of the two powerful conservatives. Steiger helpfully provided a weakened substitute bill, which the President quickly endorsed.

This killed the Udall bill. It was a victim, snorted Udall, of "Watergate politics." Agreed a staff member privy to the backstage maneuvering: "This was clearly a case of Nixon trying to shore up his conservative support."

The President has also shifted his stand against other consumer, environmental and social programs, which the conservatives despise. And he has showered them with other White House blessings.

☆ ☆ ☆

When Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., called from Paris to complain about a second-rate Air Force plane that had been provided to fly a congressional contingent home from Europe, the White House hastily dispatched Vice President Gerald Ford's plane across the Atlantic to pick up the Sparkman group.

Another time, the President gave Sparkman, and Sen. James Allen, R-Ala., a lift home from Alabama and provided them with limousines at the airport. And Vice President Ford gave Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, a ride to Hawaii last month.

Few members of Congress used to get in to see the President when the German shepherd dogs, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, were guarding the door. Liberals are still excluded except on ceremonial occasions. For example, Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., hasn't been inside the White House since the late President Lyndon Johnson occupied the place, and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., couldn't even get an official list of Cabinet members from the White House for an inquiring student.

But the doors have been thrown open to the conservatives, such as Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Pete V. Domenici, R-N.Mex., James Eastland, D-Miss., and Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., whose names are on a list of 34 to 39 hard-core conservatives whose vote the President needs to save himself from removal.

Sen. Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, and Russell Long, D-La., were invited to a private breakfast ostensibly to discuss trade with the President a couple of weeks ago. Earlier, the President played the piano at a birthday party for Bennett and Long was granted a 90-minute audience with the President.

Sen. James Buckley, the New York conservative, had dinner at the White House 10 days before he asked Nixon to resign. He hasn't been invited back.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, admitted to us that his requests "were put on the back burner" in the Haldeman-Ehrlichman days. But this year "things have opened up," he said, and White House aides "are more receptive to my inquiries."

A spokesman for conservative Sen. J. Bennett Johnson, D-La., put it even more candidly. "The White House is wooing Johnson. Nixon has been doing favors for Southern senators . . . (for) anyone who's a swing vote on impeachment."

Footnote: A White House spokesman denied that the President's environmental shift had anything to do with impeachment politics. The President simply is trying to safeguard the environment and, at the same time, to provide an adequate energy supply, said the spokesman. He claimed that the President accepted the substitute land-use bill "because it was a better bill."

When Will The Finish Be?

Lincoln, Neb.

I am as full of civic pride and good will as the next fellow, and as approving and willing to pay my share toward local betterment, which includes good streets. I have uncomplainingly driven through and under and over and around our downtown transportation routes for a long time now, but frankly, am getting just a little tired of the mess.

There doesn't seem to be any progress, from a harried driver's point of view. When may we expect completion — or termination?

Questions Reviewing Policy

Lincoln, Neb.

Many Lincolnites who attended the John G. Neihardt Memorial Concert May 17 at First Plymouth Congregational Church felt that because of the nature and magnitude of this musical event, a review in both Lincoln papers would heve been apropos.

The presence of Madame Marie-Madeleine Durufle, internationally acclaimed concert organist as well as wife of the composer of the REQUIEM, plus the excellent performance by the Abendmusik Chrous, soloists and orchestra, easily ranked this as one of the major concerts of this season. It was indeed worthy of a review in The Star.

I question The Star's editorial policy regarding the review of concerts. This policy seems to be based either on "whim" or "politics." I submit that The Star's policies be reviewed and made known to the Lincoln concert audiences and performers.

A MUSIC LOVER

Editor's note: The Star tries to review the most important local musical events, with emphasis on major local groups and artists, but restrictions of either space or staff on any given date also affect judgments on individual concerts. The latter restrictions prevented a review of Madame Durufle's concert; certainly she is widely known, although perhaps not so widely as the best-known, vocal and instrumental artists.

Building Good Citizenship

Deshler, Neb.

From May 20-22, I, like 60 other youth across Nebraska, had the privilege of attending the first Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation Citizenship Seminar at the Center for Continuing Education-Youth Hall in Lincoln.

One of the highlights for me was the workshop on heritage which was conducted by Dr. Robert Manley in which we dug into our pasts and learned more about our ancestors.

Another highlight was Karl Kiilsholm's talk on "Thoughts of an Immigrant." Kiilsholm was born in America, moved to Denmark with his father after the death of his mother, and later came back to America. Kiilsholm told us that he always carries his citizenship papers with him wherever he goes. To me this shows that he is proud to be an American.

Everything at the seminar was informative and worthwhile. John Klinker, president of NFBF, explained Farm Bureau's policies and philosophy. Ken Cheatham spoke on the responsibilities of young people. Robert Thompson, secretary-treasurer of NFBF, explained some things about government. We then toured the capital and Vincent D. Brown, clerk of the Legislature, further explained how our Unicameral works. One evening Roger Welsch conducted a program on folk songs and folklore.

I hope the NFBF will continue to sponsor this citizenship seminar as I feel I benefitted from it greatly and I hope that in the future others can have the same opportunity.

"Here's The Scenario. You Go In There, Blow Yourself Up, And Split The Whole Place Down The Middle"

Learning Can Be Exciting

The Year of the Arts in the Lincoln public school system has come to an end and Superintendent of Schools John Prasch has said that "it has been a great year, an impressive involvement of a community and its school system in a broad spectrum of art forms . . .

"The students of Lincoln will be influenced for years to come by the efforts that were begun in the Year of the Arts . . ."

And now that this special year of emphasis on the arts has become but a memory, it is time to look to another similar episode. As successful as the year was, it will undoubtedly be repeated some time in the future.

But the concept is one that need not be limited to the arts. To us, there is something in this kind of thing that ought to be more of a part of education more of the time than it is.

What we see here is a kind of bringing to life of the art of learning, a making of something into an integral part of one's life. Rather than a boring exposure to the facts, the students come to understand something by actually experiencing it.

The students, in a sense, live the subject matter that has been designated and there are no limits to this sort of thing. Why not a year of the philosophers, a year of economics, a year of Europe or the Middle East or a year of just about any subject that might be mentioned?

The beauty of the thing is that, like the Year of the Arts, the subject can be taken out of the standard classroom structure and made to have a kind of appeal and timeliness that ought to greatly stimulate the learning process. And that gets to the heart of one of education's major problems — the motivation of students.

The innovations of the Year of the Arts and others that could be devised could bring to life for students a host of areas of national and international significance. The possibilities, it seems to us, are endless and it would be a shame if the success of the Year of the Arts did not carry us into further such adventures.

Medical Care Indiscriminate?

Recently, a family called on an outpatient basis at one of Lincoln's hospitals, because their regular doctor was out of town. The problem involved a young daughter with persistent pain in the abdominal region.

The net results of this were x-rays of the back, a $52 bill from the hospital and a $20 bill from the "reading" radiologists. That is what you would call in the slang of the day a "rip off."

Knowing little else to do, the emergency room physician ordered x-rays, despite the fact that the back was not the area of pain. And seeing nothing wrong with the x-rays, he routinely sent them on to the "experts" to read.

No relief was given to the patient. In later contact with the family physician, the problem was correctly diagnosed as an inflammation of muscle lining and prompt relief was obtained through proper medication.

Only several days after the hospital visit, the family received a nasty billing for the emergency room use, with an insulting heavy-handed statement as to when the bill had to be paid.

The whole thing was simply badly bungled and gave the practice of medicine one more black eye. This is the kind of thing that cries out for far more discretion than was used at every step along the way.

It is the kind of "taking to the cleaners" that pushes people in their thinking onto the side of national health insurance and greater control over the health care delivery system. When the technology and wisdom of medicine is needed, it is wanted and one is more than willing to pay for it, but this is not the first time that the system has resorted to ridiculous overkill.

It is time the profession did something about this and time the hospitals started treating people as human beings, not as crooks, and as average wage earners rather than millionaires.

Butz Snug With Nixon Backers

Secy. of Agriculture Earl Butz is probably the most intensely partisan cabinet-level official Washington has seen in some time. Looking at him — cocky, garrulous, personable, loyal to a fault and somewhat of a huckster — as he campaigned for President Nixon's re-election in 1972 and in behalf of Nixon's survival now, one gets the picture of a candidate for county sheriff or legislature or Congress rather than an administrator of a federal department.

Butz will not deny that picture. He has indicated he likes the image of a fighting partisan in the trenches.

Furthermore, Butz not only practices the "politics of impeachment" that Jack Anderson talks about elsewhere on this page today, but is one who will openly admit to it. At least there is something refreshing about that.

In a New York Times interview this week, Butz said he was indebted to the President and believes in him. As to the Department of Agriculture's relations with Congress, Butz said, "I make assessments myself as to who our friends are on the hill. I do not go out of my way to favor those who are against us." As for congressmen who support Nixon against impeachment, it's different: "I find myself playing pretty closely with some of these people . . . who believe in the presidency," said Butz.

One of the many unhappy consequences of Watergate is that the administration is shaping policy and legislative proposals to blunt impeachment rather than shaping them according to other, more important, criteria.

But it shouldn't surprise anyone. It is natural to try to survive. And it should be expected of an administration which has done it so often before to use whatever executive power that remains for political ends.

Charisma Over Talent

WASHINGTON — While the defeat of Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright in Arkansas' May 28 Democratic primary has cheered many of my conservative colleagues (who still have Vietnam on the brain), the whole affair also has its unfortunate dimensions.

American politics has not been kind to Senators who made their mark protesting U.S. war involvement, and the junior Senator from Arkansas is hardly the first Senator in the front rank of foreign policy debate to be knocked off in a homestate primary.

Three of the great isolationist Senators of the New Deal Era suffered a kindred fate. Wisconsin's Robert LaFollette, Jr. was toppled in 1946 by a young marine who ran (with some exaggeration) as "Tail-gunner Joe"; Nebraska's George Norris lost his 1942 primary to an Omaha Ford dealer. And Burton K. Wheeler was defeated in Montana's 1946 Democratic primary by a relative lightweight.

For the most part, these men are remembered with much more respect than the men who beat them. And I suspect this will also be true of future assessments of the scholarly Fulbright versus the likeable cliche-vendor who unhorsed him. Arkansas Gov Dale Bumpers.

Whether or not one agrees with Fulbright, the fact that such men can be removed from U.S. politics by homestate mediocrities reflects a considerable weakness in our system. Senators who spend enough time in Washington to develop an expertise in a complex technical field often lose their grassroots touch, and they become vulnerable to defeat on local issues. I do not agree with the system of selecting Committee Chairmen by seniority, but a merit arrangement would also have the defect of subjecting chairmen to the Bumperses of U.S. politics. If a man can become a Senate or House Committee chairman through selection by his party on the basis of skill and knowledge, then there ought to be a way to see that he can be kept in Washington.

Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.)

Towards this end, my own inclination would be to move in the direction of the British system wherein Members of Parliament do not usually reside in the district they represent. National party organizations slate candidates for local constituencies. Thus, the British parties are able to make fuller use of national talent.

When a Fulbright-like situation arose in Britain ten years ago, the outcome was quite different. In the 1964 election, the Labor Party's foreign policy expert, Patrick Gordon Walker, was defeated in his longtime constituency. Like Fulbright, he had been attacked for being too aloof, for living far away in London's affluent Hamstead Garden suburb, and for consorting with intellectuals rather than with the working-class electorate of Smothwick. But after Walker's defeat, his career was not over. His party ran him in another district, and although he lost in 1965, he returned to Parliament in 1966.

If the U.S. Congress is to grasp the technical challenges of the 20th Century, it must be able to count on skilled leaders. And this will be difficult so long as the politics of localism continue to prevail. Good local politicians — people good at pressing the flesh, building the post-offices and getting re-elected to Congress — are rarely men capble of great policy expertise.

The idea that a Dale Bumpers, whose stock in trade is a homely name and a sincere smile, is already being touted as a possible national Democratic candidate in 1976 strikes me as mind-boggling.

Yet similar qualifications — a homely name and a nice smile — appear to be the principal reasons why CBS has slated Roger Mudd as the eventual replacement for Walter Cronkite.

If talent has become unimportant, then the American people must blame themselves for the mess in Washington.

Derry: In The Name Of A Cause

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland — One day recently a British officer looked over reports of the previous night's action in Derry and snorted: "three shootings in the Creggan — peanuts!" It does not take much exposure to the unending violence of Northern Ireland to make three random shots in the night seem like peanuts.

The next night, for instance, in Derry, there were numerous attacks on army posts. Two gunmen were shot and captured; another was shot and escaped; a British soldier took a slug in the leg; and a British patrol, chasing a gunman, was surrounded by a crowd and had to use gas and rubber bullets in order to withdraw. So it goes in Derry.

This is a heavily Catholic city — 70 per cent of the population west of the River Foyle — which makes it unlike most of Northern Ireland, where protestants are a two-to-one majority. The Creggan is a hilltop Catholic housing area overlooking the Bogside, the low-lying Catholic population center of Derry (which the Irish have been reluctant for centuries to call Londonderry).

Once barricaded and proclaimed "Free Derry" by the Irish Republican Army, until British troops moved in on July 31, 1972 (a date Derrymen never forget), the area is still an I.R.A. stronghold in which no member of the largely protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary has dared set foot for five years.

Since Derry is so heavily Catholic, most of the fighting here is not between Catholics and protestants but between the Provisional I.R.A. (The terrorist provos) and the hated "Brits" — a Bogside grafitto reads: "Lizzie, call your pigs home" — sometimes it is particularly nasty fighting. This is where British fire killed 13 Irish on bloody Sunday; and the British tell of one form of "aggro" — aggravating the British — in which a group of playing children suddenly drop to the ground while the provos fire over them. Then the children stand up to prevent return fire.

For Americans, that brings back grim memories of Vietnam, where children could be lethal, too. Here, not a few teenagers carry guns and use them, and youngsters under 10 routinely stone passing British vehicles. In fact, the British and official I.R.A. agree — if on little else — that the terrorist provos are mostly "kids," and not too many of them at that.

As in Vietnam, however, a terrorist cannot be easily spotted in the crowd. Here, too, there is a nearby border, largely unguarded, which provides relatively safe haven (only two miles west of Derry). Booby traps are prevalent and a favorite provo tactic is to phone in a bomb report to the British — having first thoroughly booby-trapped the area to be searched. Not to carry the Vietnam parallel too far, Prime Minister Harold Wilson was heard to speak recently of winning "the hearts and minds of the people" of Northern Ireland and a British officer in Belfast conceded ruefully that "an acceptable level of violence" was all that could be hoped-for.

Bombing has become the favorite provo tactic here, despite the usual nightly shootings. Practically impossible to stop is fire-bombing, often by women who conceal the ingredients of a small incendiary device under their clothes, assemble the thing once they're in a shop or building, and hide it to go off at night.

The provos have a new technique of "proxy car-bombing" in which they hijack a car or truck, conceal a bomb in it, and force the driver to take it to a certain point under threat of murdering his or her family, or of setting off the bomb by remote control while the driver is still in the vehicle. When the British stop what they think may be a "proxy car bomb," they make the driver sit in it — while the bomb, if any, ticks away — until he talks.

The British government compensates property-owners for bomb damage — nearly $17 million so far — and the provos apparently hope to make it just too expensive for the "Brits" to stick it out in Northern Ireland. So, in the commercial center, bombed-out, burned and boarded buildings stand out like gap teeth in every block; in the Creggan and the Bogside, bullet holes are as commonplace as window-panes in cottages, schoolhouses, shops.

In the last three years, more than 5,200 homes have been destroyed or damaged in Derry, 124 business premises destroyed, more than 1,800 damaged. Life goes on here by the River Foyle, but so does the violence — all in the name of a cause, but to what end no rational man can say.

"ALL THOSE WISHING TO MAKE A 'DECISION FOR NIXON' WILL PLEASE COME FORWARD..."

JACK ANDERSON

Courting The Jury

WASHINGTON — White House aides have taken pains to remind members of Congress that they are sitting on the impeachment jury and, therefore, that it is improper for them to discuss the case against President Nixon.

It would seem to be even more improper, however, for Nixon as the defendant to court members of the jury. Yet he has taken key senators and representatives on dinner cruises down the Potomac. He has made White House planes, limousines and other privileges available to them. He has pampered them with sudden attention.

The President is even tailoring his legislative program, at least in part, to appeal to the conservatives whose votes he is counting upon to keep him in office. The politics of impeachment, rather than the merits of the legislation, now seems to determine what bills he will support.

For example, the President had halted the construction of a cross-Florida barge canal to preserve the beauty of northern Florida's Oklawaha River. As recently as six weeks ago, the White House reassured Florida conservationists of the President's support.

But the promises were forgotten after a contingent of conservative congressmen called upon the White House to go ahead with the barge canal. The President hastily withdrew his opposition.

The same thing happened to a federal land-use bill, which the President had described as his "number one environmental priority" in his State of the Union message last January. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., working closely with the Interior Department, drew up a bill to accomplish the President's objective.

But conservatives were afraid the bill would allow the federal government, for the sake of the environment, to infringe on private ownership. House Republican leader John Rhodes and Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., arranged a private visit with the President and urged him to abandon the Udall bill.

Although the bill simply codified his own proposals, Nixon accepted the suggestion of the two powerful conservatives. Steiger helpfully provided a weakened substitute bill, which the President quickly endorsed.

This killed the Udall bill. It was a victim, snorted Udall, of "Watergate politics." Agreed a staff member privy to the backstage maneuvering: "This was clearly a case of Nixon trying to shore up his conservative support."

The President has also shifted his stand against other consumer, environmental and social programs, which the conservatives despise. And he has showered them with other White House blessings.

☆ ☆ ☆

When Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., called from Paris to complain about a second-rate Air Force plane that had been provided to fly a congressional contingent home from Europe, the White House hastily dispatched Vice President Gerald Ford's plane across the Atlantic to pick up the Sparkman group.

Another time, the President gave Sparkman, and Sen. James Allen, R-Ala., a lift home from Alabama and provided them with limousines at the airport. And Vice President Ford gave Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, a ride to Hawaii last month.

Few members of Congress used to get in to see the President when the German shepherd dogs, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, were guarding the door. Liberals are still excluded except on ceremonial occasions. For example, Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., hasn't been inside the White House since the late President Lyndon Johnson occupied the place, and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., couldn't even get an official list of Cabinet members from the White House for an inquiring student.

But the doors have been thrown open to the conservatives, such as Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Pete V. Domenici, R-N.Mex., James Eastland, D-Miss., and Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., whose names are on a list of 34 to 39 hard-core conservatives whose vote the President needs to save himself from removal.

Sen. Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, and Russell Long, D-La., were invited to a private breakfast ostensibly to discuss trade with the President a couple of weeks ago. Earlier, the President played the piano at a birthday party for Bennett and Long was granted a 90-minute audience with the President.

Sen. James Buckley, the New York conservative, had dinner at the White House 10 days before he asked Nixon to resign. He hasn't been invited back.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, admitted to us that his requests "were put on the back burner" in the Haldeman-Ehrlichman days. But this year "things have opened up," he said, and White House aides "are more receptive to my inquiries."

A spokesman for conservative Sen. J. Bennett Johnson, D-La., put it even more candidly. "The White House is wooing Johnson. Nixon has been doing favors for Southern senators . . . (for) anyone who's a swing vote on impeachment."

Footnote: A White House spokesman denied that the President's environmental shift had anything to do with impeachment politics. The President simply is trying to safeguard the environment and, at the same time, to provide an adequate energy supply, said the spokesman. He claimed that the President accepted the substitute land-use bill "because it was a better bill."

When Will The Finish Be?

Lincoln, Neb.

I am as full of civic pride and good will as the next fellow, and as approving and willing to pay my share toward local betterment, which includes good streets. I have uncomplainingly driven through and under and over and around our downtown transportation routes for a long time now, but frankly, am getting just a little tired of the mess.

There doesn't seem to be any progress, from a harried driver's point of view. When may we expect completion — or termination?

Questions Reviewing Policy

Lincoln, Neb.

Many Lincolnites who attended the John G. Neihardt Memorial Concert May 17 at First Plymouth Congregational Church felt that because of the nature and magnitude of this musical event, a review in both Lincoln papers would heve been apropos.

The presence of Madame Marie-Madeleine Durufle, internationally acclaimed concert organist as well as wife of the composer of the REQUIEM, plus the excellent performance by the Abendmusik Chrous, soloists and orchestra, easily ranked this as one of the major concerts of this season. It was indeed worthy of a review in The Star.

I question The Star's editorial policy regarding the review of concerts. This policy seems to be based either on "whim" or "politics." I submit that The Star's policies be reviewed and made known to the Lincoln concert audiences and performers.

A MUSIC LOVER

Editor's note: The Star tries to review the most important local musical events, with emphasis on major local groups and artists, but restrictions of either space or staff on any given date also affect judgments on individual concerts. The latter restrictions prevented a review of Madame Durufle concert; certainly she is widely known, although perhaps not so widely as the best-known, vocal and instrumental artists.

Building Good Citizenship

Deshler, Neb.

From May 20-22, I, like 60 other youth across Nebraska, had the privilege of attending the first Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation Citizenship Seminar at the Center for Continuing Education-Youth Hall in Lincoln.

One of the highlights for me was the workshop on heritage which was conducted by Dr. Robert Manley in which we dug into our pasts and learned more about our ancestors.

Another highlight was Karl Kiilsholm's talk on "Thoughts of an Immigrant." Kiilsholm was born in America, moved to Denmark with his father after the death of his mother, and later came back to America. Kiilsholm told us that he always carries his citizenship papers with him wherever he goes. To me this shows that he is proud to be an American.

Everything at the seminar was informative and worthwhile. John Klinker, president of NFBF, explained Farm Bureau's policies and philosophy. Ken Cheatham spoke on the responsibilities of young people. Robert Thompson, secretary-treasurer of NFBF, explained some things about government. We then toured the capital and Vincent D. Brown, clerk of the Legislature, further explained how our Unicameral works. One evening Roger Welsch conducted a program on folk songs and folklore.

I hope the NFBF will continue to sponsor this citizenship seminar as I feel I benefitted from it greatly and I hope that in the future others can have the same opportunity.

Cairo Is First On Nixon Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House formally announced Presdent Nixon's June 12-18 swing through five Middle East countries Tuesday, pledging to build on the success of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's peace missions.

The journey to Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Israel and Jordan will "ratify the new environment that now exists in the area" said spokesman Gerald L. Warren in outlining plans for the most extensive Middle East tour ever undertaken by a U.S. President.

"It will afford an opportunity at the highest level for each of the parties involved to consolidate what has been achieved on the road to peace," Warren added.

The spokesman said Nixon will leave Washington next Monday, arriving that night in Salzburg, Austria, where he will rest until Wednesday, June 12.

Then he sets out for the Middle East with this schedule: Egypt June 12-14, Saudi Arabia June 14-15, Syria June 15-16, Israel June 16-17 and Jordan June 17-18.

The itinerary — with Nixon going to Cairo first and staying there longer than any other capital — underscored the importance the United States is placing on improved ties with the government of President Anwar Sadat.

Nixon's talks with Sadat are expected to range over U.S. plans for economic aid to Egypt and on bolstered commercial and cultural ties.

And, another indication of warming U.S.-Arab relations, Syria's foreign minister said Tuesday he expected diplomatic ties between Washington and Damascus to be "resumed very shortly" after a seven-year break.

Warren and other White House officials would not provide a specific agenda for Nixon's talks with Arab and Israeli leaders.

Nixon will head back for the United States on June 18 for about a week of rest prior to his departure for Moscow and summit talks scheduled to begin June 27.

Northern Cheyenne Can Sue Coal Firms

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton has made a decision that allowed the Northern Cheyenne Indians of southern Montana to sue coal companies to renegotiate leases on coal rich lands of the Northern Cheyenne reservation, an Interior Department official said Tuesday.

James Cannon, area director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said the Morton decision appears to be a partial victory for the Cheyennes.

The Indians asked Morton to void leases on coal lands for 240,000 acres of the reservation.

Cannon said Morton's decision allows the Cheyennes to sue coal companies with Interior Department backing in their lawsuits.

Cannon said the effect of Morton's complicated decision is not to immedately cancel the coal leases. "It does put them in the deep freeze for awhile," he said.

Rep. John Melcher, D-Mont., had announced last month that the Interior Department planned to declare invalid coal leases held by Peabody Coal Co. and other companies.

Chevron Oil Co. leases also have been challenged by the Cheyennes.

Peabody has announced plans to begin a $700 million coal related project on the Cheyenne reservation. The company has announced plans to mine 500 million tons of Cheyenne coal for a proposed complex to contain as many as four coal gasification plants.

The Cheyennes have challenged the leases, saying the BIA did not follow regulations in granting them and contending the tribe was not getting enough money for the coal.

Kissinger Says $100 Million's Purpose Is To Rebuild Town

By The Associated Press

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger revealed Tuesday that $100 million sought as part of a Middle East aid package was for reconstruction of a war-ravaged Syrian town in the Golan heights.

Kissinger told the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington that no commitments were "either implied or expressed" to Syria during his 34-day peace mission to the Middle East.

A total of $900 million in aid is sought for Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Israel in the administration-backed measure. The $100 million had been listed as a special fund to "reinforce the peace process," but Kissinger linked the money to Syrian reconstruction for the first time Tuesday.

Quneitra, a provincial capital in occupied Syria, suffered devastation in both the 1967 and 1973 Mideast fighting. Only a handful of residents now live there.

Meanwhile, Israeli security forces claimed police averted another terrorist attack Tuesday by capturing two Arab guerrillas who were on their way to "make a slaughter."

The pair, both 19, slipped across the border from Lebanon armed with guns, grenades and explosives and then hid their weapons while they reconnoitered the area, police said. They were caught at a roadblock riding in an Israeli taxi.

Israeli frontier forces have been on high alert for terrorists since May 15 when three Arabs took over a school at Maalot and 22 children died after troops stormed the building in a rescue attempt.

In Jerusalem, new Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin took over the desk of retiring Premier Golda Meir and called his first cabinet meeting with newspapers predicting trouble from more hard-line opponents.

In Syria, Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam announced President Nixon would include Damascus on his Middle East tour and predicted that U.S.-Syrian diplomatic relations would be restored "very soon." The relations were broken off during the 1967 war when the Arabs charged the United States with aiding Israel.

The full schedule for President Nixon's tour was given by the White House as follows: June 12-14 Egypt, June 14-15 Saudi Arabia, June 15-16 Syria, June 16-17 Israel, and June 17-18 Jordan.

Khaddam told a group of touring American newsmen that Nixon's talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad "are bound to be rewarding."

Asked if Syria is doing anything to prevent Palestinian guerrilla activity against Israel, Khaddam replied:

"I assure you no Arab government is capable of preventing the Palestinians from struggling to restore their legitimate rights no matter what guarantees may be given to Israel by other nations."

This appeared to be a reference to American assurances to Israel of support for any reprisals to guerrilla attacks.

Following capture of the two young Arabs in Israel, the state radio quoted them Tuesday as saying they were "ordered to kill" and to "make a slaughter" by firing at random on civilians in the Mediterranean resort of Nahariya or the port city of Haifa.

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton has made a decision that allowed the Northern Cheyenne Indians of southern Montana to sue coal companies to renegotiate leases on coal rich lands of the Northern Cheyenne reservation, an Interior Department official said Tuesday.

James Cannon, area director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said the Morton decision appears to be a partial victory for the Cheyennes.

The Indians asked Morton to void leases on coal lands for 240,000 acres of the reservation.

Cannon said Morton's decision allows the Cheyennes to sue coal companies with Interior Department backing in their lawsuits.

Cannon said the effect of Morton's complicated decision is not to immedately cancel the coal leases. "It does put them in the deep freeze for awhile," he said.

Rep. John Melcher, D-Mont., had announced last month that the Interior Department planned to declare invalid coal leases held by Peabody Coal Co. and other companies.

Chevron Oil Co. leases also have been challenged by the Cheyennes.

Peabody has announced plans to begin a $700 million coal related project on the Cheyenne reservation. The company has announced plans to mine 500 million tons of Cheyenne coal for a proposed complex to contain as many as four coal gasification plants.

The Cheyennes have challenged the leases, saying the BIA did not follow regulations in granting them and contending the tribe was not getting enough money for the coal.

Kissinger Says $100 Million's Purpose Is To Rebuild Town

By The Associated Press

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger revealed Tuesday that $100 million sought as part of a Middle East aid package was for reconstruction of a war-ravaged Syrian town in the Golan heights.

Kissinger told the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington that no commitments were "either implied or expressed" to Syria during his 34-day peace mission to the Middle East.

A total of $900 million in aid is sought for Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Israel in the administration-backed measure. The $100 million had been listed as a special fund to "reinforce the peace process," but Kissinger linked the money to Syrian reconstruction for the first time Tuesday.

Quneitra, a provincial capital in occupied Syria, suffered devastation in both the 1967 and 1973 Mideast fighting. Only a handful of residents now live there.

Meanwhile, Israeli security forces claimed police averted another terrorist attack Tuesday by capturing two Arab guerrillas who were on their way to "make a slaughter."

The pair, both 19, slipped across the border from Lebanon armed with guns, grenades and explosives and then hid their weapons while they reconnoitered the area, police said. They were caught at a roadblock riding in an Israeli taxi.

Israeli frontier forces have been on high alert for terrorists since May 15 when three Arabs took over a school at Maalot and 22 children died after troops stormed the building in a rescue attempt.

In Jerusalem, new Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin took over the desk of retiring Premier Golda Meir and called his first cabinet meeting with newspapers predicting trouble from more hard-line opponents.

In Syria, Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam announced President Nixon would include Damascus on his Middle East tour and predicted that U.S.-Syrian diplomatic relations would be restored "very soon." The rela[illegible]re broken off during t[illegible] war when the Arabs charged the United States with aiding Israel.

The full schedule for President Nixon's tour was given by the White House as follows: June 12-14 Egypt, June 14-15 Saudi Arabia, June 15-16 Syria, June 16-17 Israel, and June 17-18 Jordan.

Khaddam told a group of touring American newsmen that Nixon's talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad "are bound to be rewarding."

Asked if Syria is doing anything to prevent Palestinian guerrilla activity against Israel, Khaddam replied:

"I assure you no Arab government is capable of preventing the Palestinians from struggling to restore their legitimate rights no matter what guarantees may be given to Israel by other nations."

This appeared to be a reference to American assurances to Israel of support for any reprisals to guerrilla attacks.

Following capture of the two young Arabs in Israel, the state radio quoted them Tuesday as saying they were "ordered to kill" and to "make a slaughter" by firing at random on civilians in the Mediterranean resort of Nahariya or the port city of Haifa.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Sunny and cheerful weekends around the scatter. The moppet said: "Can I have some friends to stay overnight?"

I said: "Why not? I'll have one more martini. Then we'll eat."

It's Daylight Saving that makes me take on rash decisions. I don't want to have dinner until it gets dark and one martini leads to another. In winter I'm perfectly normal.

When you bring in one house guest, you have to "ask Nancy too or she'll be hurt."

The living room is wall-to-wall house guests. Tucked in their sleeping bags, the TV mumbling softly through the sleepy night.

☆ ☆ ☆

At 6 a.m. they rose little by little and fixed breakfast. They said: "The eggs are burning!"

I came out of bed like a fireman. I turned down the stove heat which was on "high". I opened the doors and windows. Smoke poured out of the house.

They said: "Now that you're up, could you fix the eggs? These are burned."

Sunday morning at Snug Harbor. The chef has risen.

☆ ☆ ☆

I said: "Wash the dishes, hear? This is the butler's day off." They said: "We will. Just as soon as the TV gets a commercial."

I made the eggs. I fixed myself a little coffee. I got the paper.

They said: "Can we have more eggs?"

I said: "The eggs are 86 -- out. You burned six. I made six. That's the dozen. Eat cereal."

They said: "Can you get it down from the shelf? It's too high up."

☆ ☆ ☆

I said: "I'm trying to read the paper. Do you realize it's Sunday? And only 8 o'clock?"

They said: "Eight o'clock? We'll be late for Sunday school."

I said: "Nobody said anything about Sunday school to me. How are you getting there, pray tell?"

They said: "Could you drive us?"

I said: "The chauffeur just quit."

A lady phoned and asked for one of the house guests. The guest talked and got off the line.

She said: "My mother says I have a music lesson."

I said: "And I'm to drive you to it, right?"

She said: "That's right."

Another call came for another guest. She said: "My mother says I have to babysit my little sister." She said: "But you don't have to drive me. She can bring my sister over here."

I said: "How old is she? What happens when you go to Sunday school?"

She said: "She's three. You could babysit her until we get home."

☆ ☆ ☆

I said: "The maid has the weekend off. When are you going to do those blasted dishes?"

They said: "We have to get dressed for church. We'll do them when we get back."

The doorbell rang. The three-year-old sister arrived. She looked like a destroyer. She went over to the table and picked up my glasses.

I said: "Put those down!"

They said: "We've got a ride to church. But you have to pick us up afterwards."

They left me with the three-year-old who was trying to pull the tail off the cat. I put the dishes in the dishwasher and turned it on — thump, thump.

I poured a small drink. I said to the child: "Here's looking at you. And I mean every minute. So watch out."

Sheldon Receives $7,000 For Crafts Work Collection

The Charles E. Merrill Trust has presented the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln a $7,000 grant

The grant will be used by the Sheldon Gallery to purchase ceramics, glass, tapestry, and works of wood and metal, according to Norman A. Geske, director of the art gallery.

David A. Thomas, administrator for the Merrill Trust of Ithaca, N.Y., said the purpose of the grant would be to help the Sheldon Gallery "build a first-rate collection of crafts work." The grant stipulates that crafts work purchased with funds from the grant must be the work of living and still productive artists, must be purchased within one year, and no single work may cost more than $1,000 (although the gallery may add up to $500 from its own funds for any purchase if it so desires).

The Sheldon Gallery was one of seven institutions throughout the United States which received similar grants from the Merrill Trust.

The nationwide Safeway Stores were established by Charles E. Merrill during the 1920's.

North Marianas May Be Second U.S. Commonwealth

Saipan, Mariana Islands (UPI) — A question of jurisdiction over public lands seems to be the only issue keeping the Northern Mariana Islands from becoming the second Commonwealth of the United States.

The first is the Caribbean Island of Puerto Rico, and now talks aimed at getting the same status are under way in Saipan, capital of the Northern Marianas and a Pacific Trust Territory.

Ambassador Franklin H. Williams is President Nixon's personal envoy at the talks with the Marianas Status Committee headed by Saipan Congressman Edward Pangilinan.

Chain Of Islands

The Northern Marianas are a chain of islands running from Guam at the extreme southern end, which is a separate entity, to the island of Maug, only 300 miles from Japan.

Williams and Pangilinan say they are hopeful a draft covenant will result from the current talks, possibly by the end of May. Sources close to the talks say a draft already exists and only the question of public lands ownership remains to be settled.

Historically, public lands have been in the domain of the American federal government but the Saipan delegation contends the local government must have complete jurisdiction over all public lands.

Last year, the United States said it would require Tinian Island for the military and relocate the 600 people in its only village. The announcement caused a furor in Tinian, Saipan and even Guam, 113 miles south.

Military Bastion

Williams backtracked, saying the picturesque village of San Jose would not be moved after all. It is believed here that the United States has now asked for two-thirds of the island for a joint Air Force-Navy military bastion.

It was from Tinian that the "Enola Gay" took off from in 1945 to drop the first atomic bomb on Japan, settign the stage for the end of World War II. Now the people subsist generally off the land and sea.

Rota, another island, has a population of about 3,000 and is only about 40 miles from Guam. It is the agricultural heart of the Mariana chain and most of its farmers have contracts with the U.S. military in Guam to provide fresh produce for commissaries and mess halls.

The island of Pagan has about 50 inhabitants. It is on the same parallel with Hawaii and has the same climate. Of volcanic origin, Pagan has black sand beaches and boasts natural hot springs. There is a 3,000-food aircraft runway but no docking facilities.

Life Sophisticated

Life on Saipan is becoming more sophisticated. Three tourist hotels operate at 85% occupancy year around with Japanese tourists and the island's 13,000 people have television, nightclubs and movie houses.

From Pagan to Guam, 350 miles south, the people speak the same language, Chamorro; they are of the same religion, Catholic; they have the same customs.

Guam is close, but residents of the trust territory may not enter Guam for the purpose of employment — nor may Guamanians, who are Americans, enter the trust territory. For all intents and purposes, the U.S. Immigration Service considers Marianas residents aliens, and the Marianas consider Americans aliens.

A change in this situation, long awaited by people of both sides, is expected to come once the Northern Marianas become a Commonwealth.

After the Spanish-American War in 1898, Spain ceded Guam, then the capital of the Marianas, to the United States but gave the other islands to Germany.

After World War I, Japan got the Northern Marianas, again as the spoils of war. The United States held on to Guam.

Then came the end of World War II and the Marianas, named for Queen Marianna of Spain, became a United Nations Trust Territory assigned to the United States.

Man Trapped In Mine Found Alive Day Later

BAUXITE, Ark. (AP) — A 57-year old man, trapped 500 feet underground in a bauxite mine Monday night, was found alive Tuesday by rescue workers. Another man trapped in the cave-in was still missing.

Rescue workers from the Reynolds Mining Co. found Sidney Hale of Little Rock alive and apparently in good condition. He was taken to a hospital for examination.

James Grooms of Bryant, trapped with Hale, had not been found by Tuesday afternoon.

The two men were trapped by a sand run, similar to a mud slide.

J.R. Krause, manager of Reynolds' mines in Arkansas, said two scoop trams were being used to haul the sand from one tunnel to another at the bottom of the 500-foot shaft.

Grooms and Hale were working in a chamber about eight feet high when they were trapped.

Going to move? Then notify the Circulation Dept. so you won't miss your jpaper. Be sure to give both old and new address.

Look At Amnesty Favored

Washington (UPI) — Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Tuesday moved well beyond the official Roman Catholic position and urged "serious consideration" of unconditional amnesty for Vietnam war opponents.

Rausch, also chief executive officer of the United States Catholic Conference, made his remark in the context of Pope Paul VI's recent proclamation of 1975 as a "holy year." In his proclamation, the Pope connected amnesty with the main theme of the holy year — reconciliation.

"It is appropriate that we, as Americans, examine our own need for reconciliation at this time," Bishop Rausch said.

In 1971 and 1972, the American Catholic hierarchy supported limited amnesty for selective conscientious objectors who refused to participate in the Vietnam war with the provision that they be willing to perform some kind of alternative service work.

"In view of the time which has elapsed since the bishops made their plea — a time during which many suffered under a cloud of doubt as to their status — I believe it is consistent with the policy they enunciated to suggest that the nation now give serious consideration to broad, unconditional amensty," Bishop Rausch said.

President Nixon has announced he is firmly opposed to any kind of amnesty for any Vietnam war resister although his priest-adviser, the Rev. John McLaughlin, has urged Nixon to establish a review board to consider individual cases.

Gunfire Kills Two Officials

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The minister of education and another high state official were killed by student gunfire Tuesday in a school building where they were being held hostage, Premier Long Boret said.

Riot police moved in on the building where high school students were holding the two officials, but Long Boret said the students had killed the two men before the police intervention and shooting started.

The premier said in a radio broadcast that a Communist element was involved in the killings, but he did not elaborate. He asked the Cambodian people to keep calm and preserve public order.

The government announced that three days of official mourning would be observed for Education Minister Keo Sangkim and Thach Chea, a former education minister who had been serving as special assistant to President Lon Nol.

The students had taken the two men hostage to enforce demands for the release of five fellow students arrested last week in a demonstration against living conditions in Cambodia.

Witnesses at the scene said when police moved on the building five students were injured by gunfire. A television cameraman inside the school compound said some men fired at the students, but officers came up and made them shoot into the air.

Long Boret said there were indications that both men had been tortured before they were killed.

Doctors at the 701st Millitary Hospital said Sangkim had been stabbed at least twice by a wooden stake, possibly a broken table leg, as well as shot in the chest.

At Monivong Hospital a dotor said Thach Chea was shot twice in the chest and had died soon after being carried into the hospital.

North Marianas May Be Second U.S. Commonwealth

Saipan, Mariana Islands (UPI) — A question of jurisdiction over public lands seems to be the only issue keeping the Northern Mariana Islands from becoming the second Commonwealth of the United States.

The first is the Caribbean Island of Puerto Rico, and now talks aimed at getting the same status are under way in Saipan, capital of the Northern Marianas and a Pacific Trust Territory.

Ambassador Franklin H. Williams is President Nixon's personal envoy at the talks with the Marianas Status Committee headed by Saipan Congressman Edward Pangilinan.

Chain Of Islands

The Northern Marianas are a chain of islands running from Guam at the extreme southern end, which is a separate entity, to the island of Maug, only 300 miles from Japan.

Williams and Pangilinan say they are hopeful a draft covenant will result from the current talks, possibly by the end of May. Sources close to the talks say a draft already exists and only the question of public lands ownership remains to be settled.

Historically, public lands have been in the domain of the American federal government but the Saipan delegation contends the local government must have complete jurisdiction over all public lands.

Last year, the United States said it would require Tinian Island for the military and relocate the 600 people in its only village. The announcement caused a furor in Tinian, Saipan and even Guam, 113 miles south.

Military Bastion

Williams backtracked, saying the picturesque village of San Jose would not be moved after all. It is believed here that the United States has now asked for two-thirds of the island for a joint Air Force-Navy military bastion.

It was from Tinian that the "Enola Gay" took off from in 1945 to drop the first atomic bomb on Japan, settign the stage for the end of World War II. Now the people subsist generally off the land and sea.

Rota, another island, has a population of about 3,000 and is only about 40 miles from Guam. It is the agricultural heart of the Mariana chain and most of its farmers have contracts with the U.S. military in Guam to provide fresh produce for commissaries and mess halls.

The island of Pagan has about 50 inhabitants. It is on the same parallel with Hawaii and has the same climate. Of volcanic origin, Pagan has black sand beaches and boasts natural hot springs. There is a 3,000-food aircraft runway but no docking facilities.

Life Sophisticated

Life on Saipan is becoming more sophisticated. Three tourist hotels operate at 85% occupancy year around with Japanese tourists and the island's 13,000 people have television, nightclubs and movie houses.

From Pagan to Guam, 350 miles south, the people speak the same language, Chamorro, they are of the same religion, Catholic; they have the same customs.

Guam is close, but residents of the trust territory may not enter Guam for the purpose of employment — nor may Guamanians, who are Americans, enter the trust territory. For all intents and purposes, the U.S. Immigration Service considers Marianas residents aliens, and the Marianas consider Americans aliens.

A change in this situation, long awaited by people of both sides, is expected to come once the Northern Marianas become a Commonwealth.

After the Spanish-American War in 1898, Spain ceded Guam, then the capital of the Marianas, to the United States but gave the other islands to Germany.

After World War I, Japan got the Northern Marianas, again as the spoils of war. The United States held on to Guam.

Then came the end of World War II and the Marianas, named for Queen Marianna of Spain, became a United Nations Trust Territory assigned to the United States.

Man Trapped In Mine Found Alive Day Later

BAUXITE, Ark. (AP) — A 57-year old man, trapped 500 feet underground in a bauxite mine Monday night, was found alive Tuesday by rescue workers. Another man trapped in the cave-in was still missing.

Rescue workers from the Reynolds Mining Co. found Sidney Hale of Little Rock alive and apparently in good condition. He was taken to a hospital for examination.

James Grooms of Bryant, trapped with Hale, had not been found by Tuesday afternoon.

The two men were trapped by a sand run, similar to a mud slide.

J.R. Krause, manager of Reynolds' mines in Arkansas, said two scoop trams were being used to haul the sand from one tunnel to another at the bottom of the 500-foot shaft

Grooms and Hale were working in a chamber about eight feet high when they were trapped

Look At Amnesty Favored

Washington (UPI) — Bishop James S Rausch, general secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Tuesday moved well beyond the official Roman Catholic position and urged "serious consideration" of unconditional amnesty for Vietnam war opponents

Rausch, also chief executive officer of the United States Catholic Conference, made his remark in the context of Pope Paul VI's recent proclamation of 1975 as a "holy year" In his proclamation, the Pope connected amnesty with the main theme of the holy year — reconciliation

"It is appropriate that we, as Americans, examine our own need for reconciliation at this time," Bishop Rausch said.

In 1971 and 1972, the American Catholic hierarchy supported limited amnesty for selective conscientious objectors who refused to participate in the Vietnam war with the provision that they be willing to perform some kind of alternative service work

"In view of the time which has elapsed since the bishops made their plea — a time during which many suffered under a cloud of doubt as to their status — I believe it is consistent with the policy they enunciated to suggest that the nation now give serious consideration to broad, unconditional amensty," Bishop Rausch said

LEISTRITZES . . . pose in front of their hay house in rural Cherry County.

Warm In Winter, Cool In Summer

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Kenneth Leistritz of rural Cherry County contends the type of house he lives in is "as good as a frame house as long as it's tight and solid" — which his certainly is.

"I wouldn't trade it for any house in town to live in," Joe Monhart of Arthur says of his. "It's warm and comfortable in wintertime, cool in summertime."

"There might be maybe four or five days in the summer when it's a little uncomfortable," concurs Leistritz.

The subject is baled-hay houses — an energy-saving invention mothered by Sandhills necessity and put to use by the original settlers of this spacious region long before everyone started talking about solar heating.

The two longtime Sandhills residents and their wives are among the handful of Nebraskans still dwelling in baled-hay houses. Both homes are attractively stuccoed, comfortably furnished, and by all appearances sturdy enough to outlast many a frame house half their age.

Quicker To Build

Quicker and easier to build, although never as plentiful as their better-known cousins the soddies, baled-hay houses were often built as homesteaders' shacks and occupied until a family could obtain the timber for a permanent frame structure — something that could take many years.

Once abandoned, they generally didn't weather well.

For one thing, the hay was obviously vulnerable to fire. And since the bales usually served as the building's structural framework bearing the weight of the roof, most of the structures began to settle and sag as years passed.

"You could tell the old ones," says Leistritz. "They looked like a sod house. You could see a hump over every window frame and every door frame."

The Leistritz and Monhart houses, however, are two that were built and maintained to last.

Built About 1911

The Leistritz house, built about 1911 as headquarters for the Fawn Lake Ranch, actually only uses hay for insulation. Vertical wooden studs supply the structural support.

The hay has remained in excellent condition, says Leistritz, who as manager of the sprawling 66,000-acre ranch has occupied the house with Mrs. Leistritz for about six years.

In fact, Leistritz says, when workmen paneled the interior of the house in 1957, "they took some of that hay out to put in some windows, and it was still good.

"They threw it over the fence and the horses ate it all," he says.

Thirty inches thick, the hay walls make for deep-set windows — with plenty of room for houseplants and knick-knacks on the sills.

Only A Tipoff

The deep windows are the only tipoff to the house's unusual composition. The external design is conventional, and the interior's wood-paneled walls and inlaid hardwood floors are beautiful and kept spotlessly clean.

The bunkhouse next door is also made of baled hay. Built in 1928, it houses five ranch hands and a color television set.

A luxury apartment on the second floor accommodates the ranch's owner, Mrs. Maxine Fiss of Rushville and Denver, when she drops in to spend the night once a year or so.

Winning election as county treasurer in 1934, Josef Monhart and his wife Winnie gave up his Bohemian parents' homestead southwest of Arthur in favor of "city life." They moved into Arthur to be nearer to their children's high school and bought Ed Martin's baled-hay house the next year.

Walls Restuccoed

They immediately had the 18-inch walls restuccoed, and eventually extended the reinforced basement and put in a concrete foundation ledge around the walls to help shore them up.

Now 49 years old, the house shows no sagging. The interior is immaculate and adorned with a profusion of house plants.

Monhart retired as county treasurer just four years ago at the age of 78. "I plan to live to 100," he says, and he figures the house will still be around, too.

Just two blocks from the Monhart house is a baled-hay church built by the Pilgrim Holiness congregation in 1928. Still structurally sound, it is now unused and falling into disrepair.

Crumbling plaster inside exposes a little patch of hay, which looks nearly as fresh as it must have looked the day it was cut 46 years ago.

Folk Dancing Fun For Northeast Group

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"Seven Jumps" may sound like a track event, but it's hardly a hurdling affair for the 12 Northeast High School students in peasant blouses and full skirts who have been performing it.

For this strenuous activity is really a Danish folk dance, one of more than a dozen which were included in the repertoire of this first-year dance group.

French teacher Laurie Evans was a prime mover in getting the group organized. She first experienced the fun of folk dancing when she lived in Brittany for awhile several years ago.

The young people there were carrying on a tradition as well as having fun, Ms. Evans explained, so she thought some students here might enjoy trying it.

Spanish teacher Judy Wilcox agreed to help and their call for students brought forth a good-sized group — including several guys. The group later dwindled to a faithful core of 12 females.

Had To Find Dances

With a dozen eager dancers on hand, Ms. Evans then realized she had to find dances beyond the few French numbers she knew.

Learning dances from books was "literally a step by step" process, explained Ms. Evans, who tells of wrangling with the whole vocabulary of abbreviations and symbols before she could tell her feet what to do.

She soon found some resource people who made the learning experience a lot easier.

Greek, French, Mexican, Danish, Russian and Costa Rican dances are among those the group has performed.

Hannelore Eschenbacher, a German foreign exchange student at Northeast, joined the group and taught the girls some of her native dances.

Officially dubbed the Lincoln Northeast Foreign Folk Dance Troupe, the dancers debuted at their school's foreign language fair.

Solid Booking

After that they found themselves booked solidly until the end of the school year with Friday afternoon performances at different schools.

The traumas of a traveling troupe are many, the girls learned in their first two away performances.

A too-small stage at one school necessitated some on-the-spot adaptations. And another school had a carpeted dance area which rendered ineffective the shoe-clicking and feet stomping the girls had worked so hard on.

Kathy Doe, the only sophomore member, says she took home her share of "minor bumps and bruises and aches" after the weekly rehearsals in the school cafeteria.

"We wind up with our heads on the floor in one dance," she added.

Senior Patty Tomes describes the dances as full of skipping, running and stomping, with a lot of twirling around.

"Everyone thinks it's kind of a joke," said Patty of her schoolmates' reaction to the dance group. "People are too inhibited to just go and have fun," she reckoned.

Opposition Is Fear

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., says the White House opposes postcard voter registration because "they are afraid of how new registrants might vote."

Brain Tumor Treatments Tried

Chavies, Ky. (AP) — Clyde Mullins was a healthy 33-year-old truck mechanic when a malignant brain tumor took over his life nearly two years ago.

"I can't do anything now," he says today. "I've tried to work, but I can't stand up for long and I forget things all the time." "But he's alive," his wife says. "And there was another guy in this same area who had the same thing and didn't get treatment. He died in no time at all."

In July, 1972, tests at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Lexington, showed that Mullins had a malignant brain tumor.

"They operated on me and when I woke up everything was all right," he recalls. "They decided to keep me at the hospital for six weeks and they gave me radiation every day — all anybody could take.

Mullins was one of 302 patients, all with brain cancer, who were part of a study to find to best method of treating the diesase.

"We had no control data to know how to treat the patient when this study began," says Dr. Richard H. Mortara, chief of the Lexington VA Hospital's neurosurgery section.

With work being done at 11 centers throughout the nation, including five VA hospitals, brain tumor patients were divided into four groups, each given a different postoperative treatment.

Preliminary figures show the average patient who had only supportive therapy showed signs his tumor had returned within 10 days, Dr. Mortara said.

Those given drugs averaged seven weeks; those on radiation, 23.7 weeks, and those with both drugs and radiation, 24 weeks.

Complicating the study is the wide variety of surgery that can be performed on each patient before radiation or drugs are used.

"We try to remove all of the tumor that we can see, while retaining neurological function of the patient — and that last part is most important," Dr. Mortara says. "We're certainly not going to operate on someone and turn them into a vegetable."

Mullins was earning $3 an hour at his mechanic's job when the episode began. His family, including six young children, lives on Social Security benefits, food stamps and free rent from his parents now.

The radiation treatments made Clyde Mullins almost bald. He still has attacks of nausea, tires quickly and "sometimes just on the way to the kitchen I forget what I'm going out there for."

"But he's alive," his wife says softly.

Preliminary figures show the average patient who had only supportive therapy showed signs his tumor had returned within 10 days, Dr. Mortara said.

Those given drugs averaged seven weeks; those on radiation, 23.7 weeks, and those with both drugs and radiation, 24 weeks.

Complicating the study is the wide variety of surgery that can be performed on each patient before radiation or drugs are used.

"We try to remove all of the tumor that we can see, while retaining neurological function of the patient — and that last part is most important," Dr. Mortara says. "We're certainly not going to operate on someone and turn them into a vegetable."

Mullins was earning $3 an hour at his mechanic's job when the episode began. His family, including six young children, lives on Social Security benefits, food stamps and free rent from his parents now.

The radiation treatments made Clyde Mullins almost bald. He still has attacks of nausea, tires quickly and "sometimes just on the way to the kitchen I forget what I'm going out there for."

"But he's alive," his wife says softly.

Gay Favors Surprise Phone Checks

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska Public Service Commissioner Duane Gay said Tuesday he favors random, unannounced inspections of Nebraska's 51 telephone companies to assess the quality of service being given ratepayers.

Gay said such an approach would be more effective in spotting trouble areas than a proposal currently pending before the commission requiring the phone companies to make annual performance reports on service.

The advantage of the inspection approach, Gay said, is that the commission would be relying on data gathered by its own staff instead of information provided by the firms when it considers changes in rates and service.

The commission has already taken a step in this direction, he said, by ordering a $5,000 piece of equipment which can analyze a company's performance.

However, Gay indicated he has not made up his mind whether to support the annual report system or pursue his own inclinations.

'Not Trying To Delay'

"I'm not trying to delay this thing, but I don't feel it's been discussed enough. What I'd like to see done is to hold a hearing to give the phone companies a chance to come in and say what they think of it."

Gay was one of three commissioners interviewed Tuesday about the proposed annual reports. Commissioner Eric Rasmussen had earlier voiced support for the reporting system; Commissioner John Swanson could not be reached for comment.

Rasmussen was joined in support of the reports by commission chairman Robert Marland of Lincoln, who said he was "all in favor" of the idea.

Marland said the reports would allow the commission to pinpoint areas where equipment is aging or where growth in population threatens to overload a system and suggest remedies before the problem reaches serious proportions.

One of the things the commission will have to consider, Marland said, is the reports' effect on the finances of the smaller phone companies. The larger phone companies, he said, have the information readily available, but he said it could be a problem for the company with fewer than 500 stations.

Commissioner James Munnelly of Omaha joined Gay in expressing skepticism about the annual reports.

Munnelly Undecided

Munnelly said he is cognizant of service problems in certain areas, but he said as presently drafted he does not know whether he will support the reporting plan.

"I want to be sure we're ready to implement the reports after they're adopted. The standards and the reports would be meaningless if there is no enforcement.

"The phone companies are also trying to provide good service — but what is good service has always been hard to define."

Gay concurred, "I don't know if the staff can use (the reports).

"So often some governmental agency requires businesses to report various things and the reports are filed away and never looked at.

"I don't want this to be another case where the ratepayers pick up the cost of a report that isn't used," Gay said.

Telephone Group Opposes Reports

The Nebraska Telephone Association has written the Nebraska Public Service Commission expressing opposition to a proposal requiring each telephone company to document the quality of service being provided.

In a letter dated March 28 to the commission, Edwin J. Finigan, executive vice president of the association, called the annual reports excessively expensive and unwarranted in light of the number of complaints.

The commission presently is considering adoption of a reporting procedure to see whether phone companies are meeting the service standards adopted by the commission in 1973.

Finigan wrote, "As our technicians worked on the problem, the difficulties of designing a standard reporting approach became more and more apparent. The industry therefore takes the position that no further reporting on service standards is desireable . . ."

The reporting system is opposed by the telephone companies, he said, because:

—There is "no demonstrated need" for the reports. Finigan said, "The complaint situation in Nebraska is at near minimum levels. It could in no way be comparable to the 30,000 complaints in New York State which instigated a reporting system . . ."

—The manpower and time involved in assembling the reports, he said, would cost $250,000; this, he said, would be a significant financial burden on the industry, especially the smaller companies.

"There are better service-related uses for the estimated annual cost of $250,00 than to expend them through excessive reporting requirements," he said.

—The commission, he said, has the authority to obtain all necessary information from the phone companies "in the few special or unusual situations that may arise."

He concluded, "For these reasons, the telephone industry offers no alternatives (to the commission's proposal) and takes the position that current reporting is adequate for purposes of regulation by the commission."

ANGUS 'MOTHER' . . . is unlike her transplanted calf.

Exotic Italian Breed Of Cattle Surgically Transplanted In U.S.

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Whitman — These calves are bound to have identity problems.

Born April 26, the older calf was the first surgically-transplanted, ¾-blood Chianina (an "exotic" Italian Breed) to be born in Nebraska. His brother, born May 6, was the second.

Imagine the confusion they would face if they were capable of wondering about their ancestral origins:

Their sire, a purebred Chianina bull, has never set foot outside Italy, and never had the pleasure of meeting their mother, who didn't take part in either calving.

What's more, neither transplanted calf looks at all like the "foster" mother cow which gave it birth without biological conception.

The strange offspring are, in a manner of speaking, a cross between a test tube and a surgical scalpel.

Surgically Transplanted

Both calves — and two others yet unborn — were reared from artificially inseminated ova, stimulated in their two half-Chianina mothers by fertility drugs. The fertilized ova were then surgically transplanted into the wombs of four "innocent" cows recruited to do the incubating.

Hence the valuable half-Chianina cows, freed from the time-consuming burden of pregnancy, can be quickly "super-ovulated" with hormones and rebred during their very next breeding cycle — and the fertilized ova again transplanted into another line up of surrogate "mother" cows.

The unnatural mothers take to their transplanted calves as if they were entriely their own. But the calves, which weigh nearly 100 pounds at birth and stand half as tall as their surrogate mothers, must stoop to nurse.

The transplant process is the fastest way to build up a herd of Chianina cattle, says Vic Gentry, who runs the ranch with his mother Kitty. Hoof-and-mouth disease prevalence in Europe prevents the direct importation of Chianinas, he explains, necessitating the importation of semen.

Purebred Qualifications

Once the Chianina herd attains ⅞ purity (15/16 in the case of bulls), they will qualify as purebreds, Gentry says. He adds that the Double Hook Ranch will probably be among the first in the nation to achieve a purebred herd.

Chianina cattle are noted for their size (a mature bull may stand as tall as six feet at the shoulder), rapid weight gain (three pounds a day on grass, perhaps as much as four in a feedlot) and lean meat.

Gentry says there is a growing demand for Chianina-Charolais crossbred calves for feeding, due to their growth characteristics, fertility, calving ease, mothering ability and docility.

For now, the transplants must be done at the International Cryo-Biological Service in Minneapolis. But eventually, the surgical procedure is expected to be superceded by a process similar to artificial insemination — which would eliminate the trip to Minneaplis.

In breeding the Chianina herd, the Gentrys are in partnership with Jerry and Deloris Adamson of Cody.

Tourism Signs Still Standing, Federal Ban Notwithstanding

By United Press International

Nebraska's tourist information signs along Interstate 80 are still in place even though the federal deadline for taking them down was June 1.

Warren Lichty, attorney for the State Roads Department, said Tuesday the signs remain in place on the basis of orders issued by State Engineer Thomas Doyle.

Earlier, the federal government ordered the signs removed on the grounds they violate the federal Highway Beautification Act.

Decided To Fight

But the state, on the basis of studies, decided to fight the order, which came from former Nebraska Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann, now federal highway administrator.

The state said studies showed the signs were effective in boosting Nebraska's income from tourists.

Lichty said Doyle received a letter from Tiemann dated May 28 which said the administrator saw no reason to reconsider his decision that the signs should come down.

Experimental Project

The signs were put up with federal approval as an experimental project.

Doyle then wrote a letter to Lichty which said he should "take all available and necessary steps to get a hearing" even though Tiemann said he felt a hearing would do little or no good.

The hearing would be conducted by an advisory commission to Tiemann.

Lichty said no word has been received on a hearing yet and he also said "there have been no threats against us" by federal officials resulting from failure to take the signs down.

Holdrege (AP) — The kidnaping case of a 20-year-old Naponee man was continued in Phelps County District Court Tuesday.

Lonnie St. Clair was to have appeared for a preliminary hearing, but Deputy Phelps County Atty. Robert Ide said the case has been continued for further investigation.

St. Clair has been charged with the May 21 kidnaping of his 19-year-old wife, Cheryl, and their one-year-old child from their Holdrege home.

Speaking Contest Winners Named As 4-H Week Starts

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Myrna Anderson of Hay Springs and Brent Arp of Blair were declared the winners of the state 4-H Timely Topics Speaking Contest as the annual Nebraska 4-H week program got underway at the Nebraska Center Tuesday.

Brent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Arp and will be a Junior at Blair High School this fall.

Myrna is the daughter of Leonard Anderson and will be a senior at Hay Springs High this fall.

The contest, sponsored by radio station KFAB of Omaha, featured two major changes this year according to Warren Nielson, farm service director for the station.

Scholarship winners can use their prize money at any school or college in the University of Nebraska system and a new green ribbon award is presented to 4-H members who only desire to participate in the contest but not in the competition for an award.

Regional Winners

The top 15 contestants in the state contest Tuesday were the winners of regional contests that stemmed from local contests featuring some 15,000 4-H members who wrote and delivered a speech on a topic of their choice.

Approximately 170 4-H members are in Lincoln for the 4-H week activities which include an introduction to the University of Nebraska and to the state government and a visit at a number of industries and businesses in Omaha in an effort to provide the youngsters with information on various careers open to them.

State 4-H leader Ken Schmidt noted that the group, averaging 17 years old, is made up mostly of girls.

"A lot of the fellows are working, so they couldn't come. And we do have a larger enrollment of girls in this particular age group," he said.

Louie Rudman, associate state 4-H leader, noted that enrollment in the activity was up by 20 members this year.

"We have about a third of the group who paid their own way, a third who were given the trip as an award by local and state 4-H groups and a third who had their trip paid for by a company or local sponsor," he said.

Inflation Pressure

Costs of the activity have been under pressure from inflation, but the 4-H clubs were able to hold the line at $25 this year. "We think we may have to go to $35 next year unless we can find a sponsor for a part of the activity," he said.

It is possible that this particular 4-H activity could be dropped next year.

"It will depend on what the kids want to do and what our 4-H councils think we can do. We already have 500 youngsters going to Washington, 90 to Japan, plus 4 leadership training camps. Perhaps we have enough things going on without this particular activity.

"We will see what the kids think we ought to do before we decide," Rudman said.

$50,000 Abbott Memorial Given Hospital

Hyannis — Mrs. Christopher J. (Ethel) Abbott has presented a check and pledge of $50,000 to the new Box Butte General Hospital in Alliance in memory of her late husband, prominent rancher and banker in western Nebraska. Mr. Abbott died Jan. 10, 1954, from injuries received in a plane crash near Shreveport, La., while on a duck hunting trip. The contribution by Mrs. Abbott is the largest single gift received by the hospital committee to date.

Quarantine Action Taken By USDA

Chicago — Quarantines for cattle scabies have been removed from one county in Nebraska, while another Nebraska area was placed under quarantine by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Removed from quarantine was the Norman Grothe feedlot in Antelope County, which was quarantined Dec. 21, 1973. A quarantine was placed on an area in Douglas County, surrounding a feedlot of the Ruser and Sons Feeding Co. following the discovery of scabies.

Fagots To Reign As Royalty

Lexington — Ralph B. Fabot, 77, and Mrs. Olga Fagot, 80, will reign as Plum Creek centennial king and queen during the Plum Creek Centennial celebration opening today. The pair are first cousins by marriage. Opening event of the celebration will be Lexington High School alumni activities. A "Parade of Wedding Gowns" at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Junior High School will close the festivities.

Ex-Falls Citian Receives Honorary Degree

Falls City — The Rev. Eugene D. Ries, director of the Lutheran World Federal Community Development Service, Geneva, Switzerland, received an honorary doctor of divinity degree at the 142nd commencement of Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa. A native of Falls City, the Rev. Mr. Ries was the son of the Rev. Lauritz Ries, onetime pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Falls City. The younger Ries is a 1947 graduate of Gettysburg College and a 1954 graduate of the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary.

G.I. Okayed For Flood Insurance

New York (UPI) — The National Flood Insurers Association said Tuesday another Nebraska city has become eligible for flood insurance on residential and non-residential properties. The city of Grand Island will be serviced by the Royal-Globe Insurance Companies of Kansas City, Mo. Damage from flooding is not covered in standard property insurance policies.

Full Recount Asked By Blank

McCook (UPI) — Mayor Don Blank said Tuesday he had asked for a recount of primary election ballots in all counties of the Third Congressional District which had not already been officially recounted.

Blank was one of eight candidates for the Republican nomination for Congress in the May 14 primary. Unofficial tabulations showed him trailing Mrs. Haven Smith of Chappell by a narrow margin.

Blank had earlier asked for a recount of the ballots in ten counties in the district.

He said Tuesday the recount in three key counties over the weekend turned up a total of 54 errors, resulting in 38 additional votes for Blank. Those counties were Holt, Platte and Dawson.

"With the gross errors found in those three counties, we've decided to recount the remaining 41 counties," Blank said. "Injecting a little margin for error, Mrs. Smith is probably leading me by 80 votes now, plus or minus a few."

Blank said Secretary of State Allen Beermann told him he wanted the recount completed by Thursday night.

"The majority of the errors which were found are not really a matter of somebody counting wrong," Blank said, "but more a matter of technical, legal qualification."

Land Value Jumps 22% In One Year

Nebraska farm land value increased 22% between Nov. 1, 1972, and Nov. 1, 1973, according to Dr. Phil Henderson, Extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

This is the latest period for which figures are available, Dr. Henderson said. The increase compares with a 14% jump between March 1, 1972, and March 1, 1973, he added.

Dr. Henderson said this was the biggest increase in land values on record, except for one period during World War I.

He said that although there is some land for sale in Nebraska, it is generally scarce all over the state.

The Farmers Home Administration is currently the most likely agency to financially back a farming operation 100%, he stated. But FHA funds are limited, he added, thus reducing its capacity to help to comparatively few people.

Truck Hits Horse, Tree And Explodes; Man Dies

By The Associated Press

Two deaths Tuesday have raised the 1974 Nebraska traffic toll to 128.

Merle Bringewatt, 47, of North Platte, was killed early Tuesday in a freak accident when his semi-trailer truck hit a horse, went out of control, struck a tree, exploded and burned.

The Nebraska State Patrol said the accident occurred on the U.S. Highway 275 one and one-half miles north of Scribner.

A May 6 car-train accident in Clearwater claimed its second life when Mrs. Rose Simmons, 66, of Clearwater, died in an Omaha hospital. Her husband Robert, 71, was killed instantly in the crash.

That accident occurred at a city crossing in Clearwater as the Simmons vehicle was struck broadside by the train.

Two Firms Will Hire Inexperienced Workers

Kansas City (AP) — Twenty-three inexperienced workers will be hired and trained by two Nebraska firms under contracts totaling $55,000 announced Tuesday by the U.S. Department of Labor in Kansas City.

The funds were allocated under the Jobs Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) program.

In Lincoln, Truck Equipment Service Co. will employ eight JOBS trainees, who will start at $2.50 an hour and advance to $3.60 after training.

Safeway is eligible for $36,878 under the JOBS program. Truck Equipment Service can get up to $18,228.

$10 Million Set For Employment Under Title IX

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan Tuesday allocated $10 million to provide part-time employment for about 3,800 Americans age 55 and older with low incomes and poor employment prospects.

The fund allocation was announced with the signing of regulations placing into effect Title IX of the Older Americans Act, which calls for utilization of organizations presently sponsoring successful programs for older workers.

The groups include: Green Thumb Inc., an affiliation of the National Farmers Union; the National Council of Senior Citizens; the National Council on Aging; the National Retired Teachers Association; American Association of Retired Persons; and the U.S. Forest Service.

Nebraska's allocation was placed at $77,000.

Tiemann Backs Exon For Road Funds

By The Associated Press

Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann is reported backing Gov. J. James Exon's position on continued federal funding for Nebraska's highway safety and construction programs.

An aide to Sen. Carl T. Curtis said Tiemann has recommended that the Transportation Department not shut off Nebraska's funds, amounting to some $7 million, despite the state's failure to pass two laws required by federal regulations.

The aide, Don Shasteen, also said he did not think the federal government could shut off the funds by the threatened June 30 deadline.

Process Not Finished

Shasteen said before the money can be withheld, regulations must be printed, published in the Federal Register, and then be subject to comment for a certain period of time.

In a telephone interview from Washington, Shasteen said none of those things had been done, and said it was not likely they could be done by the end of the month.

Shasteen said Tiemann, a former governor of Nebraska and a Republican, had told him of his recommendation to the Transportation Department.

"His feeling was that withholding the funds would do more damage than not having those two laws," Shasteen said.

The Unicameral refused to pass two bills, one a motorcycle helmet law and the other requiring certification of ambulance attendants.

Two Other States

Shasteen said Tiemann also noted other states, including California and Maryland, were in violation of the regulations to a greater extent than Nebraska.

Exon has argued the same point, while contending Nebraska's safety program is among the nation's best.

Final decision on the matter will be made by Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar.

Chances Unsure For N-Test Limit

©The New York Times

By HEDRICK SMITH

Moscow — American officials Tuesday struck a note of caution about prospects for achieving a new Soviet-American agreement on limiting nuclear tests underground in time for sighing during President Nixon's visit here in late June.

A delegation of American experts arrived last Wednesday for detailed talks with Soviet specialists and have reportedly run into a number of complex technical problems in talks which are still continuing here, officials said.

The Nixon administration specialists, aware that Congress is closely scrutinizing every move by Nixon during the current consideration of impeachment proceedings, were said to be moving very carefully.

Officials suggested Tuesday that by the time Nixon comes to the Soviet Union, it may be possible to do no more than draft a loosely worded agreement in principle with the Soviet Union to be followed after the visit by what could be extensive negotiations on an actual treaty.

It was Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev who in March raised with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger the prospects of extending the 1963 treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere and underwater to underground testing as well. This has been the arena for considerable testing for the past decade.

Fundamental Deadlock

Both sides became interested in this project because of the fundamental deadlock in their negotiations on strategic arms control measures and the desire of both the White House and the Kremlin to announce some new agreements to give the Nixon visit the aura of success and to maintain the appearance of momentum in Soviet-American accommodation.

Kissinger reportedly excluded a total ban on underground testing without on-site inspection to check against violations, a provision to which Moscow has objected in all arms control negotiations. Then, the two sides agreed to have experts try to agree on a "threshold" above which their own electronic devices could detect tests even without on-site snspection and to use this as the basis for a limitation against larger underground tests.

This is the area in which the Soviet and American specialists are reportedly at work now. Tight secrecy has been imposed on their talks to the extent that neither side will even identify the negotiators by name or say how many officials are taking part.

Initially, the American Embassy joined the Soviet government in refusing even to acknowledge that the talks were taking place, evidently in hope of keeping possible agreement as a surprise to be unveiled at the summit for greater publicity impact.

Revelations about Nixon's possible itinerary in the Soviet Union are being kept equally secret though it was reliably learned the Brezhnev had invited the American president to visit Pitsunda, the Black Sea resort where the Soviet leader met earlier this year with French President Georges Pompidou.

Yalta Villa Renovation

It is known as well that Soviet construction crews and artisans have been working at break-neck speed to complete renovation of the villa at Yalta used by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt for his wartime meeting with Stalin. But American officials said that because of the political connotations that Yalta has for Americans, it was extremely unlikely that Nixon would go there.

Since the two leaders have fewer urgent negotiating issues than when Nixon came here in 1972, the two governments have reportedly considered arrangements for Nixon to make some trip to economic projects east of Moscow — perhaps the Kama River truck plant which is using much American equipment, or some Siberian city like Irkutsk to symbolize American interest in natural gas deals with Moscow.

But officials caution that time may become a limitation on Nixon's movements in the Soviet Union. He is due to arrive June 27, and plans are being made so that he can be back in the United States by July 4.

Injured Worker Rescued

A crane operator from Alexandria, Va., John Wilson, is lowered to safety in Washington, D.C., Tuesday after he was hurt while working on construction. The Washington Fire Department rescue squad had a hand in the dramatic rescue. Wilson, 26, is listed in fair condition. He received an electrical shock while working atop a 200-foot crane tower.

Couple Saves Bank

Winston-Salem, N.C. (UPI) — You can't say Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Crews aren't doing their bit to solve the penny shortage.

They drove up to a branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. the other day, the car's rear end sagging almost to the ground, and popped open the trunk lid. Banker Dennis J. Easter's eyes bulged. "I couldn't believe it — I almost ran and hid," he said.

The trunk was spilling over with copper coins — 68,435 of them.

Guards brought out 14 big money bags and shoveled in the coins. The bank had to call a Wells Fargo truck so the coins could be carted to the main office for machine counting.

Mrs. Crews explained her husband scanned the coins for several months so he could search out special ones he wanted to keep. Then they decided to cash them in because of the penny shortage.

"We're in pretty good shape here, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Crews," said Easter. "They really saved us."

The Crews were in pretty good shape, too — with a check for $684.35.

Alka-Seltzer Receives Clean Bill Of Health

Washington (UPI) — After more than a year of controversy, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Tuesday gave Alka-Seltzer a clean bill of health, rejecting claims that it should be banned because its aspirin content could be dangerous for ulcer victims.

The FDA published its final regulations governing the safety and effectiveness of all over-the-counter antacid products which were subjected to a review beginning nearly two years ago.

"The record does not contain any significant number of case histories of such acute bleeding caused by this widely marketed type of product consumed in large quantities by a substantial body of the public for many years," said FDA Commissioner Dr. Alexander M. Schmy. "If significant medical problems existed it would be expected to have been reported by now."

Ralph Nader's health research group had urged FDA to ban Alka-Seltzer's antacid-aspirin combination because it said an ulcer patient could mistake ulcer pains for an upset stomach and take the product, causing more bleeding of the ulcer.

Miles Laboratories earlier this year began to market a second variety of Alka-Seltzer with a "gold label" and without aspirin, billed as being for relief of only acid indigestion, heartburn or upset stomach. Regular Alka-Seltzer, in the blue label, still is offered for relief of headache in addition to the other symptoms.

Miles spokesmen said its decision to offer the second product was not prompted by the Nader organization's complaints but by the new FDA rule specifying that analgestic-antacid combinations should be used only for the concurrent symptoms of upset stomach and headache — not for stomach problems alone.

Miles spokesmen said Tuesday it was "gratified" at the FDA's decision.

But even as the FDA was publishing its final regulations, the product was being attacked during a congressional hearing

Dr. Morton I. Grossman, a professor of medicine at UCLA, said the aspirin-antacid combination is "irrational" and advertising for its treatment of indigestion should be forbidden. A similar comment came from Dr. Stewart C. Harvey of the University of Utah.

Relabeling Of Antacids Demanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The makers of nearly 8,000 brands of antacids Tuesday were given one year to relabel and reformulate their products or pull them off the market.

Implementing the first federal standards for nonprescription drugs, the Food and Drug Administration said that antacids can be promoted in the future only for treatment of heartburn, sour stomach and acid indigestion.

Bestsellers such as Alka-Seltzer and Bromo-Seltzer, which combine an antacid with a pain reliever, must emphasize that they are intended for use only against concurrent symptoms of a headache and acid indigestion.

The labels also must contain a "warnings" section calling attention to other safety factors.

The FDA said that virtually all antacids will have to be relabeled to meet the regulations, and many others will have to be reformulated to comply with the new list of 13 approved antacid ingredients.

"Few antacids familiar to consumers will be removed from the market," FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said. "Most products likely will remain on the market by limiting their labeling promotion to allowable claims or by changing doses to meet the allowable standard."

The FDA said antacid sales were estimated at $117 million in 1972.

The standards, developed by a panel of outside experts, will be followed in coming months and years by rules for 26 other major classes of nonprescription drugs including pain relievers, cough and cold remedies, sleep aids and laxatives.

Marshals Remove Means

St. Paul, Minn. (UPI) — Four U.S. marshals carried Wounded Knee defendant Russell Means out of court Tuesday when he refused to leave after U.S. District Judge Fred Nichol found him in contempt.

Means, a leader of the American Indian Movement, returned to the courtroom within an hour, apologized to Nichol for the outburst that triggered the contempt citation and was permitted to remain.

Later he charged that he was "blackmailed" by the judge into making the apology.

The incident began when Means called FBI agent Varnard Grimes "a liar" after Grimes testified he was not assigned to a roadblock at occupied Wounded Knee, S.D., last year to provoke an incident between Indians and federal agents.

Means Warned

Nichol warned Means he could be jailed for the next 24 hours if he continued the barrage.

When Means again spoke out, Nichol said: "I order you out and the marshals to take charge and keep you in charge for 24 hours."

When Means refused to leave the marshals picked him up and carried him to their headquarters.

Less than an hour later, after a brief conference in Nichol's chambers, Means re-entered the courtroom and told the judge, "I want to apologize for arguing your ruling — and I will not make any more outbursts."

Apology Accepted

Nichol accepted the apology and rescinded the penalty period, but did not drop the contempt charge.

Means told reporters later Nichol had "blackmailed" him into apologizing by threatening to take away the co-counsel status of the defendants that gives them the right to question witnesses and to deny certain requested days off.

The 5-month trial has been marked by spirited exchanges between the gray-haired South Dakota judge and Means, co-defendant and AIM leader Dennis Banks and their lawyers, led by Chicago Seven attorney William M. Kunstler.

Gay Favors Surprise Phone Checks

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska Public Service Commissioner Duane Gay said Tuesday he favors random, unannounced inspections of Nebraska's 51 telephone companies to assess the quality of service being given ratepayers.

Gay said such an approach would be more effective in spotting trouble areas than a proposal currently pending before the commission requiring the phone companies to make annual performance reports on service.

The advantage of the inspection approach, Gay said, is that the commission would be relying on data gathered by its own staff instead of information provided by the firms when it considers changes in rates and service.

The commission has already taken a step in this direction, he said, by ordering a $5,000 piece of equipment which can analyze a company's performance.

However, Gay indicated he has not made up his mind whether to support the annual report system or pursue his own inclinations.

'Not Trying To Delay'

"I'm not trying to delay this thing, but I don't feel it's been discussed enough. What I'd like to see done is to hold a hearing to give the phone companies a chance to come in and say what they think of it."

Gay was one of three commissioners interviewed Tuesday about the proposed annual reports. Commissioner Eric Rasmussen had earlier voiced support for the reporting system; Commissioner John Swanson could not be reached for comment.

Rasmussen was joined in support of the reports by commission chairman Robert Marland of Lincoln, who said he was "all in favor" of the idea.

Marland said the reports would allow the commission to pinpoint areas where equipment is aging or where growth in population threatens to overload a system and suggest remedies before the problem reaches serious proportions.

One of the things the commission will have to consider, Marland said, is the reports' effect on the finances of the smaller phone companies. The larger phone companies, he said, have the information readily available, but he said it could be a problem for the company with fewer than 500 stations.

Commissioner James Munnelly of Omaha joined Gay in expressing skepticism about the annual reports.

Munnelly Undecided

Munnelly said he is cognizant of service problems in certain areas, but he said as presently drafted he does not know whether he will support the reporting plan.

"I want to be sure we're ready to implement the reports after they're adopted. The standards and the reports would be meaningless if there is no enforcement.

"The phone companies are also trying to provide good service — but what is good service has always been hard to define."

Gay concurred, "I don't know if the staff can use (the reports).

"So often some governmental agency requires businesses to report various things and the reports are filed away and never looked at.

"I don't want this to be another case where the ratepayers pick up the cost of a report that isn't used," Gay said.

Telephone Group Opposes Reports

The Nebraska Telephone Association has written the Nebraska Public Service Commission expressing opposition to a proposal requiring each telephone company to document the quality of service being provided.

In a letter dated March 28 to the commission, Edwin J. Finigan, executive vice president of the association, called the annual reports excessively expensive and unwarranted in light of the number of complaints.

The commission presently is considering adoption of a reporting procedure to see whether phone companies are meeting the service standards adopted by the commission in 1973.

Finigan wrote, "As our technicians worked on the problem, the difficulties of designing a standard reporting approach became more and more apparent. The industry therefore takes the position that no further reporting on service standards is desireable . . ."

The reporting system is opposed by the telephone companies, he said, because:

—There is "no demonstrated need" for the reports. Finigan said, "The complaint situation in Nebraska is at near minimum levels. It could in no way be comparable to the 30,000 complaints in New York State which instigated a reporting system . . ."

—The manpower and time involved in assembling the reports, he said, would cost $250,000; this, he said, would be a significant financial burden on the industry, especially the smaller companies.

"There are better service-related uses for the estimated annual cost of $250,00 than to expend them through excessive reporting requirements," he said.

—The commission, he said, has the authority to obtain all necessary information from the phone companies "in the few special or unusual situations that may arise."

He concluded, "For these reasons, the telephone industry offers no alternatives (to the commission's proposal) and takes the position that current reporting is adequate for purposes of regulation by the commission."

ANGUS 'MOTHER' . . . is unlike her transplanted calf.

Exotic Italian Breed Of Cattle Surgically Transplanted In U.S.

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Whitman — These calves are bound to have identity problems.

Born April 26, the older calf was the first surgically-transplanted, ¾-blood Chianina (an "exotic" Italian Breed) to be born in Nebraska. His brother, born May 6, was the second.

Imagine the confusion they would face if they were capable of wondering about their ancestral origins:

Their sire, a purebred Chianina bull, has never set foot outside Italy, and never had the pleasure of meeting their mother, who didn't take part in either calving.

What's more, neither transplanted calf looks at all like the "foster" mother cow which gave it birth without biological conception.

The strange offspring are, in a manner of speaking, a cross between a test tube and a surgical scalpel.

Surgically Transplanted

Both calves — and two others yet unborn — were reared from artificially inseminated ova, stimulated in their two half-Chianina mothers by fertility drugs. The fertilized ova were then surgically transplanted into the wombs of four "innocent" cows recruited to do the incubating.

Hence the valuable half-Chianina cows, freed from the time-consuming burden of pregnancy, can be quickly "super-ovulated" with hormones and rebred during their very next breeding cycle — and the fertilized ova again transplanted into another line up of surrogate "mother" cows.

The unnatural mothers take to their transplanted calves as if they were entriely their own. But the calves, which weigh nearly 100 pounds at birth and stand half as tall as their surrogate mothers, must stoop to nurse.

The transplant process is the fastest way to build up a herd of Chianina cattle, says Vic Gentry, who runs the ranch with his mother Kitty. Hoof-and-mouth disease prevalence in Europe prevents the direct importation of Chianinas, he explains, necessitating the importation of semen.

Purebred Qualifications

Once the Chianina herd attains ⅞ purity (15/16 in the case of bulls), they will qualify as purebreds, Gentry says. He adds that the Double Hook Ranch will probably be among the first in the nation to achieve a purebred herd.

Chianina cattle are noted for their size (a mature bull may stand as tall as six feet at the shoulder), rapid weight gain (three pounds a day on grass, perhaps as much as four in a feedlot) and lean meat.

Gentry says there is a growing demand for Chianina-Charolais crossbred calves for feeding, due to their growth characteristics, fertility, calving ease, mothering ability and docility.

For now, the transplants must be done at the International Cryo-Biological Service in Minneapolis. But eventually, the surgical procedure is expected to be superceded by a process similar to artificial insemination — which would eliminate the trip to Minneaplis.

In breeding the Chianina herd, the Gentrys are in partnership with Jerry and Deloris Adamson of Cody.

Tourism Signs Still Standing, Federal Ban Notwithstanding

By United Press International

Nebraska's tourist information signs along Interstate 80 are still in place even though the federal deadline for taking them down was June 1.

Warren Lichty, attorney for the State Roads Department, said Tuesday the signs remain in place on the basis of orders issued by State Engineer Thomas Doyle.

Earlier, the federal government ordered the signs removed on the grounds they violate the federal Highway Beautification Act.

Decided To Fight

But the state, on the basis of studies, decided to fight the order, which came from former Nebraska Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann, now federal highway administrator.

The state said studies showed the signs were effective in boosting Nebraska's income from tourists.

Lichty said Doyle received a letter from Tiemann dated May 28 which said the administrator saw no reason to reconsider his decision that the signs should come down.

Experimental Project

The signs were put up with federal approval as an experimental project.

Doyle then wrote a letter to Lichty which said he should "take all available and necessary steps to get a hearing" even though Tiemann said he felt a hearing would do little or no good.

The hearing would be conducted by an advisory commission to Tiemann.

Lichty said no word has been received on a hearing yet and he also said "there have been no threats against us" by federal officials resulting from failure to take the signs down.

Holdrege (AP) — The kidnaping case of a 20-year-old Naponee man was continued in Phelps County District Court Tuesday.

Lonnie St. Clair was to have appeared for a preliminary hearing, but Deputy Phelps County Atty. Robert Ide said the case has been continued for further investigation.

St. Clair has been charged with the May 21 kidnaping of his 19-year-old wife, Cheryl, and their one-year-old child from their Holdrege home.

$50,000 Abbott Memorial Given Hospital

Hyannis — Mrs. Christopher J. (Ethel) Abbott has presented a check and pledge of $50,000 to the new Box Butte General Hospital in Alliance in memory of her late husband, prominent rancher and banker in western Nebraska. Mr. Abbott died Jan. 10, 1954, from injuries received in a plane crash near Shreveport, La., while on a duck hunting trip. The contribution by Mrs. Abbott is the largest single gift received by the hospital committee to date.

Quarantine Action Taken By USDA

Chicago — Quarantines for cattle scabies have been removed from one county in Nebraska, while another Nebraska area was placed under quarantine by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Removed from quarantine was the Norman Grothe feedlot in Antelope County, which was quarantined Dec. 21, 1973. A quarantine was placed on an area in Douglas County, surrounding a feedlot of the Ruser and Sons Feeding Co. following the discovery of scabies.

Fagots To Reign As Royalty

Lexington — Ralph B. Fabot, 77, and Mrs. Olga Fagot, 80, will reign as Plum Creek centennial king and queen during the Plum Creek Centennial celebration opening today. The pair are first cousins by marriage. Opening event of the celebration will be Lexington High School alumni activities. A "Parade of Wedding Gowns" at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Junior High School will close the festivities.

Ex-Falls Citian Receives Honorary Degree

Falls City — The Rev. Eugene D. Ries, director of the Lutheran World Federal Community Development Service, Geneva, Switzerland, received an honorary doctor of divinity degree at the 142nd commencement of Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa. A native of Falls City, the Rev. Mr. Ries was the son of the Rev. Lauritz Ries, onetime pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Falls City. The younger Ries is a 1947 graduate of Gettysburg College and a 1954 graduate of the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary.

G.I. Okayed For Flood Insurance

New York (UPI) — The National Flood Insurers Association said Tuesday another Nebraska city has become eligible for flood insurance on residential and non-residential properties. The city of Grand Island will be serviced by the Royal-Globe Insurance Companies of Kansas City, Mo. Damage from flooding is not covered in standard property insurance policies.

Full Recount Asked By Blank

McCook (UPI) — Mayor Don Blank said Tuesday he had asked for a recount of primary election ballots in all counties of the Third Congressional District which had not already been officially recounted.

Blank was one of eight candidates for the Republican nomination for Congress in the May 14 primary. Unofficial tabulations showed him trailing Mrs. Haven Smith of Chappell by a narrow margin.

Blank had earlier asked for a recount of the ballots in ten counties in the district.

He said Tuesday the recount in three key counties over the weekend turned up a total of 54 errors, resulting in 38 additional votes for Blank. Those counties were Holt, Platte and Dawson.

"With the gross errors found in those three counties, we've decided to recount the remaining 41 counties," Blank said. "Injecting a little margin for error, Mrs. Smith is probably leading me by 80 votes now, plus or minus a few."

Blank said Secretary of State Allen Beermann told him he wanted the recount completed by Thursday night.

"The majority of the errors which were found are not really a matter of somebody counting wrong," Blank said, "but more a matter of technical, legal qualification."

Speaking Contest Winners Named As 4-H Week Starts

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Myrna Anderson of Hay Springs and Brent Arp of Blair were declared the winners of the state 4-H Timely Topics Speaking Contest as the annual Nebraska 4-H week program got underway at the Nebraska Center Tuesday.

Brent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Arp and will be a Junior at Blair High School this fall.

Myrna is the daughter of Leonard Anderson and will be a senior at Hay Springs High this fall.

The contest, sponsored by radio station KFAB of Omaha, featured two major changes this year according to Warren Nielson, farm service director for the station.

Scholarship winners can use their prize money at any school or college in the University of Nebraska system and a new green ribbon award is presented to 4-H members who only desire to participate in the contest but not in the competition for an award.

Regional Winners

The top 15 contestants in the state contest Tuesday were the winners of regional contests that stemmed from local contests featuring some 15,000 4-H members who wrote and delivered a speech on a topic of their choice.

Approximately 170 4-H members are in Lincoln for the 4-H week activities which include an introduction to the University of Nebraska and to the state government and a visit at a number of industries and businesses in Omaha in an effort to provide the youngsters with information on various careers open to them.

State 4-H leader Ken Schmidt noted that the group, averaging 17 years old, is made up mostly of girls.

"A lot of the fellows are working, so they couldn't come. And we do have a larger enrollment of girls in this particular age group," he said

Louie Rudman, associate state 4-H leader, noted that enrollment in the activity was up by 20 members this year.

"We have about a third of the group who paid their own way, a third who were given the trip as an award by local and state 4-H groups and a third who had their trip paid for by a company or local sponsor," he said.

Inflation Pressure

Costs of the activity have been under pressure from inflation, but the 4-H clubs were able to hold the line at $25 this year. "We think we may have to go to $35 next year unless we can find a sponsor for a part of the activity," he said

It is possible that this particular 4-H activity could be dropped next year.

"It will depend on what the kids want to do and what our 4-H councils think we can do We already have 500 youngsters going to Washington, 90 to Japan, plus 4 leadership training camps. Perhaps we have enough things going on without this particular activity.

"We will see what the kids think we ought to do before we decide," Rudman said.

Land Value Jumps 22% In One Year

Nebraska farm land value increased 22% between Nov. 1, 1972, and Nov. 1, 1973, according to Dr. Phil Henderson, Extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

This is the latest period for which figures are available, Dr. Henderson said. The increase compares with a 14% jump between March 1, 1972, and March 1, 1973, he added.

Dr. Henderson said this was the biggest increase in land values on record, except for one period during World War I.

He said that although there is some land for sale in Nebraska, it is generally scarce all over the state.

The Farmers Home Administration is currently the most likely agency to financially back a farming operation 100%, he stated. But FHA funds are limited, he added, thus reducing its capacity to help to comparatively few people.

Truck Hits Horse, Tree And Explodes; Man Dies

By The Associated Press

Two deaths Tuesday have raised the 1974 Nebraska traffic toll to 128.

Merle Bringewatt, 47, of North Platte, was killed early Tuesday in a freak accident when his semi-trailer truck hit a horse, went out of control, struck a tree, exploded and burned.

The Nebraska State Patrol said the accident occurred on the U.S. Highway 275 one and one-half miles north of Scribner.

A May 6 car-train accident in Clearwater claimed its second life when Mrs. Rose Simmons, 66, of Clearwater, died in an Omaha hospital. Her husband Robert, 71, was killed instantly in the crash.

That accident occurred at a city crossing in Clearwater as the Simmons vehicle was struck broadside by the train.

Two Firms Will Hire Inexperienced Workers

Kansas City (AP) — Twenty-three inexperienced workers will be hired and trained by two Nebraska firms under contracts totaling $55,000 announced Tuesday by the U.S. Department of Labor in Kansas City.

The funds were allocated under the Jobs Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) program.

In Lincoln, Truck Equipment Service Co. will employ eight JOBS trainees, who will start at $2.50 an hour and advance to $3.60 after training.

Safeway is eligible for $36,878 under the JOBS program. Truck Equipment Service can get up to $18,228.

$10 Million Set For Employment Under Title IX

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan Tuesday allocated $10 million to provide part-time employment for about 3,800 Americans age 55 and older with low incomes and poor employment prospects.

The fund allocation was announced with the signing of regulations placing into effect Title IX of the Older Americans Act, which calls for utilization of organizations presently sponsoring successful programs for older workers.

The groups include: Green Thumb Inc., an affiliation of the National Farmers Union; the National Council of Senior Citizens; the National Council on Aging; the National Retired Teachers Association; American Association of Retired Persons; and the U.S. Forest Service.

Nebraska's allocation was placed at $77,000.

Tiemann Backs Exon For Road Funds

By The Associated Press

Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann is reported backing Gov. J. James Exon's position on continued federal funding for Nebraska's highway safety and construction programs.

An aide to Sen. Carl T. Curtis said Tiemann has recommended that the Transportation Department not shut off Nebraska's funds, amounting to some $7 million, despite the state's failure to pass two laws required by federal regulations.

The aide, Don Shasteen, also said he did not think the federal government could shut off the funds by the threatened June 30 deadline.

Process Not Finished

Shasteen said before the money can be withheld, regulations must be printed, published in the Federal Register, and then be subject to comment for a certain period of time.

In a telephone interview from Washington, Shasteen said none of those things had been done, and said it was not likely they could be done by the end of the month.

Shasteen said Tiemann, a former governor of Nebraska and a Republican, had told him of his recommendation to the Transportation Department.

"His feeling was that withholding the funds would do more damage than not having those two laws," Shasteen said.

The Unicameral refused to pass two bills, one a motorcycle helmet law and the other requiring certification of ambulance attendants.

Two Other States

Shasteen said Tiemann also noted other states, including California and Maryland, were in violation of the regulations to a greater extent than Nebraska.

Exon has argued the same point, while contending Nebraska's safety program is among the nation's best.

Final decision on the matter will be made by Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar.

Chances Unsure For N-Test Limit

©The New York Times

By HEDRICK SMITH

Moscow — American officials Tuesday struck a note of caution about prospects for achieving a new Soviet-American agreement on limiting nuclear tests underground in time for sighing during President Nixon's visit here in late June.

A delegation of American experts arrived last Wednesday for detailed talks with Soviet specialists and have reportedly run into a number of complex technical problems in talks which are still continuing here, officials said.

The Nixon administration specialists, aware that Congress is closely scrutinizing every move by Nixon during the current consideration of impeachment proceedings, were said to be moving very carefully.

Officials suggested Tuesday that by the time Nixon comes to the Soviet Union, it may be possible to do no more than draft a loosely worded agreement in principle with the Soviet Union to be followed after the visit by what could be extensive negotiations on an actual treaty.

It was Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev who in March raised with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger the prospects of extending the 1963 treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere and underwater to underground testing as well. This has been the arena for considerable testing for the past decade.

Fundamental Deadlock

Both sides became interested in this project because of the fundamental deadlock in their negotiations on strategic arms control measures and the desire of both the White House and the Kremlin to announce some new agreements to give the Nixon visit the aura of success and to maintain the appearance of momentum in Soviet-American accommodation.

Kissinger reportedly excluded a total ban on underground testing without on-site inspection to check against violations, a provision to which Moscow has objected in all arms control negotiations. Then, the two sides agreed to have experts try to agree on a "threshold" above which their own electronic devices could detect tests even without on-site snspection and to use this as the basis for a limitation against larger underground tests.

This is the area in which the Soviet and American specialists are reportedly at work now. Tight secrecy has been imposed on their talks to the extent that neither side will even identify the negotiators by name or say how many officials are taking part.

Initially, the American Embassy joined the Soviet government in refusing even to acknowledge that the talks were taking place, evidently in hope of keeping possible agreement as a surprise to be unveiled at the summit for greater publicity impact.

Revelations about Nixon's possible itinerary in the Soviet Union are being kept equally secret though it was reliably learned the Brezhnev had invited the American president to visit Pitsunda, the Black Sea resort where the Soviet leader met earlier this year with French President Georges Pompidou.

Yalta Villa Renovation

It is known as well that Soviet construction crews and artisans have been working at break-neck speed to complete renovation of the villa at Yalta used by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt for his wartime meeting with Stalin. But American officials said that because of the political connotations that Yalta has for Americans, it was extremely unlikely that Nixon would go there.

Since the two leaders have fewer urgent negotiating issues than when Nixon came here in 1972, the two governments have reportedly considered arrangements for Nixon to make some trip to economic projects east of Moscow — perhaps the Kama River truck plant which is using much American equipment, or some Siberian city like Irkutsk to symbolize American interest in natural gas deals with Moscow.

But officials caution that time may become a limitation on Nixon's movements in the Soviet Union. He is due to arrive June 27, and plans are being made so that he can be back in the United States by July 4.

Injured Worker Rescued

A crane operator from Alexandria, Va., John Wilson, is lowered to safety in Washington, D.C., Tuesday after he was hurt while working on construction. The Washington Fire Department rescue squad had a hand in the dramatic rescue. Wilson, 26, is listed in fair condition. He received an electrical shock while working atop a 200-foot crane tower.

Couple Saves Bank

Winston-Salem, N.C. (UPI) — You can't say Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Crews aren't doing their bit to solve the penny shortage.

They drove up to a branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. the other day, the car's rear end sagging almost to the ground, and popped open the trunk lid. Banker Dennis J. Easter's eyes bulged. "I couldn't believe it — I almost ran and hid," he said.

The trunk was spilling over with copper coins — 68,435 of them.

Guards brought out 14 big money bags and shoveled in the coins. The bank had to call a Wells Fargo truck so the coins could be carted to the main office for machine counting.

Mrs. Crews explained her husband scanned the coins for several months so he could search out special ones he wanted to keep. Then they decided to cash them in because of the penny shortage.

"We're in pretty good shape here, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Crews," said Easter. "They really saved us."

The Crews were in pretty good shape, too — with a check for $684.35.

Alka-Seltzer Receives Clean Bill Of Health

Washington (UPI) — After more than a year of controversy, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Tuesday gave Alka-Seltzer a clean bill of health, rejecting claims that it should be banned because its aspirin content could be dangerous for ulcer victims.

The FDA published its final regulations governing the safety and effectiveness of all over-the-counter antacid products which were subjected to a review beginning nearly two years ago.

"The record does not contain any significant number of case histories of such acute bleeding caused by this widely marketed type of product consumed in large quantities by a substantial body of the public for many years," said FDA Commissioner Dr. Alexander M. Schmy. "If significant medical problems existed it would be expected to have been reported by now."

Ralph Nader's health research group had urged FDA to ban Alka-Seltzer's antacid-aspirin combination because it said an ulcer patient could mistake ulcer pains for an upset stomach and take the product, causing more bleeding of the ulcer.

Miles Laboratories earlier this year began to market a second variety of Alka-Seltzer with a "gold label" and without aspirin, billed as being for relief of only acid indigestion, heartburn or upset stomach. Regular Alka-Seltzer, in the blue label, still is offered for relief of headache in addition to the other symptoms.

Miles spokesmen said its decision to offer the second product was not prompted by the Nader organization's complaints but by the new FDA rule specifying that analgestic-antacid combinations should be used only for the concurrent symptoms of upset stomach and headache — not for stomach problems alone.

Miles spokesmen said Tuesday it was "gratified" at the FDA's decision.

But even as the FDA was publishing its final regulations, the product was being attacked during a congressional hearing

Dr. Morton I. Grossman, a professor of medicine at UCLA, said the aspirin-antacid combination is "irrational" and advertising for its treatment of indigestion should be forbidden. A similar comment came from Dr. Stewart C. Harvey of the University of Utah.

Relabeling Of Antacids Demanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The makers of nearly 8,000 brands of antacids Tuesday were given one year to relabel and reformulate their products or pull them off the market.

Implementing the first federal standards for nonprescription drugs, the Food and Drug Administration said that antacids can be promoted in the future only for treatment of heartburn, sour stomach and acid indigestion.

Bestsellers such as Alka-Seltzer and Bromo-Seltzer, which combine an antacid with a pain reliever, must emphasize that they are intended for use only against concurrent symptoms of a headache and acid indigestion.

The labels also must contain a "warnings" section calling attention to other safety factors.

The FDA said that virtually all antacids will have to be relabeled to meet the regulations, and many others will have to be reformulated to comply with the new list of 13 approved antacid ingredients.

"Few antacids familiar to consumers will be removed from the market," FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said. "Most products likely will remain on the market by limiting their labeling promotion to allowable claims or by changing doses to meet the allowable standard."

The FDA said antacid sales were estimated at $117 million in 1972.

The standards, developed by a panel of outside experts, will be followed in coming months and years by rules for 26 other major classes of nonprescription drugs including pain relievers, cough and cold remedies, sleep aids and laxatives.

Marshals Remove Means

St. Paul, Minn. (UPI) — Four U.S. marshals carried Wounded Knee defendant Russell Means out of court Tuesday when he refused to leave after U.S. District Judge Fred Nichol found him in contempt.

Means, a leader of the American Indian Movement, returned to the courtroom within an hour, apologized to Nichol for the outburst that triggered the contempt citation and was permitted to remain.

Later he charged that he was "blackmailed" by the judge into making the apology.

The incident began when Means called FBI agent Varnard Grimes "a liar" after Grimes testified he was not assigned to a roadblock at occupied Wounded Knee, S.D., last year to provoke an incident between Indians and federal agents.

Means Warned

Nichol warned Means he could be jailed for the next 24 hours if he continued the barrage.

When Means again spoke out. Nichol said: "I order you out and the marshals to take charge and keep you in charge for 24 hours."

When Means refused to leave the marshals picked him up and carried him to their headquarters.

Less than an hour later, after a brief conference in Nichol's chambers, Means re-entered the courtroom and told the judge, "I want to apologize for arguing your ruling — and I will not make any more outbursts."

Apology Accepted

Nichol accepted the apology and rescinded the penalty period, but did not drop the contempt charge.

Means told reporters later Nichol had "blackmailed" him into apologizing by threatening to take away the co-counsel status of the defendants that gives them the right to question witnesses and to deny certain requested days off.

The 5-month trial has been marked by spirited exchanges between the gray-haired South Dakota judge and Means, co-defendant and AIM leader Dennis Banks and their lawyers, led by Chicago Seven attorney William M. Kunstler.

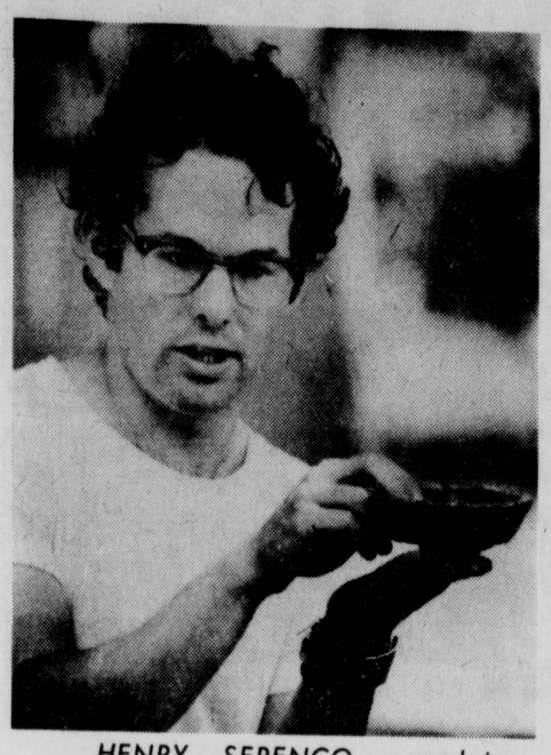
There's Art Aplenty At Grandpa's Woods



HENRY SERENCO . . . explains methods of glazing pottery.

Camping, cook-outs, fishing, golfing, nature walks and horseback riding — as well as demonstrations, lectures and lessons on weaving, pottery, watercolor and landscape drawing — all are being featured during the art workshop and retreat currently being held at Grandpa's Woods, northeast of Elmwood.

A summer component to the Lincoln Public Schools' (LPS) "Year of the Arts" program, the event began Monday and will continue through Thursday.

According to Roger Van Deventer, art coordinator for LPS, the program was designed for Lincoln school art staff members, their families and members of the student-oriented Lincoln Public School Art Guild.

Van Deventer pointed out that the purpose of the workshop is to provide students "with specific kinds of experiences that they won't be exposed to ordinarily in the classroom."

In addition, the venture will enable staff members to become acquainted with their teaching counterparts in other city schools, he explained.

Included among the featured artists are Ann Williams whose specialty is off-loom weaving, Henry Serenco of Omaha who demonstrated pit-firing ceramics, Richard Heggen of Ames, Iowa, who will give a lesson on landscape drawing; and Marcia Eherenhard, who will teach watercolor painting.

Many Children Do Not Understand Traffic Environment

• "Johnny, remember not to cross in the middle of the block."

• "Mary, do not put one foot off the curb, until you look both ways."

• "Go ahead, but pay attention to the signs."

Mothers who sometimes think they sound like a broken record, because they use such phrases so often, may be surprised to learn that, for youngsters, it's out of sight, out of mind — at least when it comes to traffic.

Dr. Gerald Driessen, senior research scientist for the National Safety Council, says studies indicate that many youngsters who seem to understand the traffic environment and its hazards really do not, no matter what mom says before they take off alone.

According to Driessen, pedestrian survival skills, including a full comprehension of road signs, depth, distance, and speed perception may not be mastered until as late as age 10 or more.

"Yet, many parents assume that a child is a cautious, accomplished pedestrian by the time he or she enters grade school," he said.

For instance, in a Swedish study cited by Dr. Driessen, boys and girls misinterpreted the school crossing warning signs bearing the black silhouette of children running. Children thought it was safe for them to run across the street at the point where the signs stood.

"We think kids learn after they have been told once or twice, but they do not. Instructions about crossing the street must be repeated many, many times," said Driessen.

"And you must follow-up by watching their behavior to see that they stop and look both ways before crossing a street at any point."

Driessen also suggests that adults be as graphic as necessary in explaining in terms that children can understand about the consequences of being hit by a car.

Why this is necessary is clear, he says. One out of every four pedestrians killed by motor vehicles in 1972 was a child under 14 years old, showing that children are overrepresented among pedestrian fatalities.

Does Personality Type Determine Sleep Patterns?

How long we sleep may reveal something of our personality.

According to Ernest S. Hartmann, M.D., associate professor of psychiatry at Tufts University School of Medicine and director of the Sleep and Dream Laboratory at Boston State Hospital, personality type and life-style are intricately related to the amount of sleep needed.

Dr. Hartmann bases his findings on sleep-laboratory studies which focused on two specific group of sleepers: "Those who described themselves as short sleepers (who slept an average of 5½ hours a night) and those who described themselves as long sleepers (who slept an average of 9½ hours a night)."

As a group, short sleepers were found to be "efficient, energetic and ambitious people who needed to work hard and to keep busy. They were relatively sure of themselves, socially adept, decisive, satisfied with themselves and their lives." Few complaints were expressed by this group of either their own life situations, politics or the state of the world. Hartmann characterized their social and political views as "somewhat conformist" without any desire to rock-the-boat, in an article in Family Circle magazine.

Short sleepers were extroverted and not considered to be "worriers," possibly because they left themselves little if any unstructured time in which to lapse into reflective thought. "They seemed relatively free from psychological difficulties; but insofar as they had such difficulties, they tended to avoid problems by keeping busy or by denying them."

Long sleepers could not as easily be categorized as a group. Holding a variety of different jobs, they tended to be less conformist and more critical in both social and political thinking. While none of the long sleepers studied suffered serious emotional difficulties, "most had mild or moderate neurotic problems."

In general, the group did not appear to be very sure either of themselves or of their life choices. "They were definitely 'worriers' who let their problems 'go to their heads' and who spent considerable time mulling over these problems."

Various patterns emerged from Dr. Hartmann's studies. "More sleep is needed by people with personalities or life-styles characterized by worry or by depression and anxiety, and by people who tend to feel their problems rather than push them aside." While long sleepers may seem to be more neurotic than their short sleeping counterparts, they also are more unconventional and possibly more creative.

Short sleepers seemed to function "along smooth, previously laid-down paths — whereas the long sleepers were engaged in worrying, new learning and at times charting new pathways."

Perhaps, says Hartmann, "Long sleep may . . . have some function in dealing with or restoring the brain and psyche after a number of days of worry, depression or after difficult new learning — perhaps after any internal conflict."

Sleep requirements may also show marked similarities. Increased need for sleep can be characterized by "increased mental, emotional or physical work; whereas decreased sleep can be associated with periods when things are going well."

Summing up his research, Dr. Hartmann says, "The changes in the direction of increased sleep are found at times when there is a focus inward, on the self. An outward focus on work for instance, is often associated with decreased sleep need."

Opening lead - queen of clubs.

Assume you're in four spades and West leads a club. You can see when dummy appears that there is no way to avoid losing a spade, a heart and a club, so all your thoughts are turned to losing only those three tricks, if possible.

You are sure to fail if the trumps are divided 4-1 (or 5-0), regardless of what you do, so you start by assuming they are divided 3-2.

You likewise assume that the hearts are not divided 3-3, for if they are you have no problem — the contract will come home on any reasonable line of play.

Your chief concern should be to protect yourself against a 4-2 heart division. Accordingly, after winning the club lead and cashing the ace of trumps, you play a low heart.

In the actual hand, this play succeeds against any defense. Whatever happens next, you draw a second round of trumps, cash the A-K of hearts, and ruff the heart nine in dummy to limit yourself to three losers.

Note that you cannot achieve this result if you start by cashing the A-K of trumps and then play the A-K and another heart. West wins, draws dummy's last trump, cashes the jack of hearts, and waits patiently for the setting trick in clubs. It would also be fatal to start with three rounds of hearts. West would win and play a fourth heart for East to overruff the dummy.

The hand demonstrates the importance of planning the play on the basis of workable assumptions. Declarer shouldn't spend his time worrying about a 4-1 trump break, or a 5-1 heart break, because these contingencies render the contract unmanageable.

Instead, he should think along positive lines and assume the existence of only those distributions that permit the hand to be made. To think otherwise is self-defeating.

Apples Are Abundant Now

Fresh apples will be abundant in retail outlets throughout the nation in the next few weeks.

Washington, the leading apple producing state with nearly 30% of the 1973 U.S. production and the bulk of current supplies, reported an all-time record inventory of Delicious apples as of April 1, most of which is in controlled atmosphere storage.

At the end of March, U.S cold storage holdings of all apples were 40% larger than at the same time last year, and 12% larger than the average of the past three years.

Many Children Do Not Understand Traffic Environment

● "Johnny, remember not to cross in the middle of the block."

Women In Insurance

They're Not 'Office Help'

Insurance women "are not only ignored, but discouraged from more active participation in the industry," said June Harrison, Certified Professional Insurance Women, who is secretary to insurance executive Wendell Groth.

"The men are accepted without question," she added.

Mrs. Harrison, a licensed insurance agent herself, will address insurance women from across the state at the 1974 Powder Puff Clinic to be held Wednesday and Thursday at the Villa Inn in Norfolk.

The workshop is sponsored by the Nebraska Association of Mutual Insurance Agents and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension Division.

"So many people you work for look at you as office help and don't think of you as being aggressive," said Mrs. Harrison. She thinks that factor has contributed to the noticeable absence of female insurance agents in the field.

"They should be encouraged," Mrs. Harrison added. "But it depends on the women themselves . . . They must decide they can do something besides the type of work the men don't want to do."

And the National Association of Insurance women of which she is regional director has been a forerunner in the forefront, encouraging women working in the insurance industry to acquire expertise and professionalism.

To do that, the NAIW established, in 1968, a series of insurance courses offered by the Insurance Institute of America, leading to the title Certified Professional Insurance Woman.

To date, about 70 women in the midwestern area have completed the course, designed "to increase knowledge of insurance and give (women) a professional standing to enable them to get jobs," said Mrs. Harrison.

The organization also "encourages its members to set higher standards so they can compete in the outside world . . . to establish self-confidence."

"What I'm trying to put across to the gals (in the insurance business) is just about what they want to make it . . . They should participate, educate themselves, upgrade their standards."

Call Him And Apologize

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a son who was my whole life until this happened. He was married for 18 years and had two lovely children. Then all of a sudden he left his wife and family to go live with a man!

He called to tell me about it. My world was shattered. When he was younger, I sometimes wondered if he was homosexual. I noticed a few signs, but I never would accept it. In my hysteria, I screamed at him over the phone: "As far as I'm concerned, you just died. In fact, drop dead. I never want to see you again!" Then I hung up.

He and his wife must have some kind of understanding because she doesn't seem nearly as upset as I. I'm told he spent last Christmas Eve with his family, helped with the tree, and everything went smoothly.

Abby, dear, I am not without sin. Was I wrong to sit in judgment and condemn him? Should I accept him for what he is? We were always so close and really loved each other. Should I call him and apologize? Please, Abby, tell me what to do.

BROKENHEARTED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: When we do the right thing, we feel good about it. When we do the wrong thing, we feel bad. Call him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been considering beginning a family, but we aren't completely certain that we want to, for various reasons. However, here is one reason in particular which bothers me. I have always been a rather possessive person, and it is important to me to be the most important person in my husband's life.

I'm afraid if I had a child, the child might become more important to my husband than I am and I would then become jealous of my own child. I've seen it happen in some families.

I have caught myself feeling jealous when my husband shows affection for our dog. Now, wouldn't it be terrible to feel that way about your own child? Does this sound far out to you, or have you come across this problem before? And what should I do about it?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: If you're jealous of a dog, forget about a family. It shouldn't happen to a child.

DEAR ABBY: I finally met a man I can be serious about, and there are only two things wrong with him.

One: When we go out to dine, he cuts all his meat into little bite-sized pieces as though he were preparing it for a 4-year-old child, or a dog!

The other thing: When a lady comes into a room and he is seated, he never stands up.

How can I get him to correct these two faults without hurting his feelings? He would be perfect otherwise.

SERIOUS ABOUT HIM

DEAR SERIOUS: Tell him lovingly that if it weren't for two minor flaws in etiquette, he would be perfect! Then gently explain. Now, what man would resent a little constructive criicism in order to attain perfection? If yours does, he has more than only two faults.

DEAR ABBY: In my work I deal with the public. My supervisor told me that the use of the words "ma'am" and "sir" is not proper — that a "Thank you," or a simple "yes" or "no" is sufficient.

He insists that when one uses "ma'am" and "sir" he implies that he is socially beneath the person he is speaking to.

Is my spervisor correct? I don't share his views.

NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR NORTH: I don't share his views either. But customs vary in different parts of the country (or world). In Iowa, where I grew up, "ma'am" and "sir" were used to show respect and had nothing to do with one's social position.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PROVED MY LOVE IN COLUMBUS": If he comes near you again, call the police. Or do you want to try for two?

Opening lead - queen of clubs.

Assume you're in four spades and West leads a club. You can see when dummy appears that there is no way to avoid losing a spade, a heart and a club, so all your thoughts are turned to losing only those three tricks, if possible.

You are sure to fail if the trumps are divided 4-1 (or 5-0), regardless of what you do, so you start by assuming they are divided 3-2.

You likewise assume that the hearts are not divided 3-3, for if they are you have no problem — the contract will come home on any reasonable line of play.

Your chief concern should be to protect yourself against a 4-2 heart division. Accordingly, after winning the club lead and cashing the ace of trumps, you play a low heart.

In the actual hand, this play succeeds against any defense. Whatever happens next, you draw a second round of trumps, cash the A-K of hearts, and ruff the heart nine in dummy to limit yourself to three losers.

Note that you cannot achieve this result if you start by cashing the A-K of trumps and then play the A-K and another heart. West wins, draws dummy's last trump, cashes the jack of hearts, and waits patiently for the setting trick in clubs. It would also be fatal to start with three rounds of hearts. West would win and play a fourth heart for East to overruff the dummy.

The hand demonstrates the importance of planning the play on the basis of workable assumptions. Declarer shouldn't spend his time worrying about a 4-1 trump break, or a 5-1 heart break, because these contingencies render the contract unmanageable.

Instead, he should think along positive lines and assume the existence of only those distributions that permit the hand to be made. To think otherwise is self-defeating.

Apples Are Abundant Now

Fresh apples will be abundant in retail outlets throughout the nation in the next few weeks.

Washington, the leading apple producing state with nearly 30% of the 1973 U.S. production and the bulk of current supplies, reported an all-time record inventory of Delicious apples as of April 1, most of which is in controlled atmosphere storage.

At the end of March, U.S cold storage holdings of all apples were 40% larger than at the same time last year, and 12% larger than the average of the past three years.

Many Developers Fear Stunting Of Their Growth . . .

Shopping Centers' Future Said Cloudy

©The New York Times

By ISADORE BARMASH

New York — With more than half of the country's retail business already being done in some 14,000 shopping centers and with many more suburban than urban stores being built, the future would appear to be bright for those who build, operate or conduct their businesses in shopping centers.

But such is not the case.

The future appears to hold a number of hurdles to continued growth of big retailing in the areas proliferating from the cities. Many center developers fear a stunting of their growth two or three years from now when current projects — several hundred new centers are on the boards — become realities.

Several Pressures

The negative pressures appear to be coming from several areas:

The federal government considers the developers polluters because their 20-acre to 100-acre complexes are a magnet for cars and create widespread gas emission. Many communities are limiting the land available for commercial use despite the tax income and other dollars it provides.

Also inflation and labor costs are causing costs of constructing centers to rise about 2% a month, or almost 25% a year. And cutbacks in residential housing starts could easily mean an erosion in the suburban population growth.

Moreover, the recent adverse effect on suburban shopping centers caused by the gasoline shortage could result in fundamental changes in shopping habits, such as an unwillingness to drive more than a few miles.

Signs For Future

These problems have already combined to create several recent developments that may be indicative of the future.

New attention is being paid to older centers closer to the cities. The Eatontown Shopping Center in New Jewsey, operated by Arlen Realty and Development Corp., is being remodeled and expanded from an open to a closed, all-weather mall and from two major stores to more.

The original 600,000-square feet will grow to about 1.4 million. "We already have the zoning and the ecology considerations taken care of," said Arthur G. Cohen, chairman of Arlen's, "so why shouldn't we capitalize on it?"

Several in-city centers recently began attracting customers well enough to invite new consideration of opening shopping centers within city limits. In New York, the new Queens Center, in which the anchor stores are Abraham & Straus and Ohrbach's, is cited as an example.

'Going Vertical'

High land costs and the rising costs of building are causing an increasing number of developers to "go vertical" in existing centers, building multi-story parking lots, and additional floors on stores, and to redesign other centers to capitalize on land already in use.

Some cities or metropolitan areas have already sharply limited construction of new centers.

In the Washington, D.C., area, Fairfax County, Va., has decided to adhere to a severe restriction of close to "no growth," while Montgomery County, Md., is concerned about the lack of sewers.

Limits In Florida

In Florida, a state generally considered to be one of the country'a fastest growing economically, St. Petersburg and Boca Raton have also announced limitations on new centers.

Areas and sites previously spurned because they were either too close to cities or to already-built centers are being considered.

Many of these problems and issues generated discussion recently at the Toronto convention of the International Council of Shopping Centers.

75 to 100 To Be Built

Albert Sussman, executive vice president of the council, said that 75 to 100 regional centers, with up to four department stores, would be built this year. "But the number of 'supers,' centers with five or six major stores, will probably be curtailed because of costs, high interest rates and especially environmental regulations," he said.

Progress has been made in persuading the Environmental Protection Agency to understand some of the developers' problems with the agency's regulations. But James C. McClune, the outgoing council president, said suits were being filed by the council, a number of retailers and a large number of California city agencies to obtain a review of the agency's regulations.

The suits are being filed in 11 federal circuit courts.

The shopping-center trend has brought economic benefits. Now, with charges of pollution and overcommercialization of land, developers are concerned about their future.

Free Car Wash . . . Inside And Out

Students at Robbinsdale (Minn.) Senior High School wonder how to get their cars out of the floodwaters. Torrential rains and strong winds pelted much of Minnesota Tuesday and caused a flash flood in the school's parking lot. Some students were fortunate enough to remove their cars before the flood hit; others were not so lucky. Later in the day, the waters receded.

Aspirin Dangerous Cure For Alcoholic Hangover?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aspirin may prove a dangerous remedy for an alcoholic hangover, medical experts told the Senate monopoly subcommittee Tuesday.

Medical Prof. Stewart C. Harvey said aspirin breaks down barriers in the stomach that, when not weakened by alcohol, would normally prevent stomach acid from damaging the stomach itself.

"Adding the insult of aspirin on top of the insult of overindulgence in alcohol is unsafe," said Harvey, a pharmacology professor at the University of Utah College of Medicine.

Dr. Howard Spiro, chief of the gastrointestinal unit at the Yale University School of Medicine, said, "Alcohol adds to the harmful effect of aspirin in promoting erosion in the stomach."

Harvey also said that the use of an antacid containing aspirin to combat stomach upset caused by spicy foods may out to be damaging.

Harvey recommended that the word "antacid" be removed from the label of any aspirin-containing product.

Harvey acknowledged later in an interview that he had little clinical evidence to support his position, based primarily on reports he has read.

Dr. Franz J. Ingelfinger, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, described as circumstantial evidence indicating massive gastro-intestinal bleeding was frequently caused by the preceding ingestion of aspirin.

Harvey concurred, saying, "The problem is whether the ulcer was already there or was created by the aspirin."

Harvey, Ingelfinger and Spiro are members of a Food and Drug Administration panel studying antacids.

Social Security Costs Will Exceed Income By 1980, Report Says

(c) WXASHINGTON Star-

Washington — A long-awaited trustees' report for the Social Security Administration shows that the system's costs will exceed its income by the end of the decade, and that the problem will become worse each year after that.

Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell said Tuesday that the long-range projections for Social Security show expenses exceeding tax resources by an average 2.98% over the next 75 years, a staggering amount, when the size of the system's fund — $67.7 billion this year — is considered.

Cardwell said that the new findings, due primarily to the apparent trend towards "zero population growth," mean that the financing of Social Security will have to be changed significantly in coming years in order to avoid bankruptcy. But he stressed that Congress still has a few years to consider the problem before it becomes pressing.

The new population projections showing the trend toward zero population growth are not expected to have any significant impact on the system until about 1990, when the work force will become proportionally smaller in relation to the nation's population as a whole.

"The main thing we want to emphasize is that because of the difficulty in forecasting the future, our estimates in themselves are imprecise," Cardwell said. "There is time to examine what happens in the face of a changing population, but the tools we have now to do it with do (not) begin to take such things into account," Cardwell said.

He said the financial deficit forecast for the Social Security funds would lend ammunition to critics of the system who wanted to scrap the payroll tax that currently pays for the system and support it with the federal government's general revenues, but he said the personally opposed the idea, since it would destroy the system's traditional financial independence.

Cool, Casual Summer Clothes Urged

Washington (UPI) — In the name of energy conservation, federal energy chief John C. Sawhill urged male office workers Tuesday to doff neckties this summer and to wear open-necked, short-sleeved shirts on the job.

Sawhill tried to set an example by working in his office with his tie off and his shirt open at the neck. The idea is that thermostats can be set higher — conserving fuel for air conditioning.

Sawhill did not suggest specifically how women should dress at the office. In a statement he said only that women employes should wear "neat and comfortable clothes" to keep cool.

And he recognized that among men "there will still be occasions when a coat and tie will obviously be appropriate."

Sawhill instituted the casual dress code for the Federal Energy Administration and urged private industry and other government agencies to follow his example.

Previously he asked Americans to set thermostats at 78 degrees this summer to conserve energy. A difference of six degrees in a thermostat setting can cut cooling costs by 15%, he said.

"The setting of dress codes remains the appropriate discretionary function of government agency and industry heads," Sawhill said.

Rail Freight Hikes Nixed Temporarily

Washington (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission told the nation's railroads Tuesday they could not increase their freight rates by 10 per cent unless they agreed to use the new money to rebuild track and upgrade their equipment.

The action came as the ICC turned down a 10 per cent hike on freight rates that was scheduled to go into effect Wednesday.

The ICC told the railroads they could refile the 10 per cent increase to be effective in 15 days if they would agree to use any revenues generated by the increase for capital improvements and deferred maintenance of plant and equipment. It also said the new revenue could be used for increased material and supply costs other than fuel.

The commission said the railroads would have to keep a record of their expenditures on a monthly basis. Failure to apply the new funds as specified would result in the cancellation of the 10 per cent hike, the ICC said.

The increase would affect all freight commodities except those which are recyclable. The rates would expire on June 30, 1975 unless otherwise ordered by the ICC.

This was the second time the ICC has turned down the increase. It refused last month to approve the hike because the railroads had not given the public enough time to file protests with the ICC over the hike.

The railroads have estimated the 10 per cent increase would produce about $1.5 billion in new revenue annually.

Women In Insurance

They're Not 'Office Help'

Insurance women "are not only ignored, but discouraged from more active participation in the industry," said June Harrison, Certified Professional Insurance Women, who is secretary to insurance executive Wendell Groth.

"The men are accepted without question," she added.

Mrs. Harrison, a licensed insurance agent herself, will address insurance women from across the state at the 1974 Powder Puff Clinic to be held Wednesday and Thursday at the Villa Inn in Norfolk.

The workshop is sponsored by the Nebraska Association of Mutual Insurance Agents and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension Division.

"So many people you work for look at you as office help and don't think of you as being aggressive," said Mrs. Harrison. She thinks that factor has contributed to the noticeable absence of female insurance agents in the field.

"They should be encouraged," Mrs. Harrison added. "But it depends on the women themselves . . . They must decide they can do something besides the type of work the men don't want to do."

And the National Association of Insurance women of which she is regional director has been a forerunner in the forefront, encouraging women working in the insurance industry to acquire expertise and professionalism.

To do that, the NAIW established, in 1968, a series of insurance courses offered by the Insurance Institute of America, leading to the title Certified Professional Insurance Woman.

To date, about 70 women in the midwestern area have completed the course, designed "to increase knowledge of insurance and give (women) a professional standing to enable them to get jobs," said Mrs. Harrison.

The organization also "encourages its members to set higher standards so they can compete in the outside world . . . to establish self-confidence."

"What I'm trying to put across to the gals (in the insurance business) is just about what they want to make it . . . They should participate, educate themselves, upgrade their standards."

Call Him And Apologize

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a son who was my whole life until this happened. He was married for 18 years and had two lovely children. Then all of a sudden he left his wife and family to go live with a man!

He called to tell me about it. My world was shattered. When he was younger, I sometimes wondered if he was homosexual. I noticed a few signs, but I never would accept it. In my hysteria, I screamed at him over the phone: "As far as I'm concerned, you just died. In fact, drop dead. I never want to see you again!" Then I hung up.

He and his wife must have some kind of understanding because she doesn't seem nearly as upset as I. I'm told he spent last Christmas Eve with his family, helped with the tree, and everything went smoothly.

Abby, dear, I am not without sin. Was I wrong to sit in judgment and condemn him? Should I accept him for what he is? We were always so close and really loved each other. Should I call him and apologize? Please, Abby, tell me what to do.

BROKENHEARTED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: When we do the right thing, we feel good about it. When we do the wrong thing, we feel bad. Call him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been considering beginning a family, but we aren't completely certain that we want to, for various reasons. However, here is one reason in particular which bothers me. I have always been a rather possessive person, and it is important to me to be the most important person in my husband's life.

I'm afraid if I had a child, the child might become more important to my husband than I am and I would then become jealous of my own child. I've seen it happen in some families.

I have caught myself feeling jealous when my husband shows affection for our dog. Now, wouldn't it be terrible to feel that way about your own child? Does this sound far out to you, or have you come across this problem before? And what should I do about it?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: If you're jealous of a dog, forget about a family. It shouldn't happen to a child.

DEAR ABBY: I finally met a man I can be serious about, and there are only two things wrong with him.

One: When we go out to dine, he cuts all his meat into little bite-sized pieces as though he were preparing it for a 4-year-old child, or a dog!

The other thing: When a lady comes into a room and he is seated, he never stands up.

How can I get him to correct these two faults without hurting his feelings? He would be perfect otherwise.

SERIOUS ABOUT HIM

DEAR SERIOUS: Tell him lovingly that if it weren't for two minor flaws in etiquette, he would be perfect! Then gently explain. Now, what man would resent a little constructive criticism in order to attain perfection? If yours does, he has more than only two faults.

DEAR ABBY: In my work I deal with the public. My supervisor told me that the use of the words "ma'am" and "sir" is not proper — that a "Thank you," or a simple "yes" or "no" is sufficient.

He insists that when one uses "ma'am" and "sir" he implies that he is socially beneath the person he is speaking to.

Is my spervisor correct? I don't share his views.

NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR NORTH: I don't share his views either. But customs vary in different parts of the country (or world). In Iowa, where I grew up, "ma'am" and "sir" were used to show respect and had nothing to do with one's social position.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PROVED MY LOVE IN COLUMBUS": If he comes near you again, call the police. Or do you want to try for two?

Many Developers Fear Stunting Of Their Growth . . .

Shopping Centers' Future Said Cloudy

The New York Times

By ISADORE BARMASH

New York — With more than half of the country's retail business already being done in some 14,000 shopping centers and with many more suburban than urban stores being built, the future would appear to be bright for those who build, operate or conduct their businesses in shopping centers.

But such is not the case.

The future appears to hold a number of hurdles to continued growth of big retailing in the areas proliferating from the cities. Many center developers fear a stunting of their growth two or three years from now when current projects — several hundred new centers are on the boards — become realities.

Several Pressures

The negative pressures appear to be coming from several areas:

The federal government considers the developers polluters because their 20-acre to 100-acre complexes are a magnet for cars and create widespread gas emission. Many communities are limiting the land available for commercial use despite the tax income and other dollars it provides.

Also inflation and labor costs are causing costs of constructing centers to rise about 2% a month, or almost 25% a year. And cutbacks in residential housing starts could easily mean an erosion in the suburban population growth.

Moreover, the recent adverse effect on suburban shopping centers caused by the gasoline shortage could result in fundamental changes in shopping habits, such as an unwillingness to drive more than a few miles.

Signs For Future

These problems have already combined to create several recent developments that may be indicative of the future.

New attention is being paid to older centers closer to the cities. The Eatontown Shopping Center in New Jewsey, operated by Arlen Realty and Development Corp., is being remodeled and expanded from an open to a closed, all-weather mall and from two major stores to more.

The original 600,000-square feet will grow to about 1.4 million. "We already have the zoning and the ecology considerations taken care of," said Arthur G. Cohen, chairman of Arlen's, "so why shouldn't we capitalize on it?"

Several in-city centers recently began attracting customers well enough to invite new consideration of opening shopping centers within city limits. In New York, the new Queens Center, in which the anchor stores are Abraham & Straus and Ohrbach's, is cited as an example.

'Going Vertical'

High land costs and the rising costs of building are causing an increasing number of developers to "go vertical" in existing centers, building multi-story parking lots, and additional floors on stores, and to redesign other centers to capitalize on land already in use.

Some cities or metropolitan areas have already sharply limited construction of new centers.

In the Washington, D.C., area, Fairfax County, Va., has decided to adhere to a severe restriction of close to "no growth," while Montgomery County, Md., is concerned about the lack of sewers.

Limits In Florida

In Florida, a state generally considered to be one of the country'a fastest growing economically, St. Petersburg and Boca Raton have also announced limitations on new centers.

Areas and sites previously spurned because they were either too close to cities or to already-built centers are being considered.

Many of these problems and issues generated discussion recently at the Toronto convention of the International Council of Shopping Centers.

75 to 100 To Be Built

Albert Sussman, executive vice president of the council, said that 75 to 100 regional centers, with up to four department stores, would be built this year. "But the number of 'supers,' centers with five or six major stores, will probably be curtailed because of costs, high interest rates and especially environmental regulations," he said.

Progress has been made in persuading the Environmental Protection Agency to understand some of the developers' problems with the agency's regulations. But James C. McClune, the outgoing council president, said suits were being filed by the council, a number of retailers and a large number of California city agencies to obtain a review of the agency's regulations.

The suits are being filed in 11 federal circuit courts.

The shopping-center trend has brought economic benefits. Now, with charges of pollution and overcommercialization of land, developers are concerned about their future.

Free Car Wash . . . Inside And Out

Students at Robbinsdale (Minn.) Senior High School wonder how to get their cars out of the floodwaters. Torrential rains and strong winds pelted much of Minnesota Tuesday and caused a flash flood in the school's parking lot. Some students were fortunate enough to remove their cars before the flood hit; others were not so lucky. Later in the day, the waters receded.

Aspirin Dangerous Cure For Alcoholic Hangover?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aspirin may prove a dangerous remedy for an alcoholic hangover, medical experts told the Senate monopoly subcommittee Tuesday.

Medical Prof. Stewart C. Harvey said aspirin breaks down barriers in the stomach that, when not weakened by alcohol, would normally prevent stomach acid from damaging the stomach itself.

"Adding the insult of aspirin on top of the insult of overindulgence in alcohol is unsafe," said Harvey, a pharmacology professor at the University of Utah College of Medicine.

Dr. Howard Spiro, chief of the gastrointestinal unit at the Yale University School of Medicine, said, "Alcohol adds to the harmful effect of aspirin in promoting erosion in the stomach."

Harvey also said that the use of an antacid containing aspirin to combat stomach upset caused by spicy foods may out to be damaging.

Harvey recommended that the word "antacid" be removed from the label of any aspirin-containing product.

Harvey acknowledged later in an interview that he had little clinical evidence to support his position, based primarily on reports he has read.

Dr. Franz J. Ingelfinger, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, described as circumstantial evidence indicating massive gastro-intestinal bleeding was frequently caused by the preceding ingestion of aspirin.

Harvey concurred, saying, "The problem is whether the ulcer was already there or was created by the aspirin."

Harvey, Ingelfinger and Spiro are members of a Food and Drug Administration panel studying antacids.

Social Security Costs Will Exceed Income By 1980, Report Says

(c) WXASHINGTON Star-Washington — A long-awaited trustees' report for the Social Security Administration shows that the system's costs will exceed its income by the end of the decade, and that the problem will become worse each year after that.

Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell said Tuesday that the long-range projections for Social Security show expenses exceeding tax resources by an average 2.98% over the next 75 years, a staggering amount, when the size of the system's fund — $67.7 billion this year — is considered.

Cardwell said that the new findings, due primarily to the apparent trend towards "zero population growth," mean that the financing of Social Security will have to be changed significantly in coming years in order to avoid bankruptcy. But he stressed that Congress still has a few years to consider the problem before it becomes pressing.

The new population projections showing the trend toward zero population growth are not expected to have any significant impact on the system until about 1990, when the work force will become proportionally smaller in relation to the nation's population as a whole.

"The main thing we want to emphasize is that because of the difficulty in forecasting the future, our estimates in themselves are imprecise," Cardwell said. "There is time to examine what happens in the face of a changing population, but the tools we have now to do it with do (not) begin to take such things into account," Cardwell said.

He said the financial deficit forecast for the Social Security funds would lend ammunition to critics of the system who wanted to scrap the payroll tax that currently pays for the system and support it with the federal government's general revenues, but he said the personally opposed the idea, since it would destroy the system's traditional financial independence.

Cool, Casual Summer Clothes Urged

Washington (UPI) — In the name of energy conservation, federal energy chief John C. Sawhill urged male office workers Tuesday to doff neckties this summer and to wear open-necked, short-sleeved shirts on the job.

Sawhill tried to set an example by working in his office with his tie off and his shirt open at the neck. The idea is that thermostats can be set higher — conserving fuel for air conditioning.

Sawhill did not suggest specifically how women should dress at the office. In a statement he said only that women employes should wear "neat and comfortable clothes" to keep cool.

And he recognized that among men "there will still be occasions when a coat and tie will obviously be appropriate."

Sawhill instituted the casual dress code for the Federal Energy Administration and urged private industry and other government agencies to follow his example.

Previously he asked Americans to set thermostats at 78 degrees this summer to conserve energy. A difference of six degrees in a thermostat setting can cut cooling costs by 15%, he said.

"The setting of dress codes remains the appropriate discretionary function of government agency and industry heads," Sawhill said.

Rail Freight Hikes Nixed Temporarily

Washington (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission told the nation's railroads Tuesday they could not increase their freight rates by 10 per cent unless they agreed to use the new money to rebuild track and upgrade their equipment.

The action came as the ICC turned down a 10 per cent hike on freight rates that was scheduled to go into effect Wednesday.

The ICC told the railroads they could refile the 10 per cent increase to be effective in 15 days if they would agree to use any revenues generated by the increase for capital improvements and deferred maintenance of plant and equipment. It also said the new revenue could be used for increased material and supply costs other than fuel.

The commission said the railroads would have to keep a record of their expenditures on a monthly basis. Failure to apply the new funds as specified would result in the cancellation of the 10 per cent hike, the ICC said.

The increase would affect all freight commodities except those which are recyclable. The rates would expire on June 30, 1975 unless otherwise ordered by the ICC.

This was the second time the ICC has turned down the increase. It refused last month to approve the hike because the railroads had not given the public enough time to file protests with the ICC over the hike.

The railroads have estimated the 10 per cent increase would produce about $1.5 billion in new revenue annually.

Deputy Sheriff Wonders Why 'Accident' Victim Flees Hospital

What was he running from?

That was the question Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Glenn Christiansen was posing at the end of an afternoon that got confusing when a young man jumped from a hospital cart and fled in a gown.

"The hospital called me and told me someone came in that was hurt in a motorcycle accident," Christiansen said. "So I went down."

"He was in the emergency room and I started questioning him," he said. "About that time the nurse came in and said she had to take him for x-rays and wheeled him out.

Nurse Comes Running

"The next thing I knew the nurse came running around the corner and said the guy jumped off the cart, picked up his clothes and ran."

"I'm sure he had a broken collarbone," Christiansen said.

"Then I came back down here and pretty soon I got a call and found out he turned himself in to Lincoln Police," Christiansen said.

The man told the deputy his name was Gary Lynn Searcy, 20, of Santa Ana, Calif., The reason he ran, the man said, was that he had lied about being in a motorcycle accident.

Fight With 'Buddy'

Actually, the man said, he had been injured in a fight with a "buddy", who he didn't want to get into trouble.

"We ran him on the National Crime Information Center and he wasn't wanted anywhere," Christiansen said. "The county attorney said to let him go."

And the man walked out the door — destination unknown.

"I don't quite what to make of it," Christiansen said.

Lincoln Woman, 21, Raped In Home

A 21-year-old Lincoln woman was raped in her home early Tuesday morning by a man carrying what police described as a "hand sickle."

Police said the man apparently entered the home through a rear window, waking the woman, and then raped her.

He was described as a black male about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, between 22 and 37 years old, wearing a light colored T-shirt and blue, flared jeans.

Police said that with the new case it means eight rapes and one attempted rape have occurred in north-central Lincoln in the last four months.

In all the cases the description of the assailant and many of the details of the crime have had similarities. A number of suspects have been questioned in connection with the incidents.

$160,000 Is OKd For Resurfacing

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has authorized the expenditure of an additional $160,000 on arterial street resurfacing projects.

The mayor approved the transfer of that amount from the downtown parking garage fund.

In a letter to Schwartzkopf, Public Works Director Bob Obering said the $160,000 was budgeted to pay the interest on the bonds for the 1,000-car parking garage in the Centrum.

"It has become rather obvious that the interest on the bonds will not be needed during this fiscal year," Obering said.

The additional funds will bring to $760,000 the amount of money slated for resurfacing of arterial streets.

Hunger Striker Dies

London (UPI)—Michael Gaughan, 24, an Irishman on a hunger strike in a British jail since March 30, died, the Home Office said. Gaughan had been sentenced to seven years in prison for robbing a North London bank in 1971.

Students Plan Building Survey

A team of college engineering students will begin surveying Lincoln buildings next week to determine the protective capabilities of the structures from natural disasters and from nuclear detonations.

Civil Defense Director George Drake announced Tuesday that the students are from the Omaha District of the Corps of Engineers.

Drake said the project is an extension of the National Shelter Survey begun ten years ago in which mines, caves, tunnels and buildings were designated as public shelters.

The new survey will take about four hours per building, Drake said. He asked building owners and managers to cooperate with the students who will carry identification cards.

Iron Workers Get Proposal For Contract

Lincoln iron workers got an expected contract proposal from the Building Contractors Employes Association of Lincoln during negotiations Tuesday afternoon, according to J. Z. Sexton, business agent for Iron Workers Local 21 in Lincoln.

Members are to vote on the proposal at a regular meeting Wednesday night in Omaha.

Sexton said the main points of contention are wages and working conditions.

Union members, 60 to 80 in the Lincoln area according to Sexton, have been working temporarily without a contract when the old one expired June 1.

It is the second contract proposal from the BCEA. The first, and one from the union, were refused by each side.

Iron workers are currently employed at sites including the University of Nebraska-Lincoln fieldhouse, the federal building, Hilton Hotel and the National Bank of Commerce.

Lung Group's Regional Meet Held In Lincoln

About 35 persons from southeastern Nebraska met in Lincoln Tuesday for the first meeting of Region Five of the American Lung Association of Nebraska.

The lung association was formerly known as the Nebraska Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. The new name signifies a shift in emphasis from TB to all lung diseases, according to Delmar Serafy, executive-director of the association.

The statewide meeting of the organization will be held in Omaha June 19 and 20.

Hot Springs Provide Cheap, Clean Heat In Iceland

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — In a country where they leave radiators on all summer, an oil crisis never really goes away for some people but for others it never really exists.

For example Gunnar Kristiansson figures he'll pay a little more than $1,000, about a tenth of his salary, to keep his house warm with oil heat this year.

The painful thing about it is that Kristiansson is chief engineer of Reyjkavik's Heating Service, which has sidestepped the oil shortage by providing cheap heat to 97 per cent of this capital's dwellings from natural, underground hot springs.

While Kristiansson's fuel bills were going up by about 40 per cent — he lives in the suburbs and outside the hot springs heating zone — the average homeowner in Reykjavik was paying $170 for his 12-month thermal heating bill. Inflation has increased current thermal heating charges about 22 per cent over last year, but the service says savings through the system still represent about a 75 per cent gain over what fuel costs would be.

"I've got a big house, so I'm paying way over the average," Kristiansson said. "But when I talked to a visitor from Philadelphia I found out his fuel heating charges were about double what an Icelander with the same size house would pay for thermal heat here."

The hot water comes from boreholes dug inside the city limits that pump hot water up from springs at depths to 5,400 feet. There are 14 of the pumping stations, which look like wooden fishermen's shacks, for the city of 90,000.

An uncomplicated system of pipes, set up in 1939, then distributes the hot water throughout Reykjavik. There are no boilers in houses, no chimneys and no pollution. Used hot water is drained off or recycled.

Over the long term, the price of providing thermal heat to the city will probably go up as industry's needs increase and water must be brought in from springs outside Reykjavik. But Johannes Zoega, the heating authority's general manager, says thermal heat in Iceland will always be the cheapest fuel.

Since the energy crisis began, Zoega said he has had a steady flow of visitors, notably from Japan, who have been trying to see if Iceland could furnish an example for the use of their thermal resources.

"It's very much a question of costs," Zoega said. "In the United States, for example, there are plenty of places outside the protected areas of the natural parks that could be used. I'm thinking particularly of the Imperial Valley in California. But unless you put industry right on the spot and use thermal heat that way, you've always got to pay for setting up a way of getting it to another place. In Reykjavik we've been lucky because we're sitting on the hot springs."

Conviction Stands

Montreal (UPI)—An appeals court refused to overturn the conviction of Jacques Rose on charges in connection with the kidnaping and murder of former Quebec Labor Minister Pierre LaPort in October, 1970.

Probe Is Welcome

Benjamin To Head Department

Dr. Ludy Benjamin Jr., assistant professor of psychology at Nebraska Wesleyan University, has been named to the post of head of the department of psychology, effective next fall, according to Dr. Frederick Blumer, vice president for academic affairs.

"Dr. Fawl has built a strong department, moving from about one and one-half teachers to four Ph.D. teachers. He also has been instrumental in planning the new psychology offices and laboratories in our new building that will open late next fall," Dr. Blumer said.

Deputy Sheriff Wonders Why 'Accident' Victim Flees Hospital

What was he running from?

That was the question Lancaster County Deputy Sheriff Glenn Christiansen was posing at the end of an afternoon that got confusing when a young man jumped from a hospital cart and fled in a gown

"The hospital called me and told me someone came in that was hurt in a motorcycle accident," Christiansen said "So I went down."

"He was in the emergency room and I started questioning him," he said "About that time the nurse came in and said she had to take him for x-rays and wheeled him out

Nurse Comes Running

"The next thing I knew the nurse came running around the corner and said the guy jumped off the cart, picked up his clothes and ran"

"I'm sure he had a broken collarbone," Christiansen said

"Then I came back down here and pretty soon I got a call and found out he turned himself in to Lincoln Police," Christiansen said.

The man told the deputy his name was Gary Lynn Searcy, 20, of Santa Ana, Calif , The reason he ran, the man said, was that he had lied about being in a motorcycle accident

Fight With 'Buddy'

Actually, the man said, he had been injured in a fight with a "buddy", who he didn't want to get into trouble

"We ran him on the National Crime Information Center and he wasn't wanted anywhere," Christiansen said "The county attorney said to let him go"

And the man walked out the door — destination unknown

"I don't quite what to make of it," Christiansen said

Lincoln Woman, 21, Raped In Home

A 21-year-old Lincoln woman was raped in her home early Tuesday morning by a man carrying what police described as a "hand sickle"

Police said the man apparently entered the home through a rear window, waking the woman, and then raped her

He was described as a black male about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, between 22 and 37 years old, wearing a light colored T-shirt and blue, flared jeans

Police said that with the new case it means eight rapes and one attempted rape have occurred in north-central Lincoln in the last four months

In all the cases the description of the assailant and many of the details of the crime have had similarities A number of suspects have been questioned in connection with the incidents

$160,000 Is OKd For Resurfacing

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has authorized the expenditure of an additional $160,000 on arterial street resurfacing projects

The mayor approved the transfer of that amount from the downtown parking garage fund

In a letter to Schwartzkopf, Public Works Director Bob Obering said the $160,000 was budgeted to pay the interest on the bonds for the 1,000-car parking garage in the Centrum

"It has become rather obvious that the interest on the bonds will not be needed during this fiscal year," Obering said

The additional funds will bring to $760 000 the amount of money slated for resurfacing of arterial streets

Hunger Striker Dies

London (UPI)—Michael Gaughan, 24 an Irishman on a hunger strike in a British jail since March 30, died, the Home Office said Gaughan had been sentenced to seven years in prison for robbing a North London bank in 1971

Students Plan Building Survey

A team of college engineering students will begin surveying Lincoln buildings next week to determine the protective capabilities of the structures from natural disasters and from nuclear detonations

Civil Defense Director George Drake announced Tuesday that the students are from the Omaha District of the Corps of Engineers

Drake said the project is an extension of the National Shelter Survey begun ten years ago in which mines, caves, tunnels and buildings were designated as public shelters

The new survey will take about four hours per building, Drake said He asked building owners and managers to cooperate with the students who will carry identification cards

Iron Workers Get Proposal For Contract

Lincoln iron workers got an expected contract proposal from the Building Contractors Employes Association of Lincoln during negotiations Tuesday afternoon, according to J Z Sexton, business agent for Iron Workers Local 21 in Lincoln

Members are to vote on the proposal at a regular meeting Wednesday night in Omaha

Sexton said the main points of contention are wages and working conditions

Union members, 60 to 80 in the Lincoln area according to Sexton, have been working temporarily without a contract when the old one expired June 1

It is the second contract proposal from the BCEA The first, and one from the union, were refused by each side

Iron workers are currently employed at sites including the University of Nebraska-Lincoln fieldhouse, the federal building, Hilton Hotel and the National Bank of Commerce

Lung Group's Regional Meet Held In Lincoln

About 35 persons from southeastern Nebraska met in Lincoln Tuesday for the first meeting of Region Five of the American Lung Association of Nebraska

The lung association was formerly known as the Nebraska Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association The new name signifies a shift in emphasis from TB to all lung diseases, according to Delmar Serafy, executive-director of the association

The statewide meeting of the organization will be held in Omaha June 19 and 20

Processeans Quit Church To Form New Organization

AP

FATHERS LUCIUS AND MALACHI . . . are founding ministers

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Processeans" — in large part — have become the "Founders."

They've quit a relatively new counterculture church, the Process Church of the Final Judgment, to form a still newer one, called the Foundation Church of the Millennium.

In doing so, they've changed their black garb to hopeful blue, and abandoned their former symbol — a cross encircled by a serpent — and also the idea which it represented.

"We've put Satan behind us instead of out in front," says a founding minister called Father Lucius, referring to a doctrinal conflict which he says has caused most leaders of the Process church to quit it for the new organization.

They objected to the peculiar Process teaching of the "unity of Christ and Satan" — a curiously convoluted concept that had become a sort of hallmark of the group.

"To many of us it made little sense and it generally was misconstrued," Father Lucius said in an interview. "Many people took it to mean Satan was held up as an ideal. Although this wasn't so, it was misleading and obscured the church's basic message."

That message — as set forth by the newly launched Foundation Church — is that world civilization soon will end, to be replaced by a new age free of strife and evil and ruled by God's coming Messiah.

"He may come any day," Father Lucius said. "As a more or less inspired belief, we feel it will be in our lifetimes, perhaps toward the end of the century."

The emphasis parallels an apocalyptic, end-of-time outlook that has risen lately in many of the subculture religious groups, as well as in older fundamentalist institutions stressing Bible literalism.

In the break-up of the Process Church, Father Lucius, one of its British founders in 1963, and Father Malachi, editor of its street-sold magazine, "The Process," estimated 99 per cent of its approximately 450 ministers are leaving it to take part in the new organization.

These ministers — graded upward variously as messengers, prophets, superiors and, at the top, masters — oversee a movement that has grown in 10 years to an estimated 500,000 followers, mostly clustered around a half-dozen centers in this country.

The communal-type centers to be maintained by the new group are in New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Miami and Toronto, Canada. One in Cambridge, Mass., has been closed.

Father Lucius and Father Malachi, the respective religious names of Christopher de Peyer, 35, an Englishman, and Peter McCormick, 37, an Irishman, said the new church will continue many Processean customs, its communal life-style healing services and community projects of free stores and meals for the poor.

But they've abandoned the esoteric doctrine summed up by this formula: "Christ said, 'Love your enemies.' Christ's enemy was Satan . . . Through love Christ and Satan have destroyed their enmity and come together for the end, Christ to judge, Satan to execute judgment."

The idea was the brainchild of Robert de Grimston, an Englishman who was the movement's founding mentor and who saw the "reconciliation of opposites" as a key to the end of conflict.

Father Lucius said de Grimston now is traveling somewhere in the south, teaching his viewpoint.

"It never was really explainable," said Father Malachi. "It aimed to reconcile what is seen as unreconcilable."

Hot Springs Provide Cheap, Clean Heat In Iceland

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — In a country where they leave radiators on all summer, an oil crisis never really goes away for some people but for others it never really exists.

For example Gunnar Kristiansson figures he'll pay a little more than $1,000, about a tenth of his salary, to keep his house warm with oil heat this year.

The painful thing about it is that Kristiansson is chief engineer of Reyjkavik's Heating Service, which has sidestepped the oil shortage by providing cheap heat to 97 per cent of this capital's dwellings from natural, underground hot springs.

While Kristiansson's fuel bills were going up by about 40 per cent — he lives in the suburbs and outside the hot springs heating zone — the average homeowner in Reykjavik was paying $170 for his 12-month thermal heating bill. Inflation has increased current thermal heating charges about 22 per cent over last year, but the service says savings through the system still represent about a 75 per cent gain over what fuel costs would be.

"I've got a big house, so I'm paying way over the average," Kristiansson said. "But when I talked to a visitor from Philadelphia I found out his fuel heating charges were about double what an Icelander with the same size house would pay for thermal heat here."

The hot water comes from boreholes dug inside the city limits that pump hot water up from springs at depths to 5,400 feet. There are 14 of the pumping stations, which look like wooden fishermen's shacks, for the city of 90,000.

An uncomplicated system of pipes, set up in 1939, then distributes the hot water throughout Reykjavik. There are no boilers in houses, no chimneys and no pollution. Used hot water is drained off or recycled.

Over the long term, the price of providing thermal heat to the city will probably go up as industry's needs increase and water must be brought in from springs outside Reykjavik. But Johannes Zoega, the heating authority's general manager, says thermal heat in Iceland will always be the cheapest fuel.

Since the energy crisis began, Zoega said he has had a steady flow of visitors, notably from Japan, who have been trying to see if Iceland could furnish an example for the use of their thermal resources.

"It's very much a question of costs," Zoega said. "In the United States, for example, there are plenty of places outside the protected areas of the natural parks that could be used. I'm thinking particularly of the Imperial Valley in California. But unless you put industry right on the spot and use thermal heat that way, you've always got to pay for setting up a way of getting it to another place. In Reykjavik we've been lucky because we're sitting on the hot springs."

London (AP) — George Loveday, chairman of the London Stock Exchange, says he would welcome a royal commission inquiry into the exchange's operations.

Benjamin To Head Department

Dr. Ludy Benjamin Jr., assistant professor of psychology at Nebraska Wesleyan University, has been named to the post of head of the department of psychology, effective next fall, according to Dr. Frederick Blumer, vice president for academic affairs.

"Dr. Fawl has built a strong department, moving from about one and one-half teachers to four Ph.D. teachers. He also has been instrumental in planning the new psychology offices and laboratories in our new building that will open late next fall," Dr. Blumer said.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast For Wednesday

Leo with charisma: Willie Shoemaker Taurus with quiet dignity: Joe Louis. Capricorn in search of himself: Muhammad Ali. Pisces in search: Jackie Gleason. Virgo still looking: Racquel Welch. Pisces who has found it? Lawrence Durrell. Capricorn who has it and uses it: Henry Miller. Pisces who had it and misplaced it: Jerry Lewis. Pisces who has enough of it to share; Anais Nin. Most magnetic Aries: Bette Davis. Taurus putting together a jigsaw puzzle: Glenn Ford. Libran with some answers: Jayne Meadows. Cancer with questions: Merv Griffin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go slow-and-easy. Aspects for you are such that you gain only by utilizing proverbial light touch. Heavy-handed methods backfire. Accent is on travel, knowledge, institutions and ability to use available materials. Taurus, Libra persons may be involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to reach a bit further than originally anticipated. Eschew apparent shortcuts — get to heart of matters. See as is — realistically. Question concerning real estate could arise. Money may not flow as easily as desired. Wait.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message for valid hint. Time is on your side — play waiting game. Contract which ties your hands could be unwelcome restraint. Know it and insist on freedom to organize. Study assets, liabilities. Older individual is involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find loophole, chance for greater freedom of action. Be alert to opportunity. Work associate will co-operate. Aries, Libra individuals could figure prominently. Finish task. You will receive recognition. Your product, efforts will reach more people than you thought possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your ability to communicate is enhanced. You act in a more creative, independent manner Opposite sex is attracted. Ego receives a boost. Another Leo and an Aquarian could be involved. New project is promising.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ability to get to heart of matters is accented. Be specific and insist others deal with facts, not fantasies. Aquarian figures prominently Teach and learn — share knowledge. Be sure that promises are kept — on all sides.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accentuate humor, sociability. Be versatile; display sense of beauty, humor. Art object is in picture and your opinion probably will be sought. Be flexible. Avoid attitude of stubbornness — instead exude goodwill, encouragement. Short trip is beneficial.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid expanding too quickly. Don't skip essentials. Read between the lines and be aware of fine print. Money is involved. Find out who owes what — then evaluate your own position. No one is giving you something for nothing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cycle is at peak and you succeed, make creative changes and impress one you admire. Property value is enhanced. Your security rating could soar — you are on right track and key is to know it and be confident about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home, family, the way you live, your lifestyle — these are spotlighted. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently You are asked about fixtures, furniture, lamps, pictures. Be patient. Learn and teach. Coopeate with person who does have your best interests at heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friends may disagree among themselves. Don't be drawn into conflict. See persons as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. One who is vindictive would like to see you trapped in futile efforts. Know it and protect yourself in clinches.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't overspend — consult one in authority. You could receive guidance which enables you to make purchase for much less than quoted price. Toss aside inhibitions. Ask. State needs, requirements. Response could be favorable enough so that you get new financial lease on life.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you investigate, write, travel, explore. You seldom are satisfied to rest on laurels. Instead, you search, wanting to know why, how, who — what makes people tick. March was important and December also will be significant for you this year Gemini and Virgo and Sagittarius people play key roles in your life. You are restless, charming and can talk too much.

NWU Recipient Of Woods Grant

Nebraska Wesleyan University has received a $5,000 grant from the Woods Charitable Fund, Inc., of Chicago and Lincoln to renew the purchase fund for Elder Gallery, according to NWU President Vance D. Rogers.

The Elder Gallery purchase fund will be used to add Twentieth Century works of art to the gallery's permanent collection, Dr. Rogers said.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Aspirin, improperly used, is the number one child poisoner according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

If a small child suddenly begins to breathe deeply, or begins vomiting, or seems lethargic and confused, he may have swallowed too many aspirin tablets. You should be certain.

If a child takes an aspirin overdose, he should receive medical help immediately. Do not give baking soda or other home remedies as they may speed the body's absorption of the poison. The best way to prevent poisoning is to keep all medicine in a locked or out-of-reach cabinet.

Medicine for children should always be called just that, never candy. Keep in mind that an adult-size aspirin contains ten times the dosage of baby aspirin and more than three times the dosage of so-called children's aspirin. The Nebraska Medical Association warns: Never give a small child a pain reliever except under a physician's direction.

Processeans Quit Church To Form New Organization

AP

FATHERS LUCIUS AND MALACHI . . . are founding ministers

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Processeans" — in large part — have become the "Founders."

They've quit a relatively new counterculture church, the Process Church of the Final Judgment, to form a still newer one, called the Foundation Church of the Millennium.

In doing so, they've changed their black garb to hopeful blue, and abandoned their former symbol — a cross encircled by a serpent — and also the idea which it represented.

"We've put Satan behind us instead of out in front," says a founding minister called Father Lucius, referring to a doctrinal conflict which he says has caused most leaders of the Process church to quit it for the new organization.

They objected to the peculiar Process teaching of the "unity of Christ and Satan" — a curiously convoluted concept that had become a sort of hallmark of the group.

"To many of us it made little sense and it generally was misconstrued," Father Lucius said in an interview. "Many people took it to mean Satan was held up as an ideal. Although this wasn't so, it was misleading and obscured the church's basic message."

That message — as set forth by the newly launched Foundation Church — is that world civilization soon will end, to be replaced by a new age free of strife and evil and ruled by God's coming Messiah.

"He may come any day," Father Lucius said. "As a more or less inspired belief, we feel it will be in our lifetimes, perhaps toward the end of the century."

The emphasis parallels an apocalyptic, end-of-time outlook that has risen lately in many of the subculture religious groups, as well as in older fundamentalist institutions stressing Bible literalism.

In the break-up of the Process Church, Father Lucius, one of its British founders in 1963, and Father Malachi, editor of its street-sold magazine, "The Process," estimated 99 per cent of its approximately 450 ministers are leaving it to take part in the new organization.

These ministers — graded upward variously as messengers, prophets, superiors and, at the top, masters — oversee a movement that has grown in 10 years to an estimated 500,000 followers, mostly clustered around a half-dozen centers in this country.

The communal-type centers to be maintained by the new group are in New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Miami and Toronto, Canada. One in Cambridge, Mass., has been closed.

Father Lucius and Father Malachi, the respective religious names of Christopher de Peyer, 35, an Englishman, and Peter McCormick, 37, an Irishman, said the new church will continue many Processean customs, its communal life-style healing services and community projects of free stores and meals for the poor.

But they've abandoned the esoteric doctrine summed up by this formula: "Christ said, 'Love your enemies.' Christ's enemy was Satan ... Through love Christ and Satan have destroyed their enmity and come together for the end, Christ to judge, Satan to execute judgment."

The idea was the brainchild of Robert de Grimston, an Englishman who was the movement's founding mentor and who saw the "reconciliation of opposites" as a key to the end of conflict.

Father Lucius said de Grimston now is traveling somewhere in the south, teaching his viewpoint.

"It never was really explainable," said Father Malachi. "It aimed to reconcile what is seen as unreconcilable."

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

ACTION UPDATE: Jim Vanderslice of the Lincoln Telephone Company says a semi-public pay telephone customer does not get 25% credit of all calls applied against the monthly rate, as previously reported in Action Line (Star, May 29).

In fact, the customer pays the phone company a flat rate of $17.75 monthly and takes a 25% commission on all the phone's income above that. In other words, if the telephone did $27.75 worth of business, the first $17.75 would go to the phone company. The customer would then receive a $2.50 commission on the extra $10.

I ordered a set of Big Tube Headers (street or strip) for my 1967 Corvette on April 12, 1974. I sent a money order for $59.95 and asked them to send the freight collect. I didn't receive the headers but on May 10 I got a credit note for $59.95. I'm working on this car now and need the parts immediately. Can you see about getting the product or a refund?

—Russ Wentink, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Harry Jamison in the Custom Speed Enterprises customer relations office said the catalog states plainly that the company will give no cash refunds.

If your car has a small block engine (you didn't indicate one way or another to us) he can send your headers out to you right away. Simple send the credit slip to Custom Speed Enterprises, 21330 Gratiot Ave., East Detroit, Mich. 48021. Include a note explaining briefly what has transpired.

Jamison said the firm's mail order clerk recently quit, leaving it shorthanded. If your engine is a large block, you'll have to wait until the company can get the equipment you need, which is back ordered with the distributor.

The awareness of our environmental position has resulted in recycling projects. How much of the recyclable material actually is recycled?

—C. T. Budney, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) says in recent years the U.S. has consumed roughly 190 million tons of paper, major metals, glass, textiles and rubber annually. The rates at which the calsses of materials are recycled vary: paper, 19% recycled; iron and steel, 31%; aluminum, 18%; copper and lead, 50%; glass and textiles, 4%; rubber, 26%. About 48 million tons — roughly a quarter of tht total — is recycled.

Almost all the wastes salvaged today, according to the EPA, come from manufacturers and businesses, where large amounts of relatively clean and homogenous wastes accumulate. They are collected and sometimes processed by the secondary materials industry which has 80,000 employes and annual sales of approximately $8 billion.

The annual American throw-away includes 39 million tons of paper, 4 million tons of plastics and 55 billion beverage containers. Unfortunately, almost nothing is salvaged once it is in the garbage can; recycling requires that the wastes be separated into basic categories.

ACTION TIP: The next time a door-to-door salesperson interests you in a product or service he or she is selling, remember a brand new Federal Trade Regulation Rule, effective June 7, which provides that you may cancel any order or purchase of $25 or more within three business days.

In order to complete a sale, the salesperson must furnish you with: 1. A fully completed receipt or copy of any contract pertaining to the sale in whatever language was principally used in the oral presentation. 2. A notice of cancellation, which is a separate form that more fully explains your right to cancel without penalty. If you do decide to cancel you can sign this form and deliver or mail it to the seller at an address shown on the form. 3. An oral explanation of your right to cancel.

In 1972 I purchased a gas air conditioner from the gas company with the contract stipulation that the machine is to be serviced free each spring. In 1973 a gas company employe came to service it and we were charged for service, parts, and a service call.

We got in touch with the man who sold us the air conditioner and he said we were to be charged only for a part that had been replaced. The rest was to be refunded on our gas bill. This was nearly four months ago and still no refund. Can you help?

—Mrs. W. D. S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Cengas division manager Collins Wilcox said he would not discuss your problem in the newspaper because the company feels it is a private matter for the customer. He did promise to get in touch with you immediately to work out a satisfactory settlement.

NWU Recipient Of Woods Grant

Nebraska Wesleyan University has received a $5,000 grant from the Woods Charitable Fund, Inc., of Chicago and Lincoln to renew the purchase fund for Elder Gallery, according to NWU President Vance D. Rogers.

The Elder Gallery purchase fund will be used to add Twentieth Century works of art to the gallery's permanent collection, Dr. Rogers said.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Aspirin, improperly used, is the number one child poisoner according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

If a small child suddenly begins to breathe deeply, or begins vomiting, or seems lethargic and confused, he may have swallowed too many aspirin tablets. You should be certain.

If a child takes an aspirin overdose, he should receive medical help immediately. Do not give baking soda or other home remedies as they may speed the body's absorption of the poison. The best way to prevent poisoning is to keep all medicine in a locked or out-of-reach cabinet.

Medicine for children should always be called just that, never candy. Keep in mind that an adult-size aspirin contains ten times the dosage of baby aspirin and more than three times the dosage of so-called children's aspirin. The Nebraska Medical Association warns: Never give a small child a pain reliever except under a physician's direction.

Seminex Graduates Face Placement Woe

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman said Tuesday seminary graduates will have to go through normal church channels if they want to be placed in Nebraska congregations of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

The Rev. David Kehret of Omaha said the decision was made by the Nebraska District of the church at its weekend convention in Seward. He was in charge of publicity for the weekend convention of the Nebraska District of the church at Seward.

Placement is a question because of a seminary-in-exile, Seminex, which was set up outside the synod's normal structure when moderates became involved in a dispute with conservative church leadership over literal interpretration of the Bible.

Nearly all of more than 100 Seminex graduates in St. Louis so far have declined to go through official church channels which would allow their placement in synod congregations.

The Rev. Mr. Kehret said the convention also decided against a proposal to call a special synod convention by September to deal with the theological dispute. Delegates preferred to have it handled at the next regular national convention in 1975.

The Nebraska District also voted to join a cooperative rural ministry along with the American Lutheran Church and Lutheran Church in America. The ministry involves exchange of information on congregations' programs.

The spokesman said delegates approved a full-time hospital chaplain for Lincoln.

The Rev. Frederick Niedner od Seward was re-elected president Saturday.

The Rev. Robert Harms of Hastings was re-elected first vice president. The Rev. Eldor Meyer of Grand Island was named second vice president and the Rev. H:arlan Harnapp of North Platte third vice president.

Contractors In Omaha To Resist Pay Demand

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman said Tuesday members of the Omaha Contractors Employers Association had decided unanimously to resist a demand from striking cement finishers for double pay for all overtime work.

Dean Kratz, attorney for the association, said the contractors "couldn't possibly agree to the overtime provision because of the expense."

He said contractors may be willing to put up with a long strike because there isn't a great deal of building going on in the Omaha area "and the future outlook is for it to be down more."

Duane Martin, business representative for Cement Finishers Local 538, said the union would continue to press for double overtime pay, main issue in the strike which started Monday. No meetings have been scheduled between the union and contractors.

Martin said pickets were at 75 projects Tuesday morning and more jobs would be picketed Wednesday. Members of other unions are refusing to cross picket lines, shuttng down work. Union officials say 6,000 to 7,000 workers are affected by the strike.

Union members started picketing jobs in Council Bluffs, Iowa, Tuesday but Martin said no pickets would be set up at the downtown urban renewal shopping center project because cement finishing work has not started.

Constructon officials said work continued on the renewal project Tuesday. Union officials said earlier the project would be picketed.

The old contract expired Saturday.

Pulp Process Found

Houghton, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan Technological University said two members of its staff have developed a process that eliminates the use of sulphur in the production of high yield wood pulp.

Tiemann Sees 'Light At End Of The Tunnel'

Portland, Ore. (AP) — The federal Office of Management and Budget may be revising its thinking about impounding appropriated funds, Norbert T. Tiemann, federal highway administrator, told the Western Association of State Highway Officials Tuesday.

He said the Nixon Administration has lost impoundment issues everywhere they have been challenged in court.

Tiemann, former governor of Nebraska, said, "I think we can see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Human Rights Workers Confab Set For Omaha

A two-day conference of the Nebraska-Iowa Association of Human Rights Workers is scheduled to be held June 12th and 13th in Omaha.

Human Rights officer Gerald Henderson told the Human Rights Commission Tuesday night that the goal of the conference is to formulate a voluntary Fair Housing Marketing Plan for the area.

Henderson said the Fair Housing Marketing Plan, the Landlord Tenant Act and Steering and Blockbusting would be among the topics to be discussed.

The conference will be attended by regional and local representatives of the office of Housing and Urban Development and representatives of the NAACP, the National Credit Union Administration, the National Association of Human Rights Workers, the Department of the Treasury and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The conference is sponsored by various human rights and equal opportunity organizations in the two states.

Shinto Shrine Bill Shelved

TOKYO (AP) — A controversial bill to provide state funds and other protection for a Shinto shrine to Japan's war dead was shelved as parliament ended its session.

The bill was shelved in the upper house after it was approved in the lower house with only members of the ruling Liberal Democratic party attending.

All opposition parties sharply objected to the bill, claiming it violates a constitutional ban on preferential treatment to any religious sect and would lead to a revival of militarism in Japan.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

ACTION UPDATE: Jim Vanderslice of the Lincoln Telephone Company says a semi-public pay telephone customer does not get 25% credit of all calls applied against the monthly rate, as previously reported in Action Line (Star, May 29).

In fact, the customer pays the phone company a flat rate of $17.75 monthly and takes a 25% commission on all the phone's income above that. In other words, if the telephone did $27.75 worth of business, the first $17 75 would go to the phone company. The customer would then receive a $2.50 commission on the extra $10.

I ordered a set of Big Tube Headers (street or strip) for my 1967 Corvette on April 12, 1974. I sent a money order for $59.95 and asked them to send the freight collect. I didn't receive the headers but on May 10 I got a credit note for $59.95. I'm working on this car now and need the parts immediately. Can you see about getting the product or a refund?

—Russ Wentink, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Harry Jamison in the Custom Speed Enterprises customer relations office said the catalog states plainly that the company will give no cash refunds.

If your car has a small block engine (you didn't indicate one way or another to us) he can send your headers out to you right away. Simple send the credit slip to Custom Speed Enterprises, 21330 Gratiot Ave, East Detroit, Mich. 48021. Include a note explaining briefly what has transpired

Jamison said the firm's mail order clerk recently quit, leaving it shorthanded If your engine is a large block, you'll have to wait until the company can get the equipment you need, which is back ordered with the distributor

The awareness of our environmental position has resulted in recycling projects. How much of the recyclable material actually is recycled?

—C. T. Budney, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) says in recent years the U.S. has consumed roughly 190 million tons of paper, major metals, glass, textiles and rubber annually. The rates at which the calsses of materials are recycled vary: paper, 19% recycled, iron and steel, 31%; aluminum, 18%; copper and lead, 50%; glass and textiles, 4%; rubber, 26%. About 48 million tons — roughly a quarter of tht total — is recycled.

Almost all the wastes salvaged today, according to the EPA, come from manufacturers and businesses, where large amounts of relatively clean and homogenous wastes accumulate. They are collected and sometimes processed by the secondary materials industry which has 80,000 employes and annual sales of approximately $8 billion.

The annual American throw-away includes 39 million tons of paper, 4 million tons of plastics and 55 billion beverage containers. Unfortunately, almost nothing is salvaged once it is in the garbage can, recycling requires that the wastes be separated into basic categories.

ACTION TIP: The next time a door-to-door salesperson interests you in a product or service he or she is selling, remember a brand new Federal Trade Regulation Rule, effective June 7, which provides that you may cancel any order or purchase of $25 or more within three business days

In order to complete a sale, the salesperson must furnish you with. 1. A fully completed receipt or copy of any contract pertaining to the sale in whatever language was principally used in the oral presentation. 2 A notice of cancellation, which is a separate form that more fully explains your right to cancel without penalty. If you do decide to cancel you can sign this form and deliver or mail it to the seller at an address shown on the form. 3. An oral explanation of your right to cancel.

In 1972 I purchased a gas air conditioner from the gas company with the contract stipulation that the machine is to be serviced free each spring. In 1973 a gas company employe came to service it and we were charged for service, parts, and a service call

We got in touch with the man who sold us the air conditioner and he said we were to be charged only for a part that had been replaced. The rest was to be refunded on our gas bill This was nearly four months ago and still no refund. Can you help?

—Mrs. W. D S., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Cengas division manager Collins Wilcox said he would not discuss your problem in the newspaper because the company feels it is a private matter for the customer. He did promise to get in touch with you immediately to work out a satisfactory settlement.

Study Will Compare NU With Big 8

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The legislative Council's executive board Tuesday authorized its fiscal staff to gather all data needed to accurately compare the University of Nebraska with other Big Eight institutions.

Cost of the survey was estimated by Fiscal Analyst Eldin Ehrlich at "less than $12,000."

Senators hope the study will allow the Legislature, for the first time, to compare its financial support for NU with that provided other universities in the Big Eight.

Such a study had previously been proposed by Gov. J. James Exon.

Included in the survey will be faculty salaries, student-teacher ratios, equivalent costs, credit hour production, tuition and a comparison of funding, Ehrlich said.

The study could be complete by mid-July, he said.

Much of the data gathering process has already been completed, Ehrlich said. But board approval was desired before the survey encounters data processing costs.

Salary Hikes OKd

The board, meeting for the first time under the chairmanship of Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, also approved salary increases for legislative employes patterned after those provided to other state employes.

With only a few exceptions, legislative employes will receive a 5% pay hike, beginning July 1, and an additional $300 in salary for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

The total pay boost would average 10% at a $6,000 salary level.

Mahoney Installed

Mahoney was formally installed as board chairman, succeeding Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who resigned from the Legislature after the May primary elections.

Named vice chairman, succeeding Mahoney, was Sen. John Savage of Omaha.

The nine-member board shrank to eight members with Carperner's departure.

In other action, the board decided to resume hearings in July on countinuing energy problems, and to schedule a hearing on public power district construction contract problems on June 24.

Public 'Ripped Off'

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said the public is continuing to be "gouged" and "ripped off" by major oil companies.

And now other industries, such as steel and rubber, are "following suit," he warned.

"In Congress, they're not doing a damn thing," Schmit said, so continued state action is necessary.

Delayed for later consideration was Sen. Richard Fellman's request for authorization for a $20,000 study of child support collection methods.

Scuttled was a $10,000 plan to remodel the legislative cloakroom into a legislative lounge area.

Dunlevey Says Traffic Cases Continue Rise

State Court Administrator James Dunlevey said Tuesday the number of traffic cases filed in Nebraska's 93 county courts continued to increase during April.

Dunlevey said 7,583 state traffic cases, the highest reported for the year so far, were filed in April.

In addition, he said there were 1,824 cases filed involving the violation of city and village traffic ordinances. The figures did not include Lincoln and Omaha municipal courts.

During April 15,277 cases of all kinds were filed in county courts, which brought the total for the first 10 months of the 1973-74 fiscal year to 127,577.

Fees and costs collected by county courts during April amounted to $125,826, for a total of $1.1 million for the year so far.

During April, county courts collected $280,562 in fines for a total of $2.4 million for the year.

County Board Ups Hart's Pay By $2,500 As Admin Assistant

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The County Board gave its administrative assistant Wayne Hart a present Tuesday — a hefty $2,500 pay increase.

The 21% wage hike will boost Hart's salary from $12,000 annually to $14,500.

Hart was hired by the board six months ago and since then Commissioner Jan Gauger said, "He's done just one fantastic job since November."

Hart has been charged with implementing the county's personnel system, which under the newly passed state law goes into effect in July.

To Be Hiked Again

Gauger said Hart's salary probably will be raised again after the new personnel system is put into effect.

And to aid Hart, the county will hire a personnel technician, she said, probably sometime next week.

The technician, who will be paid between $7,000 and $9,000, will help administer the personnel plan and work with the embryonic personnel policy board.

Gauger said the technician also would act as a liaison with the city personnel department since the county hopes to contract for services with the city.

Gauger said she did not know whether Hart and the technician would "fulfill the function" of a personnel officer, as required by state law.

Not On Same Level

"We're not thinking of hiring someone on the same level as (city) Personnel Director Walt Mitchell," she asserted.

Gauger and Commissioner Kenneth Bourne also appointed Joseph Ruschetti and Arlie Heald to the policy board to serve as the commissioners' represenatives.

Ruschetti is personnel manager of Norden Laboratories, while Heald is business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 265.

The elected county officials already have appointed Eleanor Enersen and Leonard Focht to the board.

The fifth board member will be appointed by county employes following an election.

Application OKd

In other action the board, in the absence of Chairman Robert Colin, approved the submission of a grant application to the Region II Crime Commission. The application is for $623 in federal funds to pay for short-course for a staff member in the public defender's office.

Attorney Tony Redman will attend a one-week course in July at Northwestern University.

The board also awarded a gravel surfacing contract on Old Cheney Rd. from 27th to 40th to Western Sand and Gravel Co. That firm submitted the only bid of $104,950.

The board also awarded an asphaltic concrete resurfacing contract to Dobson Brothers Construction Co. for work on Burham from Folsom to Coddington. Dobson submitted the low bid of $57,792.55. Abel Construction Co. submitted a bid of $58,679.65.

Cattle Feeders' Antitrust Suit Against Food Chains Boosted

By The Associated Press

The legislature's Executive Board took preliminary steps Tuesday toward bringing a major antitrust suit in behalf of cattle feeders against large retail food chains.

The Executive Board gave the Agriculture Committee permission to negotiate with nationally recognized attorneys to determine the cost of bringing the suit.

The Agriculture Committee will come back to the Executive Board for approval of the legal costs, according to State Sen. Loran Schmit, chairman of the committee.

Outside Help Needed

He has repeatedly said retail chains are large enought to manipulate the cattle markets. Tuesday he said outside help would be needed because the legislature did not have the staff necessary to bring a long and complicated anti-trust action

The committee has not decided who would be the plaintiffs or defendants in the suit, he said.

Schmit said the staff of his committee discussed the possiblity of the suit with Joseph Alioto Jr. Alioto, son of the San Francisco mayor, is currently representing six California beef producers in an anti-trust action against large retail food chains.

Alioto Not The One?

Schmit said Alioto would not necessarily be the attorney the committee wished to hire.

The Executive Board's approval was broad enough to include other anti-trust cases.

Schmit said he was considering actions against steel, rubber, oil and fertilizer companies. State action is necessary, Schmit said "because Congress is not doing a damn thing."

He said problems in the beef industry "could bring this country into a depression in the midst of inflation."

Nebraska farmers and cattle feeders have lost $1 billion in the last nine months, he said.

Ed Bill Could Face Court Test

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ramey Whitney said Tuesday he may go to court if his petition drive fails to kill the legislature's state aid to education bill.

The legislature passed a bill over the veto of the governor which will shift much of the burden of public education from the property taxpayer by collecting $155 million from state sales and income tax.

Whitney said his group had about 10,000 of the 23,000 signatures needed to put the bill on the November ballot. Whitney has until July 10 to collect the signatures. He said he would like to have about 28,000 signatures to make sure he had enough after invalid signatures were removed from the petitions.

Whitney said the court challenge would probably center on a section of the bill which allows the state Board of Education to distribute $5 million in hardship aid to school districts. Whitney said the law would not allow the state Board of Eduea-tion to give the money to Class I and Class VI School districts. Class I districts are country grade schools and Class VI districts are junior high and high school districts formed by groups of Class I districts.

Hruska, Curtis Urged To Vote For Legal Aid

Democratic congressional nominee Hess Dyas Tuesday urged Nebraska Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis to vote for a measure to provide legal aid to persons who cannot afford lawyers' fees.

"While the number of people who will actually qualify for this bill is relatively small," the First District candidate said, "passage of the bill is important to the cause of equality in this nation."

The bill is designed to provide poor people with the same opportunities for legal action and advice as more wealthy people.

"Poor families, many of which also lack education, are too often helpless in the legal structure," Dyas said.

Grain Boxcars Said In Surplus

Omaha (AP) — The regional vice-presdient of Burlington Northern Railroad said Tuesday there is a surplus of empty grain boxcars available in the region. He urged shippers to take advantage of what he called a temporary situation and move grain within the next two months.

R. L. Merklin said "This is the first time since the world demand for grain skyrocketed in mid-1972 that we have not experienced a tight supply of boxcars."

Exon Is 'Guilty Of Violating His Bill' — Smith

Republican National Committeewoman Pat Smith of Lincoln Tuesday said Democratic Gov. J. James Exon "appears guilty of violating his own bill" proposing spending limitations for political candidates.

The bill, which would have placed a $25,000 spending lid on candidates for governor or lieutenant governor in primary elections, died in the 1974 Legislature.

The Exon-Whelan team reported total expenditures of about $68,000 in the May primary campaign.

"It is understandable that many people feel he bought the (lieutenant governor) nomination for Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan," Mrs. Smith said.

Holdrege Band Tour Readied

Holdrege (UPI) — The 100-member Holdrege High School Band will leave June 10 on a two-week concert and marching tour that will include Expo '74 in Spokane, Wash.

The musicians will be the only Nebraska band to perform at Expo '74.

The trip also includes appearances at the Portland, Ore., Rose Festival; Missoula, Mont.; and Yellowstone National Park.

The band will return home June 21.

Pamida Reports Sales Increase

Omaha (UPI) — Pamida, Inc., Tuesday reported record net sales of $36,780,000 for the three months ended April 30, 1974, an increase of 17.8% over the comparable period of last year.

Pamida's net earnings of $1,074,000 for the quarter were 16.7% greater than the same quarter of 1973.

The company based here owns and operates 170 Gibson Discount Centers in 12 midwestern and Rocky Mountain states.

Tiemann Sees 'Light At End Of The Tunnel'

Portland, Ore (AP) — The federal Office of Management and Budget may be revising its thinking about impounding appropriated funds, Norbert T Tiemann, federal highway administrator, told the Western Association of State Highway Officials Tuesday

He said the Nixon Administration has lost impoundment issues everywhere they have been challenged in court.

Tiemann, former governor of Nebraska, said, "I think we can see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Seminex Graduates Face Placement Woe

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman said Tuesday seminary graduates will have to go through normal church channels if they want to be placed in Nebraska congregations of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

The Rev. David Kehret of Omaha said the decision was made by the Nebraska District of the church at its weekend convention in Seward. He was in charge of publicity for the weekend convention of the Nebraska District of the church at Seward.

Placement is a question because of a seminary-in-exile, Seminex, which was set up outside the synod's normal structure when moderates became involved in a dispute with conservative church leadership over literal interpretration of the Bible.

Nearly all of more than 100 Seminex graduates in St. Louis so far have declined to go through official church channels which would allow their placement in synod congregations.

The Rev. Mr. Kehret said the convention also decided against a proposal to call a special synod convention by September to deal with the theological dispute. Delegates preferred to have it handled at the next regular national convention in 1975.

The Nebraska District also voted to join a cooperative rural ministry along with the American Lutheran Church and Lutheran Church in America. The ministry involves exchange of information on congregations' programs.

The spokesman said delegates approved a full-time hospital chaplain for Lincoln.

The Rev. Frederick Niedner od Seward was re-elected president Saturday.

The Rev. Robert Harms of Hastings was re-elected first vice president. The Rev. Eldor Meyer of Grand Island was named second vice president and the Rev. H:arlan Harnapp of North Platte third vice president.

Contractors In Omaha To Resist Pay Demand

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman said Tuesday members of the Omaha Contractors Employers Association had decided unanimously to resist a demand from striking cement finishers for double pay for all overtime work.

Dean Kratz, attorney for the association, said the contractors "couldn't possibly agree to the overtime provision because of the expense."

He said contractors may be willing to put up with a long strike because there isn't a great deal of building going on in the Omaha area "and the future outlook is for it to be down more."

Duane Martin, business representative for Cement Finishers Local 538, said the union would continue to press for double overtime pay, main issue in the strike which started Monday. No meetings have been scheduled between the union and contractors.

Martin said pickets were at 75 projects Tuesday morning and more jobs would be picketed Wednesday. Members of other unions are refusing to cross picket lines, shuttng down work. Union officials say 6,000 to 7,000 workers are affected by the strike.

Union members started picketing jobs in Council Bluffs, Iowa, Tuesday but Martin said no pickets would be set up at the downtown urban renewal shopping center project because cement finishing work has not started.

Constructon officials said work continued on the renewal project Tuesday. Union officials said earlier the project would be picketed.

The old contract expired Saturday.

Pulp Process Found

Houghton, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan Technological University said two members of its staff have developed a process that eliminates the use of sulphur in the production of high yield wood pulp.

Human Rights Workers Confab Set For Omaha

A two-day conference of the Nebraska-Iowa Association of Human Rights Workers is scheduled to be held June 12th and 13th in Omaha.

Human Rights officer Gerald Henderson told the Human Rights Commission Tuesday night that the goal of the conference is to formulate a voluntary Fair Housing Marketing Plan for the area.

Henderson said the Fair Housing Marketing Plan, the Landlord Tenant Act and Steering and Blockbusting would be among the topics to be discussed.

The conference will be attended by regional and local representatives of the office of Housing and Urban Development and representatives of the NAACP, the National Credit Union Administration, the National Association of Human Rights Workers, the Department of the Treasury and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The conference is sponsored by various human rights and equal opportunity organizations in the two states.

Summer Programs Will Begin

Some Parks and Recreation Department summer programs begin next week.

Costs for participants range from $3 to $7.

Programs include a 10-week tap and ballet class beginning June 13, an 8-week yoga class beginning June 12, glassblowing classes beginning June 13 and 14 and running 10 weeks, and 10-week creative play classes on Monday and Thursday mornings beginning June 10.

Shinto Shrine Bill Shelved

TOKYO (AP) — A controversial bill to provide state funds and other protection for a Shinto shrine to Japan's war dead was shelved as parliament ended its session.

The bill was shelved in the upper house after it was approved in the lower house with only members of the ruling Liberal Democratic party attending.

All opposition parties sharply objected to the bill, claiming it violates a constitutional ban on preferential treatment to any religious sect and would lead to a revival of militarism in Japan.

MILK OR CREAM... WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

WHOLE MILK contains at least 8% nonfat milk solids. Milk solids contain protein, minerals, and most of the vitamins found in milk. Whole milk should also contain 3.5% milk fats, one source of Vitamin A. Most whole milk has been fortified with Vitamin D. An 8-ounce serving contains 160 calories.

SKIM MILK has had most of the fat removed, and is fortified with Vitamins A and D and with some milk solids. An 8-ounce serving has 90 calories.

TWO-PERCENT MILK contains 1-2% fat, and most brands have been fortified with Vitamin A and D and with some milk solids. An 8-ounce cup is 145 calories.

BUTTERMILK is skim milk to which a special culture has been added to produce the rich body and acidic flavor. An 8-ounce cup contains 90 calories.

EVAPORATED MILK is a whole milk concentrate. Enough water is removed to reduce the volume by half. It is also fortified with Vitamin D. One 8-ounce cup, undiluted, contains 345 calories.

SWEETENED, CONDENSED MILK is whole milk with sugar added and 60% of the water removed. One 8-ounce cup, undiluted, contains 980 calories.

INSTANT, NONFAT, DRY MILK has had all fat removed and is usually fortified with Vitamins A and D. One 8-ounce cup, reconstituted, contains 90 calories. One 8-ounce cup of the chocolate-flavored variety, reconstituted, contains 130 calories.

HALF & HALF is a mixture of milk and cream averaging 11% fat. One tablespoon contains 20 calories.

LIGHT CREAM has 18% or more fat. One tablespoon contains 30 calories.

WHIPPING CREAM contains 30-36% fat. One tablespoon has 45-55 calories. When a recipe calls for "heavy cream," whipping cream should be used.

Study Will Compare NU With Big 8

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The legislative Council's executive board Tuesday authorized its fiscal staff to gather all data needed to accurately compare the University of Nebraska with other Big Eight institutions.

Cost of the survey was estimated by Fiscal Analyst Eldin Ehrlich at "less than $12,000."

Senators hope the study will allow the Legislature, for the first time, to compare its financial support for NU with that provided other universities in the Big Eight.

Such a study had previously been proposed by Gov. J. James Exon.

Included in the survey will be faculty salaries, student-teacher ratios, equivalent costs, credit hour production, tuition and a comparison of funding, Ehrlich said.

The study could be complete by mid-July, he said.

Much of the data gathering process has already been completed, Ehrlich said. But board approval was desired before the survey encounters data processing costs.

Salary Hikes OKd

The board, meeting for the first time under the chairmanship of Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, also approved salary increases for legislative employes patterned after those provided to other state employes.

With only a few exceptions, legislative employes will receive a 5% pay hike, beginning July 1, and an additional $300 in salary for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

The total pay boost would average 10% at a $6,000 salary level.

Mahoney Installed

Mahoney was formally installed as board chairman, succeeding Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, who resigned from the Legislature after the May primary elections.

Named vice chairman, succeeding Mahoney, was Sen. John Savage of Omaha.

The nine-member board shrank to eight members with Carperner's departure.

In other action, the board decided to resume hearings in July on countinuing energy problems, and to schedule a hearing on public power district construction contract problems on June 24.

Public 'Ripped Off'

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said the public is continuing to be "gouged" and "ripped off" by major oil companies.

And now other industries, such as steel and rubber, are "following suit," he warned.

"In Congress, they're not doing a damn thing," Schmit said, so continued state action is necessary.

Delayed for later considera-tion was Sen. Richard Fellman's request for authorization for a $20,000 study of child support collection methods.

Scuttled was a $10,000 plan to remodel the legislative cloakroom into a legislative lounge area.

Dunlevey Says Traffic Cases Continue Rise

State Court Administrator James Dunlevey said Tuesday the number of traffic cases filed in Nebraska's 93 county courts continued to increase during April.

Dunlevey said 7,583 state traffic cases, the highest reported for the year so far, were filed in April.

In addition, he said there were 1,824 cases filed involving the violation of city and village traffic ordinances. The figures did not include Lincoln and Omaha municipal courts.

During April 15,277 cases of all kinds were filed in county courts, which brought the total for the first 10 months of the 1973-74 fiscal year to 127,577.

Fees and costs collected by county courts during April amounted to $125,826, for a total of $1.1 million for the year so far.

During April, county courts collected $280,562 in fines for a total of $2.4 million for the year.

County Board Ups Hart's Pay By $2,500 As Admin Assistant

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The County Board gave its administrative assistant Wayne Hart a present Tuesday — a hefty $2,500 pay increase.

The 21% wage hike will boost Hart's salary from $12,000 annually to $14,500.

Hart was hired by the board six months ago and since then Commissioner Jan Gauger said, "He's done just one fantastic job since November."

Hart has been charged with implementing the county's personnel system, which under the newly passed state law goes into effect in July.

To Be Hiked Again

Gauger said Hart's salary probably will be raised again after the new personnel system is put into effect.

And to aid Hart, the county will hire a personnel technician, she said, probably sometime next week.

The technician, who will be paid between $7,000 and $9,000, will help administer the personnel plan and work with the embryonic personnel policy board.

Gauger said the technician also would act as a liaison with the city personnel department since the county hopes to contract for services with the city.

Gauger said she did not know whether Hart and the technician would "fulfill the function" of a personnel officer, as required by state law.

Not On Same Level

"We're not thinking of hiring someone on the same level as (city) Personnel Director Walt Mitchell," she asserted.

Gauger and Commissioner Kenneth Bourne also appointed Joseph Ruschetti and Arlie Heald to the policy board to serve as the commissioners' represenatives.

Ruschetti is personnel manager of Norden Laboratories, while Heald is business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 265.

The elected county officials already have appointed Eleanor Enersen and Leonard Focht to the board.

The fifth board member will be appointed by county employes following an election.

Application OKd

In other action the board, in the absence of Chairman Robert Colin, approved the submission of a grant application to the Region II Crime Commission. The application is for $623 in federal funds to pay for short-course for a staff member in the public defender's office.

Attorney Tony Redman will attend a one-week course in July at Northwestern University.

The board also awarded a gravel surfacing contract on Old Cheney Rd. from 27th to 40th to Western Sand and Gravel Co. That firm submitted the only bid of $104,950.

The board also awarded an asphaltic concrete resurfacing contract to Dobson Brothers Construction Co. for work on Burham from Folsom to Coddington. Dobson submitted the low bid of $57,792.55. Abel Construction Co. submitted a bid of $58,679.65.

Cattle Feeders' Antitrust Suit Against Food Chains Boosted

By The Associated Press

The legislature's Executive Board took preliminary steps Tuesday toward bringing a major antitrust suit in behalf of cattle feeders against large retail food chains.

The Executive Board gave the Agriculture Committee permission to negotiate with nationally recognized attorneys to determine the cost of bringing the suit.

The Agriculture Committee will come back to the Executive Board for approval of the legal costs, according to State Sen. Loran Schmit, chairman of the committee.

Outside Help Needed

He has repeatedly said retail chains are large enought to manipulate the cattle markets. Tuesday he said outside help would be needed because the legislature did not have the staff necessary to bring a long and complicated anti-trust action

The committee has not decided who would be the plaintiffs or defendants in the suit, he said.

Schmit said the staff of his committee discussed the possiblity of the suit with Joseph Alioto Jr. Alioto, son of the San Francisco mayor, is currently representing six California beef producers in an anti-trust action against large retail food chains.

Alioto Not The One?

Schmit said Alioto would not necessarily be the attorney the committee wished to hire.

The Executive Board's approval was broad enough to include other anti-trust cases.

Schmit said he was considering actions against steel, rubber, oil and fertilizer companies. State action is necessary, Schmit said "because Congress is not doing a damn thing."

He said problems in the beef industry "could bring this country into a depression in the midst of inflation."

Nebraska farmers and cattle feeders have lost $1 billion in the last nine months, he said.

Ed Bill Could Face Court Test

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Ramey Whitney said Tuesday he may go to court if his petition drive fails to kill the legislature's state aid to education bill.

The legislature passed a bill over the veto of the governor which will shift much of the burden of public education from the property taxpayer by collecting $155 million from state sales and income tax.

Whitney said his group had about 10,000 of the 23,000 signatures needed to put the bill on the November ballot. Whitney has until July 10 to collect the signatures. He said he would like to have about 28,000 signatures to make sure he had enough after invalid signatures were removed from the petitions.

Whitney said the court challenge would probably center on a section of the bill which allows the state Board of Education to distribute $5 million in hardship aid to school districts. Whitney said the law would not allow the state Board of Eduea-tion to give the money to Class I and Class VI School districts. Class I districts are country grade schools and Class VI districts are junior high and high school districts formed by groups of Class I districts.

Hruska, Curtis Urged To Vote For Legal Aid

Democratic congressional nominee Hess Dyas Tuesday urged Nebraska Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis to vote for a measure to provide legal aid to persons who cannot afford lawyers' fees.

"While the number of people who will actually qualify for this bill is relatively small," the First District candidate said, "passage of the bill is important to the cause of equality in this nation."

The bill is designed to provide poor people with the same opportunities for legal action and advice as more wealthy people.

"Poor families, many of which also lack education, are too often helpless in the legal structure," Dyas said.

Grain Boxcars Said In Surplus

Omaha (AP) — The regional vice-presdient of Burlington Northern Railroad said Tuesday there is a surplus of empty grain boxcars available in the region. He urged shippers to take advantage of what he called a temporary situation and move grain within the next two months.

R. L. Merklin said "This is the first time since the world demand for grain skyrocketed in mid-1972 that we have not experienced a tight supply of boxcars."

Exon Is 'Guilty Of Violating His Bill' — Smith

Republican National Committeewoman Pat Smith of Lincoln Tuesday said Democratic Gov. J. James Exon "appears guilty of violating his own bill" proposing spending limitations for political candidates.

The bill, which would have placed a $25,000 spending lid on candidates for governor or lieutenant governor in primary elections, died in the 1974 Legislature.

The Exon-Whelan team reported total expenditures of about $68,000 in the May primary campaign.

"It is understandable that many people feel he bought the (lieutenant goyernor) nomination for Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan," Mrs. Smith said.

Holdrege Band Tour Readied

Holdrege (UPI) — The 100-member Holdrege High School Band will leave June 10 on a two-week concert and marching tour that will include Expo '74 in Spokane, Wash.

The musicians will be the only Nebraska band to perform at Expo '74.

The trip also includes appearances at the Portland, Ore., Rose Festival; Missoula, Mont.; and Yellowstone National Park.

The band will return home June 21.

Pamida Reports Sales Increase

Omaha (UPI) — Pamida, Inc., Tuesday reported record net sales of $36,780,000 for the three months ended April 30, 1974, an increase of 17.8% over the comparable period of last year.

Pamida's net earnings of $1,074,000 for the quarter were 16.7% greater than the same quarter of 1973.

The company based here owns and operates 170 Gibson Discount Centers in 12 midwestern and Rocky Mountain states.

Waverly Council Approves Sewage Plant Land Option

The Waverly City Council has unanimously approved the terms of a three-year option on 10 1/3 acres of land for a proposed $500,000 sewage treatment plant a mile north of the city.

City attorney and city clerk Lloyd I. Bevans would not disclose the amount the city will pay for the option with owner Tyrrell Farms Inc.

Waverly has already received a $54,000 planning grant for the plant, with the federal government supplying $38,500, and the state and city each providing matching grants of $7,750.

Bevans said construction on the sewage plant "could come fairly soon," depending on when grant-in-aid money is approved in Washington.

In other business, the City Council approved 4-0 an increase in garbage hauling rates, from $3 to $3.50 monthly, as requested by Waverly's sole operator, Burle Hennecke.

The councilmen opened bid on the 15th St. paving project, to cover about two blocks from 19th Ave. to the park.

Bevans said Able Construction Co. of Lincoln was the apparent low bidder, at $14,419. He noted the contract has not been awarded yet. Dobson Construction Co. of Lincoln submitted the only other bid, $14,838.

The paving project is scheduled for completion by September, Bevans said.

In other action, the board discussed with Duane Kozak of Sioux City, Iowa, representing Colonial Manor, Inc., its proposal to build a 60-bed nursing home in Waverly.

The application for the nursing home was recommedned for denial by health planning agencies, and is now under consideration at the state level.

Bevans said the council decided to conduct a survey, to determine how many people age 65 and over live in Waverly and the surrounding area. Councilmen first will attempt to "get access to voter registrations," then check into alternate methods, Bevans said.

Stock Market Has Another Broad Gain

New York (AP) — Hopes for a downturn in interest rates spurred the stock market to another broad gain Tuesday, but the rally appeared to be fading at the close.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted a 7.43 advance to 828.69, after pulling back from a gain of more than 10 points in the last hour of trading.

On Monday, the widely watched average had risen more than 19 points.

Gainers outpaced losers 1,150 to 321 among the 1,795 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange — a slightly wider spread than Monday's figures showed.

Big Board turnover, boosted by heavy activity in the first hour, swelled to 16.04 million shares from Monday's 12.49 million.

Analysts noted a carry-over of enthusiasm from Monday, when banks in Chicago and St. Louis lowered their prime lending rates.

But they said uncertainty over whether a genuine downtrend in interest rates was developing appeared to cool down buying interest as the session progressed.

Brokers said they expected many investors to remain cautious while they waited to see whether any of the big New York banks would come in with prime rate reductions in the next few days.

Securities-industry stocks, which have been depressed for some time, rang up broad gains on the news that at least two major brokers — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, and E. F. Hutton — were planning to raise commission rates 5 per cent on July 1.

Merrill Lynch & Co., parent holding company of the nation's biggest brokerage house, was up ¼ at 11; E. F. Hutton climbed ¾ to 7¾; Reynolds Securities rose ⅞ to 9, and Bache & Co. was up ⅜ at 3⅞.

Madison Square Garden jumped 1¾ to 6¾, and Brown Co. picked up 1⅞ to 12. Gulf & Western Industries reported plans for tender offers for 250,000 of each of the two companies' shares.

Retail, oil-service, farm-implement, gold and drug issues all turned in general gains.

The American Stock Exchange volume leader was Syntex, down 2⅝ at 43⅝.

The Amex's market value index advanced 1.17 to 83.21, while the NYSE composite rose .60 to 47.41.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAW composite finished at 81.77, up .69.

MILK OR CREAM... WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

WHOLE MILK contains at least 8% nonfat milk solids. Milk solids contain protein, minerals, and most of the vitamins found in milk. Whole milk should also contain 3.5% milk fats, one source of Vitamin A. Most whole milk has been fortified with Vitamin D. An 8-ounce serving contains 160 calories.

SKIM MILK has had most of the fat removed, and is fortified with Vitamins A and D and with some milk solids. An 8-ounce serving has 90 calories.

TWO-PERCENT MILK contains 1-2% fat, and most brands have been fortified with Vitamin A and D and with some milk solids. An 8-ounce cup is 145 calories.

BUTTERMILK is skim milk to which a special culture has been added to produce the rich body and acidic flavor. An 8-ounce cup contains 90 calories.

EVAPORATED MILK is a whole milk concentrate. Enough water is removed to reduce the volume by half. It is also fortified with Vitamin D. One 8-ounce cup, undiluted, contains 345 calories.

SWEETENED, CONDENSED MILK is whole milk with sugar added and 60% of the water removed. One 8-ounce cup, undiluted, contains 980 calories.

INSTANT, NONFAT, DRY MILK has had all fat removed and is usually fortified with Vitamins A and D. One 8-ounce cup, reconstituted, contains 90 calories. One 8-ounce cup of the chocolate-flavored variety, reconstituted, contains 130 calories.

HALF & HALF is a mixture of milk and cream averaging 11% fat. One tablespoon contains 20 calories.

LIGHT CREAM has 18% or more fat. One tablespoon contains 30 calories.

WHIPPING CREAM contains 30-36% fat. One tablespoon has 45-55 calories. When a recipe calls for "heavy cream," whipping cream should be used.

Counterfeiters Are Costing Record Industry Millions Of Dollars

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Counterfeiters are pressing bogus phonograph records which fool most customers and cost the recording industry millions of dollars each year.

"These parasites wait until a record becomes a hit, then move in and try to skim off the top," says an attorney for Columbia Records in Los Angeles. "They victimize the artist, writers, companies and public with lousy records."

Detecting counterfeits poses problems for the consumer, because both the sound and packaging are copied. In fact, it usually takes a keen eye to spot the cover art's slightly faded colors and sloppy lettering, and a careful ear to pick up most audio failings.

Though impossible to accurately compute the number in circulation, the Recording Industry Association of America estimates about 5 million phony discs have been sold during the past two years at a loss of more than $15 million to the industry. In addition, the industry claims it loses millions in pirated tape sales.

In New York, Jules Yarnell, special counsel on piracy for the 55-company association, said 12 to 15 companies reported record counterfeiting in the past year alone.

Capitol, CBS, A&M, Warner Brothers and RCA were among the companies hit. Counterfeited artists included Elvis Presley, Paul Simon, Sly and the Family Stone, Bill Withers and the late Janis Joplin.

In some cases, Yarnell said, bogus albums were easily spotted because they sold for less than $3, below what the retailer normally pays for a legitimate hit album. In other cases, he said, counterfeits have been sold at the same price or higher than the real product.

Usually, counterfeits are discovered when consumers return records with complaints. As the Columbia attorney said, "The customer who unwittingly buys a counterfeit and doesn't like the quality will see our label and think we ripped him off."

Concern over damage to its reputation and financial losses led Columbia to post bounties, offering its hundreds of field staffers $50 for each tip resulting in an arrest or a civil suit.

The counterfeiters do not confine themselves to big corporate prey who can usually absorb losses. The Grateful Dead Recording Co.'s first album, "Wake of the Flood," barely hit the streets last October before imitations started competing for sales.

"We went out and bought 60 or so counterfeits for a couple of bucks each," company president Ron Rakow said in San Rafael, Calif. "We gave the distributors a few copies each so they could compare them with the real thing."

An FBI affadvait filed last December quoted one Los Angeles record dealer as saying he was offered 100,000 counterfeit Grateful Dead bums at $1.50 each, compared to a wholesale price of about $2.40 for the legitimate product.

A Berkeley, Calif. dealer purchased 297 counterfeits and a Denver dealer was offered the same Greatful Dead album at $1.65 per copy, the FBI said. Both outlets dealt with the same Van Nuys, Calif. distributor.

"There have been no arrests but we have served some search warrants," said FBI spokesman John Morrison in Los Angeles. "As to where the counterfeits are originating from, we don't know at this time."

The penalty for violation of federal copyright statutes can include a $100 to $1,000 fine and as much as one year in prison on each count. However, Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert Brosio said felony charges of interstate transportation or stolen property and mail fraud would be likely companion charges.

While law enforcement officials are pursuing the origins of illicit records, the record companies are attempting to shut off the flow at the retail level. That presents great obstacles, too.

Pat Nichols of Discount Records here, a division of CBS retail stores, said the store accidentally received some counterfeits through its regular distributors. "We had them on our shelves briefly but returned them when we found out," he said.

"Counterfeiting is an easy thing to do," said Bob Tolefson of the seven-store Record Factory chain here. "You take a picture of the album cover, front and back, paste it together and press the record. The average customer can't even tell the difference."

Stan Goman, manager of Tower Records here, said, "It's a bizarre thing that's hard to control because unscrupulous dealers always will be looking for cheap counterfeits.

"We haven't noticed any here," he said. "But maybe they're so good you can't tell them from the real thing."

Destructive Devices Law Said Valid

By United Press International

The State Justice Department said Tuesday there's nothing wrong with a statute under which an American Indian Movement (AIM) leader was charged in connection with an incident at Scottsbluff last year.

Leroy Casados was charged and convicted of possessing a "Molotov cocktail" in connection with a demonstration at Scottsbluff during which a junior high school building was firebombed last January.

Attorneys for Casados appealed the conviction saying the specific law under which the man was charged is unconstitutional in that it made no mention of Molotov cocktails.

The law in question pertains to destructive devices.

The Justice Department, however, said the law is valid and is broad enough to include such thing as Molotov cocktails even though there is no definition of them in the law. On that basis, the court was asked to affirm the conviction.

"The term has been in fairly common use for more than 30 years," the Justice Department said, referring to the term Molotov cocktail.

"The Legislature certainly is not required to define every term it uses, if the meaning of the term is commonly understood," the department added.

Firms To Merge Despite Outcries From Dissidents

Detroit (AP) — Armada Corp. and Hoskins Manufacturing Co. have announced a merger despite opposition by dissident Hoskins shareholders.

Armada, which bought 52.6% of the Hoskins Stock last June, said it will exchange 1.27 Armada shares for each Hoskins share, a rate considered too low by the dissidents.

Hoskins produces electrical resistance alloys and Armada process refined tallow and animal feed products.

Iran Venture Agreed

New York (AP) — Gould, Inc., the Chicago-based manufacturer of electrical and industrial equipment, has announced it has entered into a joint venture in Iran to manufacture electric motors for markets in the Middle East.

Soviets Claim West Seeking New Markets

Moscow (AP) — Economic cooperation with Communist countries is an "objective necessity" for the West, plagued as it is by crises, the newspaper of Soviet industry claimed.

Socialist Industry said that the energy and currency crises, as well as the growth of inflation and rise in the cost of oil and raw materials, had forced the capitalist countries to search for "new markets and new ways of investing their capital and to look in a new way upon the socialist world."

Six Weekly Contests

The Sunday Journal and Star conduct six weekly photo contests, each resulting in the award of four $5 prizes-a prize for each of the two pictures judged best in black and white and for each of the two best in color.

The first week's judging will be the week of June 30.

At the end of the six weeks the judges will face a more difficult decision: selecting a grand prize winner in each division plus three others among the weekly winners in each division to be entered in the 1974 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Contest.

The two grand prize winners will receive $40 awards from The Sunday Journal and Star. They and the other entries selected by the judges will be eligible for the prizes offered by Kodak.

Kodak accepts entries selected by participating papers throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. The Kodak entries compete for 10 top travel tours for two. All awards are offered in each of two categories-black and white and color.

-Contest is strictly for amateur photographers. Employes of the newspaper and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, commercial finishing or professional use of photographic goods are not eligible.
-Black and white or color pictures taken since July 1, 1973 are eligible. They may be taken with any make of camera or any brand of film. No artwork or retouching is permitted-no composite pictures, multiple exposures or multiple printings.
-Black and white prints must be 5x7 inches or larger. Color transparencies must be 35mm or larger; color prints must be 5x7 inches or larger.
-Photographers are asked to limit entries to no more than six per classification. Contestant's name and address must be written clearly on the back of each picture.
-Every effort will be made to return entries when contestants provide return postage and a self-addressed envelope, but returns cannot be guaranteed.

Contestants are permitted to submit pictures to only one newspaper participating in the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards.
-Contest opens June 30 and entries will be accepted until Aug. 4. Pictures for the final weekly contest must be postmarked no later than midnight Aug. 3 or delivered in person to newspaper by noon Aug. 4.
-To be eligible for a prize, a contestant must sign a statement that the picture or another closely similar picture of the same subject or situation has not and will not be entered in any contest and will not be offered for publication.
-Be sure you know the names and addresses of any recognizable persons appearing in your picture. In order for it to be submitted for international competition, you must be able to get the written consent of such person or persons to permit use of the picture for illustration, advertising or publication.

Waverly Council Approves Sewage Plant Land Option

The Waverly City Council has unanimously approved the terms of a three-year option on 10 1/3 acres of land for a proposed $500,000 sewage treatment plant a mile north of the city.

City attorney and city clerk Lloyd I. Bevans would not disclose the amount the city will pay for the option with owner Tyrrell Farms Inc.

Waverly has already received a $54,000 planning grant for the plant, with the federal government supplying $38,500, and the state and city each providing matching grants of $7,750.

Bevans said construction on the sewage plant "could come fairly soon," depending on when grant-in-aid money is approved in Washington.

In other business, the City Council approved 4-0 an increase in garbage hauling rates, from $3 to $3.50 monthly, as requested by Waverly's sole operator, Burle Hennecke.

The councilmen opened bid on the 15th St. paving project, to cover about two blocks from 19th Ave. to the park.

Bevans said Able Construction Co. of Lincoln was the apparent low bidder, at $14,419. He noted the contract has not been awarded yet. Dobson Construction Co. of Lincoln submitted the only other bid, $14,838.

The paving project is scheduled for completion by September, Bevans said.

In other action, the board discussed with Duane Kozak of Sioux City, Iowa, representing Colonial Manor, Inc., its proposal to build a 60-bed nursing home in Waverly.

The application for the nursing home was recommedned for denial by health planning agencies, and is now under consideration at the state level.

Bevans said the council decided to conduct a survey, to determine how many people age 65 and over live in Waverly and the surrounding area. Councilmen first will attempt to "get access to voter registrations," then check into alternate methods, Bevans said.

Wider Role Seen For Policewomen

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha police department may in the future be required to employ women for jobs now open only to men, an official of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women said Tuesday.

Bonnie Schoultz, chairman of the commission's prisons and law enforcement committee, siad the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has said that cities in which discrimination occurs on the police force run the risk of having LEAA funds withdrawn.

Police Chief Richard Andersen said the basic difference between jobs of male and female officers is that women are not assigned to patrol work.

However, the chief said he is willing to be convinced about the merits of assigning women to all aspects of police work. He noted that he still has misgivings and practical considerations such as the seniority system would create problems.

Mrs. Shoultz said that if the city does not voluntarily open all aspects of police work to women, it runs the risk of a sex discrimination suit.

She said she and Ricky Salisbury, the commissions's executive coordinator, are eager to help bring about voluntary action and avoid the chance of a suit.

In addition to the single job classification, the mayor's commission wants the personnel department to develop a "nondiscriminatory" physical test for all police applicants, she said.

Andersen said he thought half the city's 12 policewomen would quit if they were assigned to do night patrol work because they were not hired for it.

He accused the mayor's commission of "inconsistency." The commission, he said, urged the police to have women officers on duty on all shifts to search women prisoners.

Henry M. Beachell

H. Beachell To Receive KSU Honor

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Henry M. Beachell, developer of rice varieties that have in some cases doubled rice yields in Asia, Africa and Latin and South America, will be presented Kansas State University's "distinguished service award in agriculture" at a special ceremony at KSU Thursday.

Beachell, who received his masters from K-State in 1933, is a rice breeder sponsored by the United States Agency for International Development and working for the International Rice Research Institute in Indonesia.

The award will be presented by Dr. Glenn Beck, KSU vice president for agriculture, at a joint wheat centennial symposium.

Beachell, a native of Waverly, Neb., and a graduate of the University of Nebraska, pioneered in development of short strawed, lodging resistant, indica type rice varieties. These varieties are capable of responding to high rates of fertilization.

The varieties, first produced in 1965, have been estimated to have increased yields from one to two metric tons per hectare in tropical and subtropical Asia.

Beachell received an honorary doctor of agriculture degree from the University of Nebraska in 1972.

Omahans To Be Polled On Integration Feelings

Omaha (AP) — Some 750 Omahans will be interviewed in their homes to learn how they feel about the school integration proposals.

The Board of Education agreed Monday night to pay the Gallup organization up to $19,000 to do the poll, starting immediately.

Joe Hanna, assistant superintendent, said the nationwide pollsters would use visual aids to explain desegregation proposals on which the board wants public response.

He said the integration methods, which the board will spell out by its June 17 meeting, will be explained to respondents in their homes. The pollsters will ask reasons for opinions.

Among methods likely to be discussed during interviews are so-called magnet schools, learning resource centers, pairing or clustering of groups of schools for integration, redistricting attendance areas and faculty assignment.

Replacement Dawes County Clerk Named

Chadron (UPI) — The Dawes County Board of Commissioners Tuesday appointed Mrs. Florence Mikesell of Chadron as Dawes County clerk, succeeding Rose Mackey.

Ms. Mackey submitted her resignation to the board Monday. She had held the position for 27 years but was defeated in the May 14 Republican primary.

Board Chairman John Paris sad Mrs. Mikesell has given her present employer two weeks notice and will begin her new duties no later than June 17.

Pay Boost OKd By District 66 School Board

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha District 66 school board has given unanimous approval to a proposed contract for the 1974-75 school year.

It means pay increases of 8.8% for teachers. The starting salary of a teacher with a bachelor's degree will be raised from $7,400 to $7,800, or 5.5%.

Supt. H. Vaughn Phelps said the initial cost would be at least $525,000 or a 9.9% increase over last year.

District 66 salaries will be among the highest in the state, compared with those of other teachers beginning with a bachelor's degree

Last year, District 66 teachers at the beginning level had the highest salaries in the state, Phelps said.

Russian Jews Jailed

Moscow (UPI) — Authorities sentenced four Jews to 15 days in prison for demonstrating outside the downtown Intourist Hotel, Jewish sources said.

CLU Says Penal Complex Inmate Asks To Be Confined To Solitary

An inmate at the Nebraska Penal Complex told the American Civil Liberties Union he wanted to be in solitary confinement so he would not be blamed for anonymous letters written by others, the president of the Nebraska ACLU said Tuesday.

Penal Complex Warden Charles Wolff said last week the inmate asked to be placed in "administrative segregation" after it was discovered he wrote an anonymous letter which disclosed an investigation at the complex.

An associate warden and a warehouse supervisor resigned after the State Patrol and Wolff completed the investigation.

James Kelley, president of the ACLU, said the inmate told an ACLU volunteer he wanted to be in solitary confinement.

Last week, Wolff said the inmate reported other prisoners were pressuring him to write letters for them.

Hamilton Sees Time To Study Hwy. 77 Bypass

Although a west bypass from U.S. Highway 77 through Wilderness Park appears to be the best solution, according to Bruce Hamilton, there is still time to study alternate proposals, he said.

The candidate for Lancaster County Commissioner said traffic figures show at least a 3% annual rise on Highway 77 (9th and 10th Sts.) through Lincoln, which, he said, is overloading the streets.

Environmentalists have objected that a bypass through Wilderness Park would disrupt the protected area.

The route through Wilderness Park is the best of four alternatives, Hamilton said he thinks.

He said he has tentatively decided another route farther west of Wilderness Park disrupts the park more; a route west of the Regional Center and east of Pioneers Park disrupts Pioneers Park; and a route west of Pioneers Park is too costly and possibly so long motorists will opt for the shorter route through Lincoln, destroying the purpose of the bypass.

Omaha Board Gives Teacher Pay 1st Okay

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha Board of Education has given first-round approval to proposed 1974-75 contracts for teachers. Final approval could come June 17. The teachers approved the contract earlier.

The terms recommended by a fact-finding team after the board and teachers deadlocked over negotiations, would give teachers about a 10.8 per cent average increase in salaries and fringe benefits.

The contract was approved Monday night without a vote to spare. Approval requires seven votes and the proposed contract received seven.

The cost was estimated at $3.5 million.

Stock Market Has Another Broad Gain

New York (AP) — Hopes for a downturn in interest rates spurred the stock market to another broad gain Tuesday, but the rally appeared to be fading at the close.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posted a 7.43 advance to 828.69, after pulling back from a gain of more than 10 points in the last hour of trading.

On Monday, the widely watched average had risen more than 19 points.

Gainers outpaced losers 1,150 to 321 among the 1,795 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange — a slightly wider spread than Monday's figures showed.

Big Board turnover, boosted by heavy activity in the first hour, swelled to 16.04 million shares from Monday's 12.49 million.

Analysts noted a carry-over of enthusiasm from Monday, when banks in Chicago and St. Louis lowered their prime lending rates.

But they said uncertainty over whether a genuine downtrend in interest rates was developing appeared to cool down buying interest as the session progressed.

Brokers said they expected many investors to remain cautious while they waited to see whether any of the big New York banks would come in with prime rate reductions in the next few days.

Securities-industry stocks, which have been depressed for some time, rang up broad gains on the news that at least two major brokers — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, and E. F. Hutton — were planning to raise commission rates 5 per cent on July 1.

Merrill Lynch & Co., parent holding company of the nation's biggest brokerage house, was up ½ at 11. E. F Hutton climbed 3/8 to 7¾; Reynolds Securities rose ⅞ to 9, and Bache & Co was up 3/8 at 3⅞.

Madison Square Garden jumped 1¾ to 6¾, and Brown Co. picked up 1⅞ to 12. Gulf & Western Industries reported plans for tender offers for 250,000 of each of the two companies' shares.

Retail, oil-service, farm-implement, gold and drug issues all turned in general gains.

The American Stock Exchange volume leader was Syntex, down 2⅝ at 43⅝.

The Amex's market value index advanced 1.17 to 83.21, while the NYSE composite rose .60 to 47.41.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAW composite finished at 81.77, up .69.

Buying Boosts Commodities

Chicago (AP) — Fresh buying and short covering combined to produce higher prices for farm commodity futures on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Wheat futures gained around 6 cents a bushel, oats nearly 5 cents and corn 2 cents. Soybeans were mixed at the close while soybean meal gained $1 a ton and soybean oil rose some 40 points. Iced broilers were steady to nearly ½ cent a pound higher after a very lightly traded session.

Cattle Trade Fairly Active

Omaha (AP) — Trading was fairly active on the Omaha cattle market Tuesday with a modest supply available.

The 4,500 slaughter stock offered for trading Tuesday added to about 8,500 on Monday brought the two-day total to 13,200. A year ago the Omaha two-day figure was 10,889. Much of the outlay Tuesday was good to choice with only a few loads choice and prime included.

The pork market early was losing as much as $2.50 off Monday's lower closing levels. Most 190-240 lb butchers were 24.50-26.25.

Slaughter lambs were steady to 25 higher, springers 85-105 lb were 48.50-49.25.

World Series Has Cinderella Team

The College World Series of baseball, which will be held in Omaha for the 25th consective year starting Friday, has a Cenderella team in the field.

It is the University of Northern Colorado, which advanced to the tournament by sweeping a two-game series with Arizona, which went into district competition ranked as the nation's No. 1 college baseball team.

The Bears (that's the nickname) will get a chance to be a giant-killer again right off the bat when they go against Big Eight champion Oklahoma in the 8 p.m. game Friday in Rosenblatt Stadium.

What's so amazing about Northern Colorado's play is that a pair of freshmen pitchers were responsible for all four wins in the NCAA District 7 tournament at Greeley, Colo.

And the Bears really are a home-grown team with eight former Colorado prep athletes, including the aforementioned pitchers.

Northern Colorado has been to Omaha once before (in 1962), but in recent seasons the Bears have played in the so-called college division NCAA tournament.

The coach is Tom Petroff, who has compiled a 99-36 record in four seasons at UNC and in 1971 was named national college division coach of the year. The bears compete in the Great Plains Athletic Conference. They go to Omaha with a 31-11 season record.

Just a year ago Thoren and Bailey, who also pitched victories earlier in the playoff against Gonzaga, were rivals in Colorado's Class AAA baseball championship game between Aurora Hinkley and Longmont in a game won by Thoren.

Bailey goes into the World Series with a 10-1 record while Thoren is 7-1. Both are 6-1 and 180 pounds and have almost identical earned run averages. Bailey is tops at 3.33 with 56 strikeouts.

Oklahoma Looks Best On Paper

The Oklahoma Sooners, who swept to their third consecutive Big Eight title this spring, look stronger than the Bears on paper with a 42-6 overall record, a .336 team batting average and a pitching staff that turned in a 2.19 overall earned run average.

Their strength, however, doesn't worry the NCU coach whose philosophy is simple: In a short series anything can happen. Petroff also believes in shooting the works by going with his best pitchers in order . . . playing for the moment and holding nothing back.

The World Series opener matches Miami of Florida and the Ivy League champion Harvard. Miami is 48-9 to Harvard's 31-9, but the Hurricanes don't have the best record in the field.

That honor goes to . . . no, not defending champion Southern California, but to the Texas Longhorns, winners of the last seven Southwest Conference baseball championships and owners of a 52-6 record.

Texas is matched against Southern California in the first round of the double-elimination tournament. That game will be played at 5 p.m. Saturday. The Trojans are going for their tenth title and fifth in a row, coming in with a 45-19 record.

Miami and Texas have been clutch-performing teams this spring, the Hurricanes winning 12 one-run decisions and the Longhorns taking 11 of them.

Festivities at the tournament get underway at noon Friday when the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce sponsors its annual luncheon in the Hilton ballroom.

Speaker will be Lee MacPhail, president of the American League. Coaches and members of the eight teams will be guests.

Rowdy Fans Confront Players . . . Indians Forfeit To Rangers

CLEVELAND (UPI) — One week ago, players from the Texas Rangers and the Cleveland Indians got into a fight during a game in Texas but Tuesday night, both teams were helping each other fight off an unruly crowd during the ninth inning.

After John Lowenstein's sacrifice fly scored Ed Crosby from third, enabling Cleveland to tie the game 5-5, part of the crowd of 23,134 on hand for "Ten Cent Beer Night" jumped out of Municipal Stadium's rightfield stands and charged Texas rightfielder Jeff Burroughs.

When Burroughs fought back, both benches emptied and the players were surrounded by hundreds of fans. A few fights broke out and umpire Nester Chylak was hit on the head.

At that point, the umpires forfeited the game to Texas 9-0.

"When Chylak got hit on the head, I knew we lost the game," said Cleveland manager Ken Aspromonte, who watched his club battle back only to lose on the forfeit.

"It's just disgraceful," added Aspromonte. "You go out there to win a game and end up having to protect yourself. Bottles and chairs were flying and I think the fans just lost the interest of the ballclub. Those guys out there (pointing to the lockerroom) just don't give a good goddamn right now."

Cleveland pitcher Tom Hilgendorf was hit on the head by a steel chair and Texas catcher Duke Sims and infielder Mike Hardgrove got into a tussle with a fan at the pitcher's mound just before the Rangers were awarded the game.

Within one hour after the end of the game, police reported six adults were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

"I thought we went as far as we could go and the Texas ballclub did a fine job of staying in the dugout," said Chylak. "I told (Texas manager Billy) Martin since his bullpen had to be evacuated in the seventh inning that he could bring all the subs he wanted and I'd give them time to warm up."

The Texas bullpen crew had to be moved into the Rangers' dugout in the seventh inning after being subjected to fireworks, smokebombs and empty beer cups throughout the early part of the game.

"They were just uncontrollable beasts," added Chylak. "I thought the police did a great job, especially being outnumbered. I'm just sorry that Cleveland had to suffer the forefeit. The only other place you might experience this is a (expletive deleted) zoo."

"It looked like a zoo and a circus out there," added Lowenstein while pitcher Steve Kline, who came to the Indians from New York, stated, "the Yankee fans are angels compared to what we saw out there tonight.

"What if Gaylord Perry got hurt or any of the other players? We had to go out there and help the Rangers. We couldn't leave them hanging."

Martin, who said he hadn't seen anything like this in 23 years, added a number of Rangers players got hurt in the melee.

"Burroughs got a jammed thumb," said Martin. "I am very proud of the Cleveland players. They saved our lives. Those fans just couldn't control themselves after drinking that beer. We just wanted good clean baseball but all they had out there were complete idiots and jerks.

"It was the worst sports showing I have ever seen in my history of baseball. It should have been called in the seventh inning when you warn the fans once to get off the field. A second time, the game is a forfeit. I would want it the same way back home if our fans did it.

Martin said that two guys punched Burroughs and added, "there was no way we would let them get on him. He would have got destroyed. Hell, they would have killed him. The older man who slugged Burroughs got hit a few times and Hilgendorf and (Dave) Duncan really showed me they had some guts. I'm proud of them and the Cleveland players. I called Aspromonte and told him that."

The forfeit was the first since the Senators forfeited to the Yankees in the last game played in Washington, Sept. 29, 1971.

Favorite Role To Gabrielson

GULLANE, Scotland (UPI) — Atlanta insurance broker Jim Gabrielson donned the role of favorite today to become Britain's new amateur golf champion.

Gabrielson, 32, a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team, became the only seeded player in his half of the draw Tuesday after a convincing 6-5 second round win over Scotsman Morrison Zuill and the surprise departure of defending champion American Dick Siderowf, top Britons Charlie Green and Harry Ashby and South African Neville Sundelson.

But Gabrielson would only say "maybe" when asked if he thought he would have an easy run through to the finals.

"It's too early to talk about my chances," he said. "But let's face it—that's what I'm here for, to win."

First he must defeat Bill Trombley, of Dallas, Tex., today for a place in the last 32.

Of the 48 Americans who started the tournament, only 12 remained after Tuesday's play. One of the victims was Siderowf, the Westport, Conn., stockbroker who took the title last year.

He went out at the hands of a 23-year-old Glasgow fashion salesman named Mick Miller whose 25-foot putt on the 18th green sent him through.

Miller, a former Scottish youth international, played the more experienced Siderowf stroke for stroke through 17 holes, where he missed a 12inch putt that could have put him in the lead.

"I've no excuses, I played lousy golf," Siderowf said later.

Another American hopeful, Charles Harrison, 42, like Gabrielson, an insurance broker from Atlanta was to play Scot Finlay Black today.

But most of the large galleries were expected to be out with Jim Key, of Colombus, Ga., who faces England's Peter Davison. Key played the first two rounds wearing an enormous sombrero and dark glasses.

Storen Says League To Operate Next Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Storen, commissioner of the American Basketball Association, stated unequivocally Tuesday that his shaky league would be in operation for the 1974-75 season, but emphasized he would not know until June 21 what shape or form it would take.

While admitting that his league faced serious problems, the optimistic Storen denied a published report that the seven-year-old ABA would dissolve within 30 days and four of its teams—the champion New York Nets, Kentucky Colonels, Indiana Pacers and San Antonio Spurs—would be absorbed as expansion teams by the rival National Basketball Association.

The ABA's major problems stem from the uncertainty of six of its 10 franchises.

Owner Tedd Munchak of the Carolina Cougars has said he would not operate the franchise in North Carolina next season, and already has begun dispersing his personnel.

Coach Larry Brown and General Manager Carl Scheer, given permission by Munchak to negotiate with Denver, were signed by the Rockets. Center Jim Chones was released outright, waived through the ABA and signed by the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers. All-Star guard Ted McClain was sold to Kentucky and 1972-73 ABA Most Valuable Player Billy Cunningham reportedly is on the brink of returning to Philadelphia of the NBA.

The Memphis Tams, Virginia Squires, Utah Stars and Denver Rockets all reportedly are up for sale while the San Diego Conquistadors have been told by Storen to find a new arena to replace their 3,200-seat Community Concourse or move.

The commmissioner stressed that all the answers to the uncertainties would be resolved at the league's meeting in Louisville, Ky. June 20-21.

"We have established June 21st as a deadline so that we can step off early in the right direction for next season," said Storen. "We are doing this in the best interests of the ABA and pro basketball, and especially the fans. We'll come out of that meeting with our starting lineup."

Despite the league's unsteady situation, cities such as Los Angeles, Chicago, Tampa, Fla., and the Albany-Schenectady area in upstate New York have been mentioned as expansion possibilities. Storen said there could be between eight and 12 ABA teams next season, depending on developments at the Louisville meeting.

If there are only eight, he explained, then the players from the two disbanded franchises would be dispersed among the remaining clubs.

Storen also said that several teams in both pro basketball leagues have been steadily losing money because of the huge contracts and bonuses they have been forced to pay "for untried players in the bidding war. Some clowns are being paid as the result of their ability to negotiate and not their ability to play. That is not the American way."

He said he hoped that, in the near future, the imbalance would be corrected, but "not as long as there are two leagues and one club in each league competing for a No. 1 draft choice and their agents have the ability to operate as they currently do."

The solution, he said, would be merger. "It has to come sometime," Storen said, "but when, I don't know."

Royals Blank Baltimore, 8-0

BALTIMORE (UPI) — John Mayberry and Amos Otis slammed home runs behind the three-hit pitching of Al Fitzmorris as the Kansas City Royals clouted the Baltimore Orioles, 8-0, Tuesday night.

Mayberry's 12th homer was a three-run blast that climaxed a five-run third inning and chased loser Ross Grimsley. Otis cracked a solo shot, his third, in the first inning.

Singles by George Brett, Al Cowens, and Jim Wohlford scored the first run of the third inning before Otis singled across Cowens. Mayberry's blow brought home Wohlford and Otis.

Fitzmorris, 5-2, scattered three singles as he won his third complete game. Jesse Jefferson replaced Grimsley, 56. Hal McRae and Cowens drove across solo runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Fitzmorris' shutout was the first by a Royals' pitcher this season.

Scouts Talk With Guidolin

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Armand "Bep" Guidolin, who resigned a week ago as head coach of the Boston Bruins, is one of four men being considered as head coach for the Kansas City Scouts, one of two new National Hockey League franchises.

"We have been talking to him, but nothing has been signed," said Bill Grigsby, Scouts' assistant to the president.

Grigsby said the Scouts would name a head coach Friday, but "There have been no contracts signed yet."

Nance Attorney Says No Pact

BOSTON (UPI) — An attorney for veteran running back Jim Nance denied Tuesday his client has signed with the Houston Texans of the new World Football League.

The Texans, at the opening of their training camp Monday in Houston, announced the signing of the 6-1, 240 pound Nance who gained 5,300 yards rushing during seven seasons in the National Football League with the New England Patriots and the New York Jets.

"We will probably come to terms with the Texans," said Nance's attorney Irwin Cooper, "but as yet, there is no signed contract."

Aaron's Blast Boosts Braves

Philadelphia (UPI) — Hank Aaron became the all-time home run king for the second time this season Tuesday night when he belted a grand slam in the seventh inning to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 7-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The home run, his 10th of the year and the 723rd in regular season play, was the 16th grand slam for Aaron, who had been tied for the National League career lead with Willie McCovey. It was Aaron's second slam of the season. Lou Gehrig holds the American League record of 23.

Counting World Series and all-star games, Aaron's home run was home run number 731, which broke a tie with Babe Ruth and makes Aaron the undisputed home run champion. Ruth, who had 714 regular season homes, had 730 including the World Series and All-Star games.

Aaron connected off reliever Eddie Watt to spark a six-run seventh inning for Atlanta, which took a 1-0 lead in the first on Mike Lum's home run. The Phils used Del Unser's homer in the second to tie the score and took the lead 2-1 in the fourth on a Willie Montanez single.

Boys Team Includes Deaf Girl

CHICAGO (UPI) — The dream of Susan Scaletta, 9, to play baseball with the boys began materializing Tuesday.

League authorities notified Susan's mother, Mrs. William McLeod, that her daughter was to report Tuesday afternoon to Pottawattomie Park to begin practice for C League competition.

Mrs. McLeod acknowledged the park league officials still were "not too excited" about Susan's presence. They "invited" her to join the league on the advice of the park district attorney after Susan's parents and the American Civil Liberties Union began applying pressure.

The bright-eyed little athlete is deaf but that doesn't affect her play.

"She's really been working out with my husband, like every night," Hazel McLeod said.

Being able to play ball was Susan's biggest thrill. Her second was a meeting with Ron 5 "She got to meet Ron Santo for her birthday," Mrs. McLeod said. "He's her idol."

Susan was one of 120 players invited to join the league and is guaranteed a spot on one of the teams.

With jockey Tommy Willis up, trainer Woody Stephens is all set to let Cannonade go for a workout for Saturday's $125,000-added Belmont Stakes. The Kentucky Derby winner will have Jorge Velasquez riding instead of Angel Cordero who is under suspension.

NFL Awards Seattle With 1976 Franchise

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Football League Tuesday awarded Seattle its 28th franchise beginning in the 1976 season.

Like Tampa, which was awarded an expansion franchise by the league last month, the new Seattle team will pay $16 million to join the NFL.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle made the announcement after a lengthy first day of meetings here.

"We have voted to expand to 28 teams with Seattle joining the league in 1976," Rozelle said, "and our expansion committee is still an open deck and will continue to explore future expansions."

Although it was reported that rental terms for the new domed stadium in Seattle were holding up the city's bid to land an NFL franchise, Rozelle said that all of those problems have been solved and the terms now were "quite equitable."

"Seattle is the 16th largest market and therefore very attractive," said Rozelle. "In addition to the new domed stadium which will seat about 65,000, it is the only area in the country in which we didn't have a team."

In explaining his "open deck" statement in regard to the expansion committee, Rozelle said the league is now considering any number of cities, including some, such as New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, where the NFL already has teams.

"As it is," he said, "we're already getting pressure from the people in Tampa to move up the expansion to 1975 and I would suspect that the Seattle people will feel the same. Therefore I'm not ruling out anything."

Along with Seattle, other cities in the current bidding for a 1976 expansion franchise were Memphis, Honolulu and Phoenix. Obviously, the NFL moguls did not want at this time to cause an open conflict with the fledgling World Football League, which already has franchises in Memphis and Honolulu.

Rozelle said he expected the Seattle ownership and the Tampa ownership to be selected within the next 90 days.

Trap Shoot Slated

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

Doniphan — A Who's Who of all-America trap shooters is what you're likely to find as the Nebraska State Trap Shoot opens both barrels Thursday.

Headed by the Amateur Trapshooting Association's high average shooter for 1973, Big Spring's Bueford Bailey and the likes of Omaha's B. E. Morrissey, Jim Beck and others, the field is certain to host some of the top gunners in the country.

Bailey, Morrissey and Beck all averaged over 99 per cent success per 100 registered targets (a minimum of 2,500) during the past season.

And all three are members of most of the trapshooting all-American teams selected by various gruops and publications this past year.

Bailey is the defending state all-around champion. Morrissey is the defending zone champion of champions.

Other defending Nebraska champions likely to be on hand include singles champ John Voss of Omaha, doubles champ Frank Hoppe of Lincoln, handicap champ Gerald Hanke of Lindsey, and women's champ Jon Morris of Gothenburg, another of the all-Americans to be shooting in the four-day event.

Thursday's opening rounds will include the Director's Shoot and open doubles.

Second day events include the Nebraska doubles championship, the Nebraska Open Championship, and the Nebraska Open Handicap Championship.

Third day shooting includes the Nebraska Singles and Class Championship, and the final day includes the Nebraska Handicap Championship and remaining events.

The 1974 shoot marks the 96th annual state meet and the 25th anniversary of the Doniphan state trapshooting grounds.

West Says Walton Will Help

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers believes UCLA's Bill Walton is the medicine the Portland Trail Blazers need to make them a winner in the National Basketball Association.

During a quick trip to Portland Monday, West said, "I believe Portland got the player this year who will make the other players play as a unit."

He said that with Walton Portland would not get dominated in the middle."

But despite the addition of Walton, West said he didn't think the Blazer turnaround would be automatic.

"Portland's big problem," he said, "is to feel it can beat anyone."

He said the Blazers had done "two very positive" things since the end of the season— signing Walton and signing Lenny Wilkens as head coach. "Wilkens, I think, has one of the finest basketball minds in the game," he said.

West said the American Basketball Association made him a "definite offer" under which he would have been coach at a Los Angeles club with Walton as a player.

Asked why he went for the lesser of the two offers and opted to stay with the Lakers, West said, "I'd like to think that money isn't everything to me. I'd like to believe that I have some allegiance to something that has been awfully good to me."

Final Qualifying Spots Filled For U.S. Open

By Associated Press

Former PGA champion Jerry Barber qualified Tuesday for the U. S. Open Golf championship and he had to beat his assistant to do it.

The 58-year-old Barber won the last spot in the San Francisco sectional qualifying as the final 53 spots in the Open were filled at seven sites across the nation.

Barber was one of seven pros who qualified at the par-71, 6,307-yard San Francisco Golf Club. He defeated Charles Montalbano, his assistant at Los Angeles' Griffith Park Golf Club.

Barber had a par five on the first playoff hole. Montalbano took a six when he three-putted after his chip-shot bounced off the pin to the fringe of the green.

Tom Storey, a former singer and dancer who now serves as head pro at Las Vegas' Fairway to the Stars Golf Club, shot a 36-hole total of 141 to lead the qualifying at San Francisco.

The U. S. Open will be played June 13-16 at Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y. Twenty players in the 150-man field, including defending Open champion Johnny Miller, were exempt from qualifying.

DeWitt Weaver, 34, a tour veteran whose biggest victory was in the 1971 U. S. Match Play championship, coasted to a seven-under-par 137 to pace qualifiers at Atlanta.

Weaver, who went to school on a football scholarship and once was backup quarterback to Don Meredith at Southern Methodist, fired rounds of 68 and 69.

Denny Lyons turned in a second-round 70 and was the only golfer to break par, leading six qualifiers at Pittsburgh. Lyons of Lewiston, N. Y., a slightly-built veteran who finished 20th in last year's Open, fired a 143 over the 7,006-yard, par-72 course.

Also qualifying at Pittsburgh was 51-year-old former U. S. Amateur Champion William Campbell of Huntington, W. Va. Former Open champion Lou Worsham sustained an unspecified minor injury and failed to turn in a card.

Andy Nusbaum, a former tour regular who now is club pro at Siwanow in Bronxville, N. Y., shot a three-under-par 140 to pace sectional qualifying at Deal, N. J. Nusbaum turned in rounds of 68 and 72.

Kansas City pro Bob Stone, 43, shot a one-over par 145 to lead the sectional qualifying at St. Louis. The 43-year-old Stone fired a two-under-par 70 in the afternoon round, the day's only subpar round among the 22 contestants.

Gals To Get Equal Time At Golfing

Omaha (AP)—A new state law will make it illegal for golf courses to prohibit women golfers at certain hours, Deputy City Attorney James Fellows said.

LB681, which takes effect next month, is a public accomodations law that includes a provision making sex discrimination illegal if a person is denied "accomodations, advantages, facilities, services or privileges" because of his or her sex.

Ricky Salisbury, coordinator of the Mayou's Commission on the Status of Women, pointed out the law.

Several women had complained they were prevented from golfing at area courses before 1 p.m. on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Mrs. Salisbury said she will send copies of the new law to courses that restrict women.

Women prevented from playing at certain hours could file a complaint with the State Equal Opportunities Commission.

Tri-State Golf Meet Scheduled

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — The 34th annual Men's Tri-State Golf Tournament involving golfers from Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado has been scheduled in Cheyenne June 23.

Frank Peterson, Cheyenne Country Club pro, said invitations had been extended to golfers in the three states through more than 75 golf clubs.

Forty-five holes of medal play are scheduled for those in the championship flight. Other flights will play 36 holes during the two-day event.

Peterson said entries will be limited to the first 125 golfers registering to play.

Broncos Seek More Seating

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos have asked Mayor Bill Michols and the city council to allow residents to vote on a proposed $25 million expansion for Mile High Stadium.

Gerald Phipps, board chairman of the National Football League team, and Dick Kitchen, corporate secretary, asked Tuesday that the council pass an ordinance allowing the vote on general obligation bonds in the Sept. 10 primary election.

Phipps said the stadium capacity would be increased to 75,016 seats from its present 51,656, with work to begin Jan. 1, 1976.

"We cannot exist economically with a 50,000-seat stadium," Phipps said. "We feel that we have kept our obligation to the city of Denver. All we ask is that the City and County of Denver give us a stadium so we can be competitive."

Offensive Line To Share Honor

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills' offensive line, which helped O.J. Simpson rush for a National Football League record 2,003 yards last season, will share the 1974 Blocker of the Year award of the 1,000 Yard Club Foundation.

Simpson is scheduled to be on hand to present the award at the foundation's 11th annual banquet here June 11.

Bills' linemen to be honored are centers Bruce Jarvis and Mike Montler, tight end Paul Seymour, tackles Dave Foley and Donnie Green and guards Reggie McKenzie and Joe DeLamielleure.

Simpson also is to present a blocking trophy to Bills' owner Ralph Wilson, who will turn it over to the National Pro Football Hall of Fame at Canton, Ohio.

Rierson ISU Baseball Coach

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Clair Rierson, 35, former college and semi-pro baseball player was named Iowa State University head baseball coach Tuesday.

Rierson, elevated to the post by athletic director Lou McCullough, succeeds Cap Timm, 66, who retired this year after 36 years as head coach.

Rierson joined the ISU baseball staff in 1965 and has been in charge of recruiting since 1967. He played first base and outfield for te Cyclones in 1961 and 1962.

Omaha Blasts Denver Bears

Omaha (UPI) — The Omaha Royals closed a 12-game home stand at Rosenblatt Stadium Tuesday night with a 5-2 win over Denver.

The Royals, who now take to the road for 12 straight games, broke a 2-2 deadlock in the eighth inning with three runs on three hits. Tom Poquette opened the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second by Jim Clark.

Tom Harmon was intentionally walked and Frank Ortenzio hit a bloop single to the opposite field to drive in the first run. Jose Martinez's third single of the game drove in Harmon, and Ortenzio scored on a fielder's choice play.

Omaha relief pitcher Eddie Bernard earned his first victory without a loss while working the last two innings. He was summoned in the eighth after starter Paul Pelz ran into trouble.

OSU's Smith Gets Sentence

Norman, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State halfback Fountain Smith was given a two-year sentence on a guilty plea of selling marijuana to an undercover agent.

Smith entered the guilty plea on May 15, 1973, to a charge of selling marijuana to an undercover agent in Norman on Aug. 9, 1972.

He was sentenced Monday by Cleveland County District Court Judge Elwin Brown.

Doane's Pakozdi Looses To Miles

Kansas City (AP) — No. 6 Seeded Billy Miles of Bellhaven in Mississippi defeated Doane's Alex Pakozdi in the first round of the NAIA tennis tournament Tuesday, 6-4, 6-3.

Astros Blanked

HOUSTON (AP) — Ernie McAnally pitched a five-hitter and veteran Ron Fairly drove in a pair of runs, helping the Montreal Expos to a 5-0 victory over the Houston Astros Tuesday night.

The Expos took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning, loading the bases on singles by Boots Day and Willie Davis and a walk to Ken Singleton. Fairly then drove in two runs with a bllop single to left field which just dropped in behind shortstop Roger Metzger.

Connors Nets Easy Victories

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Favored Jimmy Connors, ranked with Stan Smith as the No. 1 tennis player in the United States, took only one hour to score two lopsided victories Tuesday in the Northern Lawn Tennis Tournament.

Connors, from Belleville, Ill., went on court only two hours after arriving in Manchester and trounced Mark Wilson of Britain 6-1, 6-1 and Pieter Burki of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-1 in advancing into the third round.

Connors is competing here because he was banned by organizers from participating in this week's French Open Championships in Paris. He is using this grass court event as a warmup for Wimbledon, which begins June 24.

Harris Dead

Portland, Ore. (UPI) — T. W. (Smokey) Harris, last surviving member of Portland's first hockey team in 1914, the Portland Rosebuds, died Tuesday. The Rosebud franchise became the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League in 1926.

Hastings Camp Honors Cagers

Hastings — Mark Etzelmiller of Minden has been named most valuable player during the first summer session of the Hastings College basketball camps.

Other MVP's included Bob Keller of Bassett in the intermediate league and Jon Sunvold of Blue Springs, Mo. in the minor league.

Robert Reeson of West Point was named most improved player in the major leagues, while David Samsula of St. Paul and Mitch Schwenka of Minden were accorded the same honor in intermediate and minor loups.

National League Cites Increases

San Francisco (AP) — National League baseball attendance through May was 4,295,857, an increase of 376,314 over the total for the same period last season.

Attendance in May was 2,156,107 for 161 games, an increase of 260,851 over last May, the league office said Tuesday.

Counterfeiters Are Costing Record Industry Millions Of Dollars

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Counterfeiters are pressing bogus phonograph records which fool most customers and cost the recording industry millions of dollars each year.

"These parasites wait until a record becomes a hit, then move in and try to skim off the top," says an attorney for Columbia Records in Los Angeles. "They victimize the artist, writers, companies and public with lousy records."

Detecting counterfeits poses problems for the consumer, because both the sound and packaging are copied. In fact, it usually takes a keen eye to spot the cover art's slightly faded colors and sloppy lettering, and a careful ear to pick up most audio failings.

Though impossible to accurately compute the number in circulation, the Recording Industry Association of America estimates about 5 million phony discs have been sold during the past two years at a loss of more than $15 million to the industry. In addition, the industry claims it loses millions in pirated tape sales.

In New York, Jules Yarnell, special counsel on piracy for the 55-company association, said 12 to 15 companies reported record counterfeiting in the past year alone.

Capitol, CBS, A&M, Warner Brothers and RCA were among the companies hit. Counterfeited artists included Elvis Presley, Paul Simon, Sly and the Family Stone, Bill Withers and the late Janis Joplin.

In some cases, Yarnell said, bogus albums were easily spotted because they sold for less than $3, below what the retailer normally pays for a legitimate hit album. In other cases, he said, counterfeits have been sold at the same price or higher than the real product.

Usually, counterfeits are discovered when consumers return records with complaints. As the Columbia attorney said, "The customer who unwittingly buys a counterfeit and doesn't like the quality will see our label and think we ripped him off."

Concern over damage to its reputation and financial losses led Columbia to post bounties, offering its hundreds of field staffers $50 for each tip resulting in an arrest or a civil suit.

The counterfeiters do not confine themselves to big corporate prey who can usually absorb losses. The Grateful Dead Recording Co.'s first album, "Wake of the Flood," barely hit the streets last October before imitations started competing for sales.

"We went out and bought 60 or so counterfeits for a couple of bucks each," company president Ron Rakow said in San Rafael, Calif. "We gave the distributors a few copies each so they could compare them with the real thing."

An FBI affadvait filed last December quoted one Los Angeles record dealer as saying he was offered 100,000 counterfeit Grateful Dead bums at $1.50 each, compared to a wholesale price of about $2.40 for the legitimate product.

A Berkeley, Calif. dealer purchased 297 counterfeits and a Denver dealer was offered the same Greatful Dead album at $1.65 per copy, the FBI said. Both outlets dealt with the same Van Nuys, Calif. distributor.

"There have been no arrests but we have served some search warrants," said FBI spokesman John Morrison in Los Angeles. "As to where the counterfeits are originating from, we don't know at this time."

The penalty for violation of federal copyright statutes can include a $100 to $1,000 fine and as much as one year in prison on each count. However, Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert Brosio said felony charges of interstate transportation or stolen property and mail fraud would be likely companion charges.

While law enforcement officials are pursuing the origins of illicit records, the record companies are attempting to shut off the flow at the retail level. That presents great obstacles, too.

Pat Nichols of Discount Records here, a division of CBS retail stores, said the store accidentally received some counterfeits through its regular distributors. "We had them on our shelves briefly but returned them when we found out," he said.

"Counterfeiting is an easy thing to do," said Bob Tolefson of the seven-store Record Factory chain here. "You take a picture of the album cover, front and back, paste it together and press the record. The average customer can't even tell the difference."

Stan Goman, manager of Tower Records here, said, "It's a bizarre thing that's hard to control because unscrupulous dealers always will be looking for cheap counterfeits.

"We haven't noticed any here," he said. "But maybe they're so good you can't tell them from the real thing."

Destructive Devices Law Said Valid

By United Press International

The State Justice Department said Tuesday there's nothing wrong with a statute under which an American Indian Movement (AIM) leader was charged in connection with an incident at Scottsbluff last year.

Leroy Casados was charged and convicted of possessing a "Molotov cocktail" in connection with a demonstration at Scottsbluff during which a junior high school building was firebombed last January.

Attorneys for Casados appealed the conviction saying the specific law under which the man was charged is unconstitutional in that it made no mention of Molotov cocktails.

The law in question pertains to destructive devices.

The Justice Department, however, said the law is valid and is broad enough to include such thing as Molotov cocktails even though there is no definition of them in the law. On that basis, the court was asked to affirm the conviction.

"The term has been in fairly common use for more than 30 years," the Justice Department said, referring to the term Molotov cocktail.

"The Legislature certainly is not required to define every term it uses, if the meaning of the term is commonly understood," the department added.

Firms To Merge Despite Outcries From Dissidents

Detroit (AP) — Armada Corp. and Hoskins Manufacturing Co. have announced a merger despite opposition by dissident Hoskins shareholders.

Armada, which bought 52.6% of the Hoskins Stock last June, said it will exchange 1.27 Armada shares for each Hoskins share, a rate considered too low by the dissidents.

Hoskins produces electrical resistance alloys and Armada process refined tallow and animal feed products.

Iran Venture Agreed

New York (AP) — Gould, Inc., the Chicago-based manufacturer of electrical and industrial equipment, has announced it has entered into a joint venture in Iran to manufacture electric motors for markets in the Middle East.

Soviets Claim West Seeking New Markets

Moscow (AP) — Economic cooperation with Communist countries is an "objective necessity" for the West, plagued as it is by crises, the newspaper of Soviet industry claimed

Socialist Industry said that the energy and currency crises, as well as the growth of inflation and rise in the cost of oil and raw materials, had forced the capitalist countries to search for "new markets and new ways of investing their capital and to look in a new way upon the socialist world."

Challenger Oscar Alvarado of California twisted and distorted the face of world junior middleweight champion Koichi Wajima with this punch. Alvarado won the fight.

Padres Anxious For Free Agent

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1971, when Bill Almon was graduated from high school, scouts from every major league baseball team were hot on the trail of the young shortstop.

But Brown University won the Almon sweepstakes. Almon wrote to all the clubs, thanking them for their interest and explaining that he had decided to go to college.

The San Diego Padres took a chance anyway and picked Almon in the seventh round of baseball's free agent draft three years ago. Almon turned down their bid and his name was tucked away in baseball's future file.

Now, the Padres, picking first in Wednesday's free agent draft, get another shot at Almon, and they are expected to go for him again. This time, however, they won't be bidding against Brown University.

Almon is considered the top prospect in a talent-laden group of high school and college players up for grabs at the two-day draft. He batted .357 in three varsity seasons at Brown and showed long ball punch with 13 home runs and 49 runs batted in.

"He can run, hit, field, and has the great determination to make good that scouts are looking for today," said Lefty Lefebvre, a Boston scout.

Lefebvre would love to see the Red Sox get Almon but dounbts that he'll last long enough in the draft.

Peter Bavasi, general manager of the Padres, has indicated that Almon will be the top choice.

"Every team we talk to considers Almon the No. 1 prospect in the country," said Bavasi.

There are other top prospects available, including right-handed pitcher Tom Boggs of Austin, Tex., and outfielder Lonnie Smith of Los Angeles. If the Padres pick Almon, Texas, which drafts second, is expected to take Boggs. Smith also is expected to go fairly high in the first round.

The scouts selected 785 players in last June's draft, and four of them moved straight into the major leagues. They were outfielder Dave Winfield with San Diego, pitchers David Clyde with Texas and Eddie Bain with Minnesota, and shortstop Robin Yount with Milwaukee.

In the regular phase, after San Diego and Texas make the first two selections, the draft will continue with this order: Philadelphia, Cleveland, Atlanta, Milwaukee, the Chicago Cubs, the Chicago White Sox, Montreal, California, Pittsburgh, the New York Yankees, St. Louis, Minnesota. Houston, Detroit, the New York Mets, Kansas City, San Francisco. Boston, Los Angeles, Oakland, Cincinnati and Baltimore.

In the secondary phase, players previously drafted but not signed will be available, but not players such as Almon who passed up drafts to attend college. Cincinnati picks first in that phase followed in order by California, Houston, Texas, Los Angeles, Detroit, the Mets, Kansas City. San Diego, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Cleveland, Montreal, Baltimore, San Francisco, Oakland, the Cubs, the White Sox, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, the Yankees, St. Louis and Minnesota.

Nebraska Golfers Fail To Get Spot

Denver, Colo. — Nebraska's four golfers failed to gain a spot in this year's U.S. Open after competing in a sectional qualifying round here Monday at the Meadow Hills Country Club.

Joe Wall, teaching pro at Omaha's Highland Country Club, shared the first round lead after firing a 69. But Wall faded to a 75, 144 total to finish four strokes off the 140 qualifying pace.

Following Wall as Nebraska's next best finisher was Gary Teel of Lincoln who shot a 77-72, 149. Rennie Sasse, also of Lincoln was next with a 79-71, 150, while Council Bluffs pro Rick Werner fired a 77-76, 153 total.

Barry Ashbee

Flyers' Ashbee Retires

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers defenseman Barry Ashbee retired from professional Hockey Tuesday, his career cut short by an eye injury suffered in Stanley Cup play.

"I don't have enough vision in the right eye to continue to play hockey and the doctor says it isn't going to improve," Ashbee announced at a news conference.

He was injured by a puck fired by Dale Rolfe of the New York Rangers in a National Hockey League semifinal playoff game April 28. The Flyers beat New York in that series, then whipped the Boston Bruins to win the cup.

"There is a scar in the central portion of the retina due to hemorrhaging which took place when he was hit," explained Ashbee's physician, Dr. William Tasman. "This will prevent his ever regaining full sight in the eye. Barry can do almost everything except play hockey."

World Series Has Cinderella Team

The College World Series of baseball, which will be held in Omaha for the 25th consecutive year starting Friday, has a Cenderella team in the field.

It is the University of Northern Colorado, which advanced to the tournament by sweeping a two-game series with Arizona, which went into district competition ranked as the nation's No. 1 college baseball team.

The Bears (that's the nickname) will get a chance to be a giant-killer again right off the bat when they go against Big Eight champion Oklahoma in the 8 p.m. game Friday in Rosenblatt Stadium.

What's so amazing about Northern Colorado's play is that a pair of freshmen pitchers were responsible for all four wins in the NCAA District 7 tournament at Greeley, Colo.

And the Bears really are a home-grown team with eight former Colorado prep athletes, including the aforementioned pitchers.

Northern Colorado has been to Omaha once before (in 1962), but in recent seasons the Bears have played in the so-called college division NCAA tournament.

The coach is Tom Petroff, who has compiled a 99-36 record in four seasons at UNC and in 1971 was named national college division coach of the year. The bears compete in the Great Plains Athletic Conference. They go to Omaha with a 31-11 season record.

Just a year ago Thoren and Bailey, who also pitched victories earlier in the playoff against Gonzaga, were rivals in Colorado's Class AAA baseball championship game between Aurora Hinkley and Longmont in a game won by Thoren.

Bailey goes into the World Series with a 10-1 record while Thoren is 7-1. Both are 6-1 and 180 pounds and have almost identical earned run averages. Bailey is tops at 3.33 with 56 strikeouts.

Oklahoma Looks Best On Paper

The Oklahoma Sooners, who swept to their third consecutive Big Eight title this spring, look stronger than the Bears on paper with a 42-6 overall record, a .336 team batting average and a pitching staff that turned in a 2.19 overall earned run average

Their strength, however, doesn't worry the NCU coach whose philosophy is simple: In a short series anything can happen. Petroff also believes in shooting the works by going with his best pitchers in order . . . playing for the moment and holding nothing back.

The World Series opener matches Miami of Florida and the Ivy League champion Harvard. Miami is 48-9 to Harvard's 31-9, but the Hurricanes don't have the best record in the field.

That honor goes to . . . no, not defending champion Southern California, but to the Texas Longhorns, winners of the last seven Southwest Conference baseball championships and owners of a 52-6 record.

Texas is matched against Southern California in the first round of the double-elimination tournament. That game will be played at 5 p.m. Saturday. The Trojans are going for their tenth title and fifth in a row, coming in with a 45-19 record.

Miami and Texas have been clutch-performing teams this spring, the Hurricanes winning 12 one-run decisions and the Longhorns taking 11 of them.

Festivities at the tournament get underway at noon Friday when the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce sponsors its annual luncheon in the Hilton ballroom.

Speaker will be Lee MacPhail, president of the American League. Coaches and members of the eight teams will be guests.

Rowdy Fans Confront Players . . . Indians Forfeit To Rangers

CLEVELAND (UPI) — One week ago, players from the Texas Rangers and the Cleveland Indians got into a fight during a game in Texas but Tuesday night, both teams were helping each other fight off an unruly crowd during the ninth inning.

After John Lowenstein's sacrifice fly scored Ed Crosby from third, enabling Cleveland to tie the game 5-5, part of the crowd of 23,134 on hand for "Ten Cent Beer Night" jumped out of Municipal Stadium's rightfield stands and charged Texas rightfielder Jeff Burroughs.

When Burroughs fought back, both benches emptied and the players were surrounded by hundreds of fans. A few fights broke out and umpire Nester Chylak was hit on the head.

At that point, the umpires forfeited the game to Texas 9-0.

"When Chylak got hit on the head, I knew we lost the game," said Cleveland manager Ken Aspromonte, who watched his club battle back only to lose on the forfeit.

"It's just disgraceful," added Aspromonte. "You go out there to win a game and end up having to protect yourself. Bottles and chairs were flying and I think the fans just lost the interest of the ballclub. Those guys out there (pointing to the lockerroom) just don't give a good goddamn right now."

Cleveland pitcher Tom Hilgendorf was hit on the head by a steel chair and Texas catcher Duke Sims and infielder Mike Hardgrove got into a tussle with a fan at the pitcher's mound just before the Rangers were awarded the game.

Within one hour after the end of the game, police reported six adults were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

"I thought we went as far as we could go and the Texas ballclub did a fine job of staying in the dugout," said Chylak. "I told (Texas manager Billy) Martin since his bullpen had to be evacuated in the seventh inning that he could bring all the subs he wanted and I'd give them time to warm up."

The Texas bullpen crew had to be moved into the Rangers' dugout in the seventh inning after being subjected to fireworks, smokebombs and empty beer cups throughout the early part of the game.

"They were just uncontrollable beasts," added Chylak. "I thought the police did a great job, especially being outnumbered. I'm just sorry that Cleveland had to suffer the forefeit. The only other place you might experience this is a (expletive deleted) zoo."

"It looked like a zoo and a circus out there," added Lowenstein while pitcher Steve Kline, who came to the Indians from New York, stated, "the Yankee fans are angels compared to what we saw out there tonight.

"What if Gaylord Perry got hurt or any of the other players? We had to go out there and help the Rangers. We couldn't leave them hanging."

Martin, who said he hadn't seen anything like this in 23 years, added a number of Rangers players got hurt in the melee.

"Burroughs got a jammed thumb," said Martin. "I am very proud of the Cleveland players. They saved our lives. Those fans just couldn't control themselves after drinking that beer. We just wanted good clean baseball but all they had out there were complete idiots and jerks.

"It was the worst sports showing I have ever seen in my history of baseball. It should have been called in the seventh inning when you warn the fans once to get off the field. A second time, the game is a forfeit. I would want it the same way back home if our fans did it.

Martin said that two guys punched Burroughs and added, "there was no way we would let them get on him. He would have got destroyed. Hell, they would have killed him. The older man who slugged Burroughs got hit a few times and Hilgendorf and (Dave) Duncan really showed me they had some guts. I'm proud of them and the Cleveland players. I called Aspromonte and told him that."

The forfeit was the first since the Senators forfeited to the Yankees in the last game played in Washington, Sept. 29, 1971.

Favorite Role To Gabrielson

GULLANE, Scotland (UPI) — Atlanta insurance broker Jim Gabrielson donned the role of favorite today to become Britain's new amateur golf champion.

Gabrielson, 32, a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team, became the only seeded player in his half of the draw Tuesday after a convincing 6-5 second round win over Scotsman Morrison Zuill and the surprise departure of defending champion American Dick Siderowf, top Britons Charlie Green and Harry Ashby and South African Neville Sundelson.

But Gabrielson would only say "maybe" when asked if he thought he would have an easy run through to the finals.

"It's too early to talk about my chances," he said. "But let's face it—that's what I'm here for, to win."

First he must defeat Bill Trombley, of Dallas, Tex., today for a place in the last 32.

Of the 48 Americans who started the tournament, only 12 remained after Tuesday's play. One of the victims was Siderowf, the Westport, Conn., stockbroker who took the title last year.

He went out at the hands of a 23-year-old Glasgow fashion salesman named Mick Miller whose 25-foot putt on the 18th green sent him through.

Miller, a former Scottish youth international, played the more experienced Siderowf stroke for stroke through 17 holes, where he missed a 12inch putt that could have put him in the lead.

"I've no excuses, I played lousy golf," Siderowf said later.

Another American hopeful, Charles Harrison, 42, like Gabrielson, an insurance broker from Atlanta was to play Scot Finlay Black today.

But most of the large galleries were expected to be out with Jim Key, of Colombus, Ga., who faces England's Peter Davison. Key played the first two rounds wearing an enormous sombrero and dark glasses.

Storen Says League To Operate Next Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Storen, commissioner of the American Basketball Association, stated unequivocally Tuesday that his shaky league would be in operation for the 1974-75 season, but emphasized he would not know until June 21 what shape or form it would take.

While admitting that his league faced serious problems, the optimistic Storen denied a published report that the seven-year-old ABA would dissolve within 30 days and four of its teams—the champion New York Nets, Kentucky Colonels, Indiana Pacers and San Antonio Spurs—would be absorbed as expansion teams by the rival National Basketball Association.

The ABA's major problems stem from the uncertainty of six of its 10 franchises.

Owner Tedd Munchak of the Carolina Cougars has said he would not operate the franchise in North Carolina next season, and already has begun dispersing his personnel.

Coach Larry Brown and General Manager Carl Scheer, given permission by Munchak to negotiate with Denver, were signed by the Rockets. Center Jim Chones was released outright, waived through the ABA and signed by the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers. All-Star guard Ted McClain was sold to Kentucky and 1972-73 ABA Most Valuable Player Billy Cunningham reportedly is on the brink of returning to Philadelphia of the NBA.

The Memphis Tams, Virginia Squires, Utah Stars and Denver Rockets all reportedly are up for sale while the San Diego Conquistadors have been told by Storen to find a new arena to replace their 3,200-seat Community Concourse or move.

The commmissioner stressed that all the answers to the uncertainties would be resolved at the league's meeting in Louisville, Ky. June 20-21.

"We have established June 21st as a deadline so that we can step off early in the right direction for next season," said Storen. "We are doing this in the best interests of the ABA and pro basketball, and especially the fans. We'll come out of that meeting with our starting lineup."

Despite the league's unsteady situation, cities such as Los Angeles, Chicago, Tampa, Fla., and the Albany-Schenectady area in upstate New York have been mentioned as expansion possibilities. Storen said there could be between eight and 12 ABA teams next season, depending on developments at the Louisville meeting.

If there are only eight, he explained, then the players from the two disbanded franchises would be dispersed among the remaining clubs.

Storen also said that several teams in both pro basketball leagues have been steadily losing money because of the huge contracts and bonuses they have been forced to pay "for untried players in the bidding war. Some clowns are being paid as the result of their ability to negotiate and not their ability to play. That is not the American way."

He said he hoped that, in the near future, the imbalance would be corrected, but "not as long as there are two leagues and one club in each league competing for a No. 1 draft choice and their agents have the ability to operate as they currently do."

The solution, he said, would be merger. "It has to come sometime," Storen said, "but-when, I don't know."

Royals Blank Baltimore, 8-0

BALTIMORE (UPI) — John Mayberry and Amos Otis slammed home runs behind the three-hit pitching of Al Fitzmorris as the Kansas City Royals clouted the Baltimore Orioles, 8-0, Tuesday night.

Mayberry's 12th homer was a three-run blast that climaxed a five-run third inning and chased loser Ross Grimsley. Otis cracked a solo shot, his third, in the first inning.

Singles by George Brett, Al Cowens, and Jim Wohlford scored the first run of the third inning before Otis singled across Cowens. Mayberry's blow brought home Wohlford and Otis.

Fitzmorris, 5-2, scattered three singles as he won his third complete game. Jesse Jefferson replaced Grimsley, 56. Hal McRae and Cowens drove across solo runs in the fifth and sixth innings.

Fitzmorris' shutout was the first by a Royals' pitcher this season.

Scouts Talk With Guidolin

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Armand "Bep" Guidolin, who resigned a week ago as head coach of the Boston Bruins, is one of four men being considered as head coach for the Kansas City Scouts, one of two new National Hockey League franchises.

"We have been talking to him, but nothing has been signed," said Bill Grigsby, Scouts' assistant to the president.

Grigsby said the Scouts would name a head coach Friday, but "There have been no contracts signed yet."

Nance Attorney Says No Pact

BOSTON (UPI) — An attorney for veteran running back Jim Nance denied Tuesday his client has signed with the Houston Texans of the new World Football League.

The Texans, at the opening of their training camp Monday in Houston, announced the signing of the 6-1, 240 pound Nance who gained 5,300 yards rushing during seven seasons in the National Football League with the New England Patriots and the New York Jets.

"We will probably come to terms with the Texans," said Nance's attorney Irwin Cooper, "but as yet, there is no signed contract."

Aaron's Blast Boosts Braves

Philadelphia (UPI) — Hank Aaron became the all-time home run king for the second time this season Tuesday night when he belted a grand slam in the seventh inning to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 7-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The home run, his 10th of the year and the 723rd in regular season play, was the 16th grand slam for Aaron, who had been tied for the National League career lead with Willie McCovey. It was Aaron's second slam of the season. Lou Gehrig holds the American League record of 23.

Counting World Series and all-star games, Aaron's home run was home run number 731, which broke a tie with Babe Ruth and makes Aaron the undisputed home run champion. Ruth, who had 714 regular season homes, had 730 including the World Series and All-Star games.

Aaron connected off reliever Eddie Watt to spark a six-run seventh inning for Atlanta, which took a 1-0 lead in the first on Mike Lum's home run. The Phils used Del Unser's homer in the second to tie the score and took the lead 2-1 in the fourth on a Willie Montanez single.

Boys Team Includes Deaf Girl

CHICAGO (UPI) — The dream of Susan Scaletta, 9, to play baseball with the boys began materializing Tuesday.

League authorities notified Susan's mother, Mrs. William McLeod, that her daughter was to report Tuesday afternoon to Pottawattomie Park to begin practice for C League competition.

Mrs. McLeod acknowledged the park league officials still were "not too excited" about Susan's presence. They "invited" her to join the league on the advice of the park district attorney after Susan's parents and the American Civil Liberties Union began applying pressure.

The bright-eyed little athlete is deaf but that doesn't affect her play.

"She's really been working out with my husband, like every night," Hazel McLeod said.

Being able to play ball was Susan's biggest thrill. Her second was a meeting with Ron 5 "She got to meet Ron Santo for her birthday," Mrs. McLeod said. "He's her idol."

Susan was one of 120 players invited to join the league and is guaranteed a spot on one of the teams.

Blalock was the first woman to compete, but was forced to withdraw because of the flu. Greenberg finished second in the doubles competition with teammate Bob Klein with Rick Barry and Kyle Rote, Jr., the winners.

Trap Shoot Slated

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

Doniphan — A Who's Who of all-America trap shooters is what you're likely to find as the Nebraska State Trap Shoot opens both barrels Thursday.

Headed by the Amateur Trapshooting Association's high average shooter for 1973, Big Spring's Bueford Bailey and the likes of Omaha's B. E. Morrissey, Jim Beck and others, the field is certain to host some of the top gunners in the country.

Bailey, Morrissey and Beck all averaged over 99 per cent success per 100 registered targets (a minimum of 2,500) during the past season.

And all three are members of most of the trapshooting all-American teams selected by various gruops and publications this past year.

Bailey is the defending state all-around champion. Morrissey is the defending zone champion of champions.

Other defending Nebraska champions likely to be on hand include singles champ John Voss of Omaha, doubles champ Frank Hoppe of Lincoln, handicap champ Gerald Hanke of Lindsey, and women's champ Jon Morris of Gothenburg, another of the all-Americans to be shooting in the four-day event.

Thursday's opening rounds will include the Director's Shoot and open doubles.

Second day events include the Nebraska doubles championship, the Nebraska Open Championship, and the Nebraska Open Handicap Championship.

Third day shooting includes the Nebraska Singles and Class Championship, and the final day includes the Nebraska Handicap Championship and remaining events.

The 1974 shoot marks the 96th annual state meet and the 25th anniversary of the Doniphan state trapshooting grounds.

West Says Walton Will Help

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers believes UCLA's Bill Walton is the medicine the Portland Trail Blazers need to make them a winner in the National Basketball Association.

During a quick trip to Portland Monday, West said, "I believe Portland got the player this year who will make the other players play as a unit."

He said that with Walton Portland would not get dominated in the middle."

But despite the addition of Walton, West said he didn't think the Blazer turnaround would be automatic.

"Portland's big problem," he said, "is to feel it can beat anyone."

He said the Blazers had done "two very positive" things since the end of the season— signing Walton and signing Lenny Wilkens as head coach. "Wilkens, I think, has one of the finest basketball minds in the game," he said.

West said the American Basketball Association made him a "definite offer" under which he would have been coach at a Los Angeles club with Walton as a player.

Asked why he went for the lesser of the two offers and opted to stay with the Lakers, West said, "I'd like to think that money isn't everything to me. I'd like to believe that I have some allegiance to something that has been awfully good to me."

Final Qualifying Spots Filled For U.S. Open

By Associated Press

Former PGA champion Jerry Barber qualified Tuesday for the U. S. Open Golf championship and he had to beat his assistant to do it.

The 58-year-old Barber won the last spot in the San Francisco sectional qualifying as the final 53 spots in the Open were filled at seven sites across the nation.

Barber was one of seven pros who qualified at the par-71, 6,307-yard San Francisco Golf Club. He defeated Charles Montalbano, his assistant at Los Angeles' Griffith Park Golf Club.

Barber had a par five on the first playoff hole. Montalbano took a six when he three-putted after his chip-shot bounced off the pin to the fringe of the green.

Tom Storey, a former singer and dancer who now serves as head pro at Las Vegas' Fairway to the Stars Golf Club, shot a 36-hole total of 141 to lead the qualifying at San Francisco.

The U. S. Open will be played June 13-16 at Winged Foot Golf Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y. Twenty players in the 150-man field, including defending Open champion Johnny Miller, were exempt from qualifying.

DeWitt Weaver, 34, a tour veteran whose biggest victory was in the 1971 U. S. Match Play championship, coasted to a seven-under-par 137 to pace qualifiers at Atlanta.

Weaver, who went to school on a football scholarship and once was backup quarterback to Don Meredith at Southern Methodist, fired rounds of 68 and 69.

Denny Lyons turned in a second-round 70 and was the only golfer to break par, leading six qualifiers at Pittsburgh. Lyons of Lewiston, N. Y., a slightly-built veteran who finished 20th in last year's Open, fired a 143 over the 7,006-yard, par-72 course.

Also qualifying at Pittsburgh was 51-year-old former U. S. Amateur Champion William Campbell of Huntington, W. Va. Former Open champion Lou Worsham sustained an unspecified minor injury and failed to turn in a card.

Andy Nusbaum, a former tour regular who now is club pro at Siwanow in Bronxville, N. Y., shot a three-under-par 140 to pace sectional qualifying at Deal, N. J. Nusbaum turned in rounds of 68 and 72.

Kansas City pro Bob Stone, 43, shot a one-over par 145 to lead the sectional qualifying at St. Louis. The 43-year-old Stone fired a two-under-par 70 in the afternoon round, the day's only subpar round among the 22 contestants.

Gals To Get Equal Time At Golfing

Omaha (AP)—A new state law will make it illegal for golf courses to prohibit women golfers at certain hours, Deputy City Attorney James Fellows said.

LB681, which takes effect next month, is a public accomodations law that includes a provision making sex discrimination illegal if a person is denied "accomodations, advantages, facilities, services or privileges" because of his or her sex.

Ricky Salisbury, coordinator of the Mayou's Commission on the Status of Women, pointed out the law.

Several women had complained they were prevented from golfing at area courses before 1 p.m. on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Mrs. Salisbury said she will send copies of the new law to courses that restrict women.

Women prevented from playing at certain hours could file a complaint with the State Equal Opportunities Commission.

Offensive Line To Share Honor

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills' offensive line, which helped O.J. Simpson rush for a National Football League record 2,003 yards last season, will share the 1974 Blocker of the Year award of the 1,000 Yard Club Foundation.

Simpson is scheduled to be on hand to present the award at the foundation's 11th annual banquet here June 11.

Bills' linemen to be honored are centers Bruce Jarvis and Mike Montler, tight end Paul Seymour, tackles Dave Foley and Donnie Green and guards Reggie McKenzie and Joe DeLamielleure.

Simpson also is to present a blocking trophy to Bills' owner Ralph Wilson, who will turn it over to the National Pro Football Hall of Fame at Canton, Ohio.

Rierson ISU Baseball Coach

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — Clair Rierson, 35, former college and semi-pro baseball player was named Iowa State University head baseball coach Tuesday.

Rierson, elevated to the post by athletic director Lou McCullough, succeeds Cap Timm, 66, who retired this year after 36 years as head coach.

Rierson joined the ISU baseball staff in 1965 and has been in charge of recruiting since 1967. He played first base and outfield for te Cyclones in 1961 and 1962

Tri-State Golf Meet Scheduled

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — The 34th annual Men's Tri-State Golf Tournament involving golfers from Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado has been scheduled in Cheyenne June 23.

Frank Peterson, Cheyenne Country Club pro, said invitations had been extended to golfers in the three states through more than 75 golf clubs.

Forty-five holes of medal play are scheduled for those in the championship flight. Other flights will play 36 holes during the two-day event.

Peterson said entries will be limited to the first 125 golfers registering to play.

Broncos Seek More Seating

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Broncos have asked Mayor Bill Michols and the city council to allow residents to vote on a proposed $25 million expansion for Mile High Stadium.

Gerald Phipps, board chairman of the National Football League team, and Dick Kitchen, corporate secretary, asked Tuesday that the council pass an ordinance allowing the vote on general obligation bonds in the Sept. 10 primary election.

Phipps said the stadium capacity would be increased to 75,016 seats from its present 51,656, with work to begin Jan. 1, 1976.

"We cannot exist economically with a 50,000-seat stadium," Phipps said. "We feel that we have kept our obligation to the city of Denver. All we ask is that the City and County of Denver give us a stadium so we can be competitive."

Omaha Blasts Denver Bears

Omaha (UPI) — The Omaha Royals closed a 12-game home stand at Rosenblatt Stadium Tuesday night with a 5-2 win over Denver.

The Royals, who now take to the road for 12 straight games, broke a 2-2 deadlock in the eighth inning with three runs on three hits. Tom Poquette opened the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second by Jim Clark.

Tom Harmon was intentionally walked and Frank Ortenzio hit a bloop single to the opposite field to drive in the first run. Jose Martinez's third single of the game drove in Harmon, and Ortenzio scored on a fielder's choice play.

Omaha relief pitcher Eddie Bernard earned his first victory without a loss while working the last two innings. He was summoned in the eighth after starter Paul Pelz ran into trouble.

OSU's Smith Gets Sentence

Norman, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State halfback Fountain Smith was given a two-year sentence on a guilty plea of selling marijuana to an undercover agent.

Smith entered the guilty plea on May 15, 1973, to a charge of selling marijuana to an undercover agent in Norman on Aug. 9, 1972.

He was sentenced Monday by Cleveland County District Court Judge Elwin Brown.

NFL Awards Seattle With 1976 Franchise

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Football League Tuesday awarded Seattle its 28th franchise beginning in the 1976 season.

Like Tampa, which was awarded an expansion franchise by the league last month, the new Seattle team will pay $16 million to join the NFL.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle made the announcement after a lengthy first day of meetings here.

"We have voted to expand to 28 teams with Seattle joining the league in 1976," Rozelle said, "and our expansion committee is still an open deck and will continue to explore future expansions."

Although it was reported that rental terms for the new domed stadium in Seattle were holding up the city's bid to land an NFL franchise, Rozelle said that all of those problems have been solved and the terms now were "quite equitable."

"Seattle is the 16th largest market and therefore very attractive," said Rozelle. "In addition to the new domed stadium which will seat about 65,000, it is the only area in the country in which we didn't have a team."

In explaining his "open deck" statement in regard to the expansion committee, Rozelle said the league is now considering any number of cities, including some, such as New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, where the NFL already has teams.

"As it is," he said, "we're already getting pressure from the people in Tampa to move up the expansion to 1975 and I would suspect that the Seattle people will feel the same. Therefore I'm not ruling out anything."

Along with Seattle, other cities in the current bidding for a 1976 expansion franchise were Memphis, Honolulu and Phoenix. Obviously, the NFL moguls did not want at this time to cause an open conflict with the fledgling World Football League, which already has franchises in Memphis and Honolulu.

Rozelle said he expected the Seattle ownership and the Tampa ownership to be selected within the next 90 days.

Astros Blanked

HOUSTON (AP) — Ernie McAnally pitched a five-hitter and veteran Ron Fairly drove in a pair of runs, helping the Montreal Expos to a 5-0 victory over the Houston Astros Tuesday night.

The Expos took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning, loading the bases on singles by Boots Day and Willie Davis and a walk to Ken Singleton. Fairly then drove in two runs with a bllop single to left field which just dropped in behind shortstop Roger Metzger.

Connors Nets Easy Victories

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Favored Jimmy Connors, ranked with Stan Smith as the No. 1 tennis player in the United States, took only one hour to score two lopsided victories Tuesday in the Northern Lawn Tennis Tournament.

Connors, from Belleville, Ill., went on court only two hours after arriving in Manchester and trounced Mark Wilson of Britain 6-1, 6-1 and Pieter Burki of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-1 in advancing into the third round.

Connors is competing here because he was banned by organizers from participating in this week's French Open Championships in Paris. He is using this grass court event as a warmup for Wimbledon, which begins June 24.

Harris Dead

Portland, Ore. (UPI) — T. W. (Smokey) Harris, last surviving member of Portland's first hockey team in 1914, the Portland Rosebuds, died Tuesday. The Rosebud franchise became the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League in 1926.

Hastings Camp Honors Cagers

Hastings — Mark Etzelmiller of Minden has been named most valuable player during the first summer session of the Hastings College basketball camps.

Other MVP's included Bob Keller of Bassett in the intermediate league and Jon Sunvold of Blue Springs, Mo. in the minor league.

Robert Reeson of West Point was named most improved player in the major leagues, while David Samsula of St. Paul and Mitch Schwenka of Minden were accorded the same honor in intermediate and minor loups.

National League Cites Increases

San Francisco (AP) — National League baseball attendance through May was 4,295,857, an increase of 376,314 over the total for the same period last season.

Attendance in May was 2,156,107 for 161 games, an increase of 260,851 over last May, the league office said Tuesday.

Iceland Split On Retaining, Ousting U.S. Military Base

KEFLAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Iceland's general elections at the end of the month could serve as a referendum on the future of the American military base here used chiefly for tracking Soviet submarines in the Atlantic.

United States defense officials maintain that the base is a "critical point in the present-day balance of power."

Iceland's left-oriented coalition government asked the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to totally phase out the base at Keflavik over an 18-month period beginning at the end of this year, but parliament was dissolved May 9 and new elections will be held June 30.

The Independence party, the country's largest political group, and its ally, the Social Democratic party, want to keep the base. The Progressive party, the Marxist People's Alliance, and the Left Liberals — the components of the former coalition — insist the American presence come to an end.

Keflavik, which has two runways and a collection of low slung buildings on a mournful corner of the island, is a mixed post of 3,300 airmen and sailors essentially assigned to monitoring the Soviet Union's nuclear submarines as they move southward in the Atlantic towards North America and Western Europe. It has nine P3C-Orion radar tracking planes for sub control and 12 F4 Phantom interceptors used in surveillance of Soviet air operations.

The position of the United States and NATO since Iceland officially asked for the termination of the base a year ago has been that U.S. personnel could be reduced by about 25 to 30 per cent, but that the base itself is essential, the perfect place for watching Soviet deployment in the Atlantic.

The outgoing Icelandic government, in invoking its treaty rights to cancel the defense agreement with the United States, reasoned that the base is expendable now that it considers the big powers have achieved detente.

If the left coalition is re-elected it is committed to the complete withdrawal of the American presence by the middle of 1976.

Padres Anxious For Free Agent

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1971, when Bill Almon was graduated from high school, scouts from every major league baseball team were hot on the trail of the young shortstop.

But Brown University won the Almon sweepstakes. Almon wrote to all the clubs, thanking them for their interest and explaining that he had decided to go to college.

The San Diego Padres took a chance anyway and picked Almon in the seventh round of baseball's free agent draft three years ago. Almon turned down their bid and his name was tucked away in baseball's future file.

Now, the Padres, picking first in Wednesday's free agent draft, get another shot at Almon, and they are expected to go for him again. This time, however, they won't be bidding against Brown University.

Almon is considered the top prospect in a talent-laden group of high school and college players up for grabs at the two-day draft. He batted .357 in three varsity seasons at Brown and showed long ball punch with 13 home runs and 49 runs batted in.

"He can run, hit, field, and has the great determination to make good that scouts are looking for today," said Lefty Lefebvre, a Boston scout.

Lefebvre would love to see the Red Sox get Almon but dounbts that he'll last long enough in the draft.

Peter Bavasi, general manager of the Padres, has indicated that Almon will be the top choice.

"Every team we talk to considers Almon the No. 1 prospect in the country," said Bavasi.

There are other top prospects available, including right-handed pitcher Tom Boggs of Austin, Tex., and outfielder Lonnie Smith of Los Angeles. If the Padres pick Almon, Texas, which drafts second, is expected to take Boggs. Smith also is expected to go fairly high in the first round.

The scouts selected 785 players in last June's draft, and four of them moved straight into the major leagues. They were outfielder Dave Winfield with San Diego, pitchers David Clyde with Texas and Eddie Bain with Minnesota, and shortstop Robin Yount with Milwaukee.

In the regular phase, after San Diego and Texas make the first two selections, the draft will continue with this order: Philadelphia, Cleveland, Atlanta, Milwaukee, the Chicago Cubs, the Chicago White Sox, Montreal, California, Pittsburgh, the New York Yankees, St. Louis, Minnesota. Houston, Detroit, the New York Mets, Kansas City, San Francisco. Boston, Los Angeles, Oakland, Cincinnati and Baltimore.

In the secondary phase, players previously drafted but not signed will be available, but not players such as Almon who passed up drafts to attend college. Cincinnati picks first in that phase followed in order by California, Houston, Texas, Los Angeles, Detroit, the Mets, Kansas City. San Diego, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Cleveland, Montreal, Baltimore, San Francisco, Oakland, the Cubs, the White Sox, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, the Yankees, St. Louis and Minnesota.

Flyers' Ashbee Retires

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers defenseman Barry Ashbee retired from professional Hockey Tuesday, his career cut short by an eye injury suffered in Stanley Cup play.

"I don't have enough vision in the right eye to continue to play hockey and the doctor says it isn't going to improve," Ashbee announced at a news conference.

He was injured by a puck fired by Dale Rolfe of the New York Rangers in a National Hockey League semifinal playoff game April 28. The Flyers beat New York in that series, then whipped the Boston Bruins to win the cup.

"There is a scar in the central portion of the retina due to hemorrhaging which took place when he was hit," explained Ashbee's physician, Dr. William Tasman. "This will prevent his ever regaining full sight in the eye. Barry can do almost everything except play hockey."

McManaman Gets No Hitter

Steve McManaman's no-hitter paced First National Bank Tuesday night at Sherman Field over National Bank of Commerce, 11-1, in Junior Legion baseball.

In the midget game First Mid America was led by Brian Dahlberg and Stan Haas in an 11-5 victory over Gateway Bank.

Nebraska Golfers Fail To Get Spot

Denver, Colo. — Nebraska's four golfers failed to gain a spot in this year's U.S. Open after competing in a sectional qualifying round here Monday at the Meadow Hills Country Club.

Joe Wall, teaching pro at Omaha's Highland Country Club, shared the first round lead after firing a 69. But Wall faded to a 75, 144 total to finish four strokes off the 140 qualifying pace.

Following Wall as Nebraska's next best finisher was Gary Teel of Lincoln who shot a 77-72, 149. Rennie Sasse, also of Lincoln was next with a 79-71, 150, while Council Bluffs pro Rick Werner fired a 77-76, 153 total.

Milk Donations Made To 16 On Judiciary Panel

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's three largest dairy-farmer cooperatives made political donations of from $100 to $11,000 to at least 16 members of the House Judiciary Committee, which is investigating allegations that President Nixon was influenced by contributions from the same groups.

The recipients include committee chairman Peter W. Rodino, whose urban New Jersey district has no dairy farmers in it. An aide said Rodino didn't ask for the money, and said he could not explain why the cooperatives gave it to the congressman from Newark.

Two of the recipients gave back the money after The Associated Press questioned them about it. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., gave back $100 he got last March, and Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., returned $500 he received in 1972.

They said they acted to avoid any conflict of interest, but the other recipients said they see no conflict.

The committee is investigating allegations that the co-ops gave money to Nixon to raise milk price supports, impose dairy import quotas and divert the course of a Justice Department antitrust investigation.

Nixon received $727,500 from the co-ops over three years, and had been promised $2 million. The White House has said this money didn't influence Nixon's actions.

The three co-ops are Associated Milk Producers, Inc., Dairymen, Inc. and Mid-America Dairymen, Inc. Together they control about one-fourth of the nation's milk production.

According to public records going back to April 7, 1972, these committee members received money from one or more of the co-ops:

M. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., $1,000; William S. Cohen, R-Maine, $3,000; John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., $100; David W. Dennis, R-Ind., $500; Walter Flowers, D-Ala., $1,000; Harold W. Froehlich, R-Wis., $100; William Hungate, D-Mo., $2,300; Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., $2,650; Trent Lott, R-Miss., $2,500; Robert McClory, R-Ill., $500; Edward Mezvinsky, D-Iowa, $11,000; Wayne Owens, D-Utah, $2,600; Railsback, $500; Rangel, $100; Rodino, $4,100, and Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., $200.

Kastenmeier, Hungate and Flowers were among 121 House sponsors of bills that would have raised the federal support price for milk in 1971. The White House has said these bills and similar measures in the Senate constituted a "gun to our head" that forced Nixon to raise prices himself in March 1971.

Dairy donations since April 7, 1972, to the members of the Judiciary Committee total $32,150, including $24,050 to nine Democrats and $8,100 to seven Republicans. In the same period, Nixon received $295,000 from the co-ops, including $200,000 that filtered through established Republican committees about the time of the election.

It isn't known how much the dairy co-ops gave to Judiciary members before April 7, 1972, because those records are sealed and no longer available for public inspection. Nixon received $442,500 before that time.

Mezvinsky, whose $11,000 was the largest recorded total of any member of the committee, said he sees no conflict in voting on the milk money question. He referred The AP to a statement he made several weeks ago.

"I think the question of whether Congress is an ideal grand jury, an ideal jury, is irrelevant to the impeachment inquiry," he said.

"A case of this kind could probably be made that most Republicans aren't qualified because they received campaign contributions from the Republican party, whose standard-bearer is being investigated. But the founding fathers didn't include a provision about picking and choosing who in the House should decide on impeachment. The Constitution said it's the job of the full House."

Hungate, who got $2,300 after sponsoring milk-price legislation, said, "If Mr. Nixon received and reported a legitimate campaign donation, as I did, he's in no trouble," he said. "If he sought and received a bribe, as I did not, he is in deep trouble."

Cohen said his $3,000 donation was arranged to pay off a campaign debt by then-Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader. Cohen said he later was asked to co-sponsor a bill to raise the floor for milk price supports, but refused.

He said of the money, "I saw nothing wrong with it at the time, and if I had felt there was anything wrong I wouldn't have accepted it in the first place."

Flowers, who backed higher milk prices, said, "The question would be whether or not I was bribed, I guess, and I certainly was not .... The question of whether the President, or someone in his political organization made illegal promises, that's something I can consider independent of the fact I got a contribution from this outfit."

Experts Report Tape Erased

Washington (AP) — A panel of experts concluded, in a report released Tuesday, that an 18½-minute section of a White House tape recording was erased by someone operating the keyboard manually at least five times.

But, the panel said, its report "draws no inferences about such questions as whether the erasure and buzz were made accidentally or intentionally, or when, or by what person or persons."

It said "questions of who made the buzz, or when, or why, did not come within the scope of our investigation."

White House lawyer James D. St. Clair immediately took issue with the technical findings, saying the report "creates the false impression that all portions of the erasure were done manually and deliberately."

St. Clair and an expert hired independently by the White House objected to the panel's conclusion that a faulty power supply part could not have caused the erasure.

The section is in a recording of a conversation President Nixon had with then Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman on June 20, 1972 — three days after the Watergate break-in. It was discovered last year when the White House prepared to turn over subpoenaed tapes to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

St. Clair had asked Stanford Research Institute to provide technical consultation to the panel, which was selected jointly by the White House and the special Watergate prosecutor. Dr. Michael H. L. Hekcer, senior research engineer, presented the institute's review of the report:

"The substance of our disagreement is that the panel finally and irrevocably dismissed the possibility that a faulty machine was involved in producing the erasure. We believe that the other 5000 tape recorder . . . was electronically faulty at the time when the erasure was produced."

The panel presented the same conclusions as in a preliminary report on Jan. 15 but backed them with extensive technical data in a document an inch thick.

It said it was certain that the recorder, used by President Nixon's secretary Rose Mary Woods in transcribing the June 20 tape, was probably the machine on which the erasure occurred.

Miss Woods had testified she accidentally pushed the record-erase button, at the same time keeping her foot on a pedal, while answering her telephone for four to five minutes. After that, she said, she noticed that a section had been erased.

Charles S. Rhyne, Miss Woods' lawyer, tried to stop court acceptance of the report and its distribution with an extensive legal filing, saying it was "incompetent as evidence against our client."

Miss Woods "is completely innocent of any wrongdoing of any kind in connection with the matter of the 18½-minute gap . . . " he said.

"While it is crystal clear that Rose Mary Woods has not and could not have committed any violation of law, we must reiterate her innocence because of the constant media 'trial' by leaked falsehoods to which she has been subjected," he said in the court papers.

Rhyne said the published and broadcast falsehoods included reports that there would be evidence she erased the tape, that she would plead the Fifth Amendment, that her lamp and typewriter caused the buzz on the gap and that she was asked and refused to take a lie detector test.

When the panel first received the recorder used by Miss Woods for its tests, it was able to reproduce the buzz left on the tape. But several days later a bridge rectifier in the power supply failed and was replaced. Afterward the panel was unable to reproduce the buzz.

Rhyne called that destruction of evidence and said the recorder "was radically changed by the panel in unknown ways so it will never perform the same again."

The report went to Judge Sirica in accordance with his instructions of last January and also to the special prosecutor for use by the grand jury, which is still investigating the circumstances surrounding the flawed tape.

Hecker said he was uncomfortable with the certainty expressed by the panel that "erasure and recording in at least five places on the tape required hand operation of keyboard controls on the Uher 5000 machine."

He said the panel should have considered the possibility that the faulty part "could have been partly responsible."

The panel said it did consider that as a possible cause — as well as other reasons advanced by others who had not tested the tape — and rejected it.

"The buzz sound probably originated in electrical noise on the electric power line that powered the recorder," the report said. "Any speech sounds previously recorded on this section of the tape were erased in conjunction with the recording process . . . the erasure is so strong as to make recovery of the original conversation virtually impossible."

The panel was headed by Dr. Richard H. Bolt, a former associate professor of physics, acoustics and political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The other members were Franklin Cooper, a linguistics expert at the University of Connecticut and Yale University; James L. Flanagan of Bell Laboratories, a specialist in digital coding of speech; John G. McKnight, a consultant in magnetic recording and audio systems; Thomas G. Stockham Jr., professor at the University of Utah, and Mark R. Weiss, vice president for Acoustics Research at Federal Scientific Corporation in New York City.

MAGRUDER . . . 'Well, I'm not looking forward to this.'

Magruder Begins Sentence For Watergate Involvement

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Jeb Stuart Magruder, No. 2 man in President Nixon's re-election campaign, entered a minimum security federal prison near here Tuesday to begin serving a sentence for conspiracy in the Watergate case.

Magruder's wife, Gail, drove their car into the Allenwood federal prison complex.

"Well, I'm not looking forward to this," Magruder said on his arrival. "I hope to use the time to the best of my ability."

Magruder joins Watergate conspirator Egil Krogh, who began serving a six-month sentence at Allenwood on Feb. 4.

The onetime presidential aide — the sixth former White House employe sent to prison in connection with the Watergate scandal — told newsmen he will devote his prison term to "philosophy and theology more than anything else."

Magruder pleaded guilty last August to a single count of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States.

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica sentenced Magruder on May 20 to a term of from 10 months to four years. The maximum sentence would have been five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Magruder's first person account of the political scandal, "An American Life — One Man's Road to Watergate," is scheduled for publication June 26.

When he pleaded guilty, Magruder admitted that he helped "devise, implement and carry out a strategy" for the break-in and that he conspired to cover up involvement through lies, payment of hush money and destruction of evidence.

In the book Magruder says he was told that Nixon approved at least one campaign dirty trick in 1972, okaying a phony write-in campaign for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the New Hampshire Democratic primary.

Magruder says the plan was conceived by former special presidential counsel Charles W. Colson "to create confusion among the Democrats" and "sow ill will between Kennedy and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie," considered the front-runner in the Democratic presidential race.

Colson pleaded guilty Monday to a single count of obstruction of justice.

Magruder says he opposed the plan until he ran into Colson outside the President's office.

" 'We've got to get that mailing going,' he (Colson) told me. 'I've just come from talking to the President, and he thinks it's crucial,' " Magruder recounts.

Magruder says he checked with White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman, "who told me that what Colson said was true, the President did want the pro-Kennedy mailing in New Hampshire."

The mailing netted fewer than 1,000 votes and Magruder terms it "a waste of time."

While at the Allenwood prison camp — with its open and unguarded front gate — Magruder will live in a barrack-like room with about 100 other inmates.

Allenwood prisoners also can take college courses, work at area industries or play softball in a local league. They are eligible for community family visits, a program under which Magruder would be allowed to go home for one day every two months.

Santarelli Quits LEAA; News Stories In Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has accepted the resignation of Donald E. Santarelli, who said recently that the revelations of Watergate have "measurably cheapened" government service.

The White House announced Tuesday that Santarelli has resigned from his $40,000-a-year job as head of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, a Justice Department Agency which directs crime-fighting projects.

Santarelli, in a letter to Nixon made public by the White House, said he was resigning because he felt that recent news reports, "wrongful that they are, may harmfully affect my ability to continue to serve credibly your administration."

In the letter sent to the White House on Saturday, Santarelli denied that he meant to suggest that Nixon should resign because of the Watergate scandal.

The dispute over news accounts arose May 26 with an Associated Press report based on an interview with Santarelli. During the interview, Santarelli said the Watergate scandal has made the government "a nastier place to be these days." He said he wanted to leave government soon but meantime would "very assiduously avoid" mentioning Nixn's name.

Santarelli subsequently complained of a misunderstanding in the ground rules of the interview and said he didn't know his remarks would be published.

However, the entire interview was tape recorded by the AP reporter who offered in advance to exclude any portions Santarelli wanted off the record. At no point during the ensuing exchange did Santarelli make such a request. He did not deny the accuracy of the quotations at the time.

Atty. Gen. William Saxbe said the AP story was discussed during a Cabinet meeting last week but that he "thought the situation was salvageable" until publication Sunday of a Philadelphia Inquirer account based on another interview with Santarelli.

In that interview, also tape recorded, Santarelli said Nixon should resign because "there is no White House anymore."

He continued, "it pains me, but I think he should resign. After all, you've got the cleanest vice president in history over there, his whole life's been gone over by every agency imaginable, he's got USDA Prime stamped on every haunch."

Once again Santarelli claimed he had not meant his remarks to be published and he alleged that his comments were distorted.

In the letter to Nixon, Santarelli said, "above all, I wish to make clear that the report that I even suggested your resignation is one of those infamous journalistic contextual contortions that give words wholly different meaning than was intended."

He told Nixon, "I have supported you since joining your administration in 1969 and continue that support today."

Nixon accepted the resignation "with deep gratitude for his contributions to the conduct of the nation's law enforcement program."

Saxbe told reporters that "as far as I know he's leaving voluntarily. We certainly didn't lean on him, and I'm sure the White House didn't."

Asked how he feels about Santarelli's departure, Saxbe said "the whole situation is just a damn shame."

In the Philadelphia newspaper account, Santarelli was quoted as criticizing Saxbe for his administration of the department and expressing the view that LEAA is independent of it.

"I thought he'd tell me such things, and he never suggested he had any problems," Saxbe said. "I was hurt. I thought we had a good relationship, but it's obvious we didn't."

Santarelli, 36, will remain on the job until the President nominates a successor, who must be approved by the Senate. He was appointed to the job about a year ago after serving as an aide to the deputy attorney general.

UPI

NEW CHAIRMAN . . . of 1974-75 Democratic Governors' Conference, Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, left, chats with Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas during session.

Governors Hear Call For Political Reforms

Seattle, Wash. (UPI) — Common Cause Chairman John W. Gardner said Tuesday most states have reformed standards for political ethics, but the Nixon administration "has been totally unresponsive — and the Congress almost equally so" despite thehorrors of Watergate.

With the nation's worst political scandal still bringing fresh surprises, Gardner said, the federal response to calls for ethical reform "has been discouraging in the extreme."

"When the citizens ask 'What did you do to prevent future Watergates? What did you do to give us open and accountable government?' Most members of Congress will have to say, if they're honest, 'We did as little as we could get away with,' " Gardner said.

Garnder's comments came in remarks prepared for delivery to a panel titled "States and ethics in Government." Gardner shared the speakers platform with Govs. William Millikin of Michigan, Reuben Askew of Florida and Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin at the second day of the 1974 National Governors' Conference.

Confidence At Stake

Lucey and Millikin, leaders among governors on political reform, have introduced a resolution urging that prime attention be focused on the issue lest public confidence in elected officials be irretrievably eroded.

While castigating the federal government, Gardner congratulated the states on their progress in ensuring ethical conduct by candidates and officeholders.

He noted that in the 18 months since the last presidential elections, 40 states have enacted "significant statutes" to deal with governmental secrecy and financial contributions — "the two chief obstacles to responsive, accountable government."

But he noted that eight states had dragged their feet — Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia.

He urged the governors of those states to badger their legislatures until laws are passed to make politics scrupulously clean at the state level.

'Time Of Peril'

Milliken, who told a prayer breakfast in Michigan recently that "When the final transcript is read, nothing will be deleted," said the ethical problems that nurtured Watergate present the nation with a "time of peril for the nation and unique opportunity for the states."

"The abuses of Watergate," said the Michigan Republican, "have cast a shadow across this land that has turned public opinion against public officials at all levels. The best way to erase it is with the bright light of public scrutiny."

Lucey, a Democrat, said the fallout from Watergate has "choked in the polluted air of scandal, dishonesty and bureaucratic inertia . . . institutions that once breathed with life."

He called on his fellow gevernors to exert their best efforts — not only at the state level, but nationally — to remove the "cancer" of Watergate.

School Bond OKd In Prague

Lincoln Star Special

Prague — Voters here, in a special election Tuesday gave overwhelming approval to a $320,000 school bond issue for construction of an addition to the existing Prague High School building.

The unofficial tally was 252 for the proposal compared to 64 against.

Plans call for the funds to be used for a new gymnasium, locker rooms, vocational shop and stairs.

Woman Reports Litterbug; Kidnap Suspect Arrested

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tipped off by a woman who thought she was reporting a litterbug, FBI agents arrested an oil field supplier Tuesday in the kidnaping of one of Tulsa's richest businessman.

Authorities refused to say whether the $700,000 paid for the businessman's release was recovered.

FBI agents took Freddie D. Smith, 45, into custody at his home less than 24 hours after the kidnaping of Walter H. Helmerich III, 51.

Police said they were led to Smith by a license plate number reported by a woman who saw the ransom drop and thought someone was littering.

"The woman called the police department to complain about the littering," said Police Chief Lloyd Ruddell. "When the officer arrived, she said another car had come along and picked up the litter and drove away with it.

"The officer put two and two together right away and knew some sort of extortion was going on."

Officers spotted the car believed used in the kidnaping in Smith's driveway in a hilly residential area where homes sell for $40,000 to $80,000. They kept Smith under surveillance, then arrested him.

Smith, the father of two teenaged children, was arraigned on a charge of violating a federal law on extortionate demands and ordered held under $1 million bond. A preliminary hearing was set for June 12.

Helmerich, president of Helmerich and Payne Inc., a worldwide oil drilling firm, was driving to work Monday morning when he was stopped by a man dressed as a workman. He was held captive for eight hours until the ransom was paid by his father.

"I guess I made a mistake," Helmerich said Tuesday. "I always drive the same way to work. I go on this quiet little residential street.

"Only Monday I saw a man who was dressed like a flagman. He was wearing one of those orange vests and a blue hat and was carrying a little sign that said 'stop'.

"So I stopped and he said they were repairing a gas main ahead and asked me to cut off my engine. I did, and that's when he stuck a gun at the back of my head."

Irish Earl And Wife Kidnaped

DUBLIN (AP) — The earl of Donoughmore and his wife were kidnaped early Wednesday by three armed and masked men who invaded their home in County Tipperary, police reported.

They were driven off in a car toward Dublin, about 120 miles from the house at Knocklofty, near Clonmel. A huge police search was launched and air and seaports were alerted.

Police declined to speculate on the motive behind the kidnaping. There had been speculation here that Irish republicans might stage an operation to protest the death in a British prison of republican hunger striker Michael Gaughan.

A police spokesman said the kidnapers were all aged about 25.

Divorce In Works

Mrs. Donna Mutscher, Miss America of 1964, has sued former Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher for divorce. He was ordered by State District Court in Austin not to dispose of any of the couple's property and to appear at a court hearing Friday. In her divorce petition, Mrs. Mutscher seeks custody of their only child, Gus Hurley Mutscher, 3, now living with his father. Mrs. Mutscher, 32, has a daughter by a previous marriage. The couple are shown during his conspiracy-bribery trial in 1972.

Frontier Replies To Opposition To Flight

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines has filed its response to opposition over its request for temporary authority to service an Omaha-Chicago route with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, officials said Tuesday.

The Denver-based airline said it asked for the "exemption authority" a month ago, on the grounds that the service is badly needed, and Tuesday answered opposition claims from American Airlines, Continental Airlines, and the city of Omaha.

Omaha officials said they opposed giving Frontier temporary service authority because it might complicate the original case to determine a permanent carrier for the route which has been before the CAB for more than two years.

Frontier Tuesday reiterated its claim that passengers are being inconvenienced by a lack of seats because of a monopoly on the route by United Airlines. Officials said the interim service is needed since no date of settlement of the original case is in sight.

Frontier Airlines was supported in their application for temporary service authority by the cities of Lincoln and Grand Island in Nebraska and Chicago.

The airline would fly two flights into O'Hare International Airport and one into Midway Airport in Chicago daily. Frontier quit serving Midway and requested permission to serve O'Hare two years ago because of a lack of connecting flights.

The airline is competing with several other airlines, including American, for rights to the route.

Reburial Approved

Cody, Wyo. (UPI) — Promoter Bob Edgar said the Veterans Administration has approved the reburial of mountain man John "Liver-eating" Johnston in the Wyoming mountains as planned months ago by a California seventh grade class.

Edgar, owner of Old Trail Town, said Rufus H. Wilson, director of the Va National Cemetery Service, phoned him with the news to go ahead.

He said the reburial would be held Saturday.

Peace Corps Funded

Washinton (UPI)—President Nixon has signed a bill authorizing $82.2 million in federal spending for the Peace Corps in the current fiscal year.

Iceland Split On Retaining, Ousting U.S. Military Base

KEFLAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Iceland's general elections at the end of the month could serve as a referendum on the future of the American military base here used chiefly for tracking Soviet submarines in the Atlantic.

United States defense officials maintain that the base is a "critical point in the present-day balance of power."

Iceland's left-oriented coalition government asked the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to totally phase out the base at Keflavik over an 18-month period beginning at the end of this year, but parliament was dissolved May 9 and new elections will be held June 30.

The Independence party, the country's largest political group, and its ally, the Social Democratic party, want to keep the base. The Progressive party, the Marxist People's Alliance, and the Left Liberals — the components of the former coalition — insist the American presence come to an end.

Keflavik, which has two runways and a collection of low slung buildings on a mournful corner of the island, is a mixed post of 3,300 airmen and sailors essentially assigned to monitoring the Soviet Union's nuclear submarines as they move southward in the Atlantic towards North America and Western Europe. It has nine P3C-Orion radar tracking planes for sub control and 12 F4 Phantom interceptors used in surveillance of Soviet air operations.

The position of the United States and NATO since Iceland officially asked for the termination of the base a year ago has been that U.S. personnel could be reduced by about 25 to 30 per cent, but that the base itself is essential, the perfect place for watching Soviet deployment in the Atlantic.

The outgoing Icelandic government, in invoking its treaty rights to cancel the defense agreement with the United States, reasoned that the base is expendable now that it considers the big powers have achieved detente.

If the left coalition is re-elected it is committed to the complete withdrawal of the American presence by the middle of 1976.

Milk Donations Made To 16 On Judiciary Panel

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's three largest dairy-farmer cooperatives made political donations of from $100 to $11,000 to at least 16 members of the House Judiciary Committee, which is investigating allegations that President Nixon was influenced by contributions from the same groups.

The recipients include committee chairman Peter W. Rodino, whose urban New Jersey district has no dairy farmers in it. An aide said Rodino didn't ask for the money, and said he could not explain why the cooperatives gave it to the congressman from Newark.

Two of the recipients gave back the money after The Associated Press questioned them about it. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., gave back $100 he got last March, and Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., returned $500 he received in 1972.

They said they acted to avoid any conflict of interest, but the other recipients said they see no conflict.

The committee is investigating allegations that the co-ops gave money to Nixon to raise milk price supports, impose dairy import quotas and divert the course of a Justice Department antitrust investigation.

Nixon received $727,500 from the co-ops over three years, and had been promised $2 million. The White House has said this money didn't influence Nixon's actions.

The three co-ops are Associated Milk Producers, Inc., Dairymen, Inc. and Mid-America Dairymen, Inc. Together they control about one-fourth of the nation's milk production.

According to public records going back to April 7, 1972, these committee members received money from one or more of the co-ops:

M. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., $1,000; William S. Cohen, R-Maine, $3,000; John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., $100; David W. Dennis, R-Ind., $500; Walter Flowers, D-Ala., $1,000; Harold W. Froehlich, R-Wis., $100; William Hungate, D-Mo., $2,300; Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., $2,650; Trent Lott, R-Miss., $2,500; Robert McClory, R-Ill., $500; Edward Mezvinsky, D-Iowa, $11,000; Wayne Owens, D-Utah, $2,600; Railsback, $500; Rangel, $100; Rodino, $4,100, and Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., $200.

Kastenmeier, Hungate and Flowers were among 121 House sponsors of bills that would have raised the federal support price for milk in 1971. The White House has said these bills and similar measures in the Senate constituted a "gun to our head" that forced Nixon to raise prices himself in March 1971.

Dairy donations since April 7, 1972, to the members of the Judiciary Committee total $32,150, including $24,050 to nine Democrats and $8,100 to seven Republicans. In the same period, Nixon received $295,000 from the co-ops, including $200,000 that filtered through established Republican committees about the time of the election.

It isn't known how much the dairy co-ops gave to Judiciary members before April 7, 1972, because those records are sealed and no longer available for public inspection. Nixon received $442,500 before that time.

Mezvinsky, whose $11,000 was the largest recorded total of any member of the committee, said he sees no conflict in voting on the milk money question. He referred The AP to a statement he made several weeks ago.

"I think the question of whether Congress is an ideal grand jury, an ideal jury, is irrelevant to the impeachment inquiry," he said.

"A case of this kind could probably be made that most Republicans aren't qualified because they received campaign contributions from the Republican party, whose standard-bearer is being investigated. But the founding fathers didn't include a provision about picking and choosing who in the House should decide on impeachment. The Constitution said it's the job of the full House."

Hungate, who got $2,300 after sponsoring milk-price legislation, said, "If Mr. Nixon received and reported a legitimate campaign donation, as I did, he's in no trouble," he said.

"If he sought and received a bribe, as I did not, he is in deep trouble."

Cohen said his $3,000 donation was arranged to pay off a campaign debt by then-Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the House Republican leader. Cohen said he later was asked to co-sponsor a bill to raise the floor for milk price supports, but refused.

He said of the money, "I saw nothing wrong with it at the time, and if I had felt there was anything wrong I wouldn't have accepted it in the first place."

Flowers, who backed higher milk prices, said, "The question would be whether or not I was bribed, I guess, and I certainly was not .... The question of whether the President, or someone in his political organization made illegal promises, that's something I can consider independent of the fact I got a contribution from this outfit."

Experts Report Tape Erased

Washington (AP) — A panel of experts concluded, in a report released Tuesday, that an 18½-minute section of a White House tape recording was erased by someone operating the keyboard manually at least five times.

But, the panel said, its report "draws no inferences about such questions as whether the erasure and buzz were made accidentally or intentionally, or when, or by what person or persons."

It said "questions of who made the buzz, or when, or why, did not come within the scope of our investigation."

White House lawyer James D. St. Clair immediately took issue with the technical findings, saying the report "creates the false impression that all portions of the erasure were done manually and deliberately."

St. Clair and an expert hired independently by the White House objected to the panel's conclusion that a faulty power supply part could not have caused the erasure.

The section is in a recording of a conversation President Nixon had with then Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman on June 20, 1972 — three days after the Watergate break-in. It was discovered last year when the White House prepared to turn over subpoenaed tapes to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica.

St. Clair had asked Stanford Research Institute to provide technical consultation to the panel, which was selected jointly by the White House and the special Watergate prosecutor. Dr. Michael H. L. Hekcer, senior research engineer, presented the institute's review of the report:

"The substance of our disagreement is that the panel finally and irrevocably dismissed the possibility that a faulty machine was involved in producing the erasure. We believe that the other 5000 tape recorder . . . was electronically faulty at the time when the erasure was produced."

The panel presented the same conclusions as in a preliminary report on Jan. 15 but backed them with extensive technical data in a document an inch thick.

It said it was certain that the recorder, used by President Nixon's secretary Rose Mary Woods in transcribing the June 20 tape, was probably the machine on which the erasure occurred.

Miss Woods had testified she accidentally pushed the record-erase button, at the same time keeping her foot on a pedal, while answering her telephone for four to five minutes. After that, she said, she noticed that a section had been erased.

Charles S. Rhyne, Miss Woods' lawyer, tried to stop court acceptance of the report and its distribution with an extensive legal filing, saying it was "incompetent as evidence against our client."

Miss Woods "is completely innocent of any wrongdoing of any kind in connection with the matter of the 18½-minute gap . . . ," he said.

"While it is crystal clear that Rose Mary Woods has not and could not have committed any violation of law, we must reiterate her innocence because of the constant media 'trial' by leaked falsehoods to which she has been subjected," he said in the court papers.

Rhyne said the published and broadcast falsehoods included reports that there would be evidence she erased the tape, that she would plead the Fifth Amendment, that her lamp and typewriter caused the buzz on the gap and that she was asked and refused to take a lie detector test.

When the panel first received the recorder used by Miss Woods for its tests, it was able to reproduce the buzz left on the tape. But several days later a bridge rectifier in the power supply failed and was replaced. Afterward the panel was unable to reproduce the buzz.

Rhyne called that destruction of evidence and said the recorder "was radically changed by the panel in unknown ways so it will never perform the same again."

The report went to Judge Sirica in accordance with his instructions of last January and also to the special prosecutor for use by the grand jury, which is still investigating the circumstances surrounding the flawed tape.

Hecker said he was uncomfortable with the certainty expressed by the panel that "erasure and recording in at least five places on the tape required hand operation of keyboard controls on the Uher 5000 machine."

He said the panel should have considered the possibility that the faulty part "could have been partly responsible."

The panel said it did consider that as a possible cause — as well as other reasons advanced by others who had not tested the tape — and rejected it.

"The buzz sound probably originated in electrical noise on the electric power line that powered the recorder," the report said. "Any speech sounds previously recorded on this section of the tape were erased in conjunction with the recording process . . . the erasure is so strong as to make recovery of the original conversation virtually impossible."

The panel was headed by Dr. Richard H. Bolt, a former associate professor of physics, acoustics and political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The other members were Franklin Cooper, a linguistics expert at the University of Connecticut and Yale University; James L. Flanagan of Bell Laboratories, a specialist in digital coding of speech; John G. McKnight, a consultant in magnetic recording and audio systems; Thomas G. Stockham Jr., professor at the University of Utah, and Mark R. Weiss, vice president for Acoustics Research at Federal Scientific Corporation in New York City.

MAGRUDER . . . 'Well, I'm not looking forward to this.'

Magruder Begins Sentence For Watergate Involvement

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Jeb Stuart Magruder, No. 2 man in President Nixon's re-election campaign, entered a minimum security federal prison near here Tuesday to begin serving a sentence for conspiracy in the Watergate case.

Magruder's wife, Gail, drove their car into the Allenwood federal prison complex.

"Well, I'm not looking forward to this," Magruder said on his arrival. "I hope to use the time to the best of my ability."

Magruder joins Watergate conspirator Egil Krogh, who began serving a six-month sentence at Allenwood on Feb. 4.

The onetime presidential aide — the sixth former White House employe sent to prison in connection with the Watergate scandal — told newsmen he will devote his prison term to "philosophy and theology more than anything else."

Magruder pleaded guilty last August to a single count of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States.

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica sentenced Magruder on May 20 to a term of from 10 months to four years. The maximum sentence would have been five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Magruder's first person account of the political scandal, "An American Life — One Man's Road to Watergate," is scheduled for publication June 26.

When he pleaded guilty, Magruder admitted that he helped "devise, implement and carry out a strategy" for the break-in and that he conspired to cover up involvement through lies, payment of hush money and destruction of evidence.

In the book Magruder says he was told that Nixon approved at least one campaign dirty trick in 1972, okaying a phony write-in campaign for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the New Hampshire Democratic primary.

Magruder says the plan was conceived by former special presidential counsel Charles W. Colson "to create confusion among the Democrats" and "sow ill will between Kennedy and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie," considered the front-runner in the Democratic presidential race.

Colson pleaded guilty Monday to a single count of obstruction of justice.

Magruder says he opposed the plan until he ran into Colson outside the President's office.

" 'We've got to get that mailing going,' he (Colson) told me. 'I've just come from talking to the President, and he thinks it's crucial,' " Magruder recounts.

Magruder says he checked with White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman, "who told me that what Colson said was true, the President did want the pro-Kennedy mailing in New Hampshire."

The mailing netted fewer than 1,000 votes and Magruder terms it "a waste of time."

While at the Allenwood prison camp — with its open and unguarded front gate — Magruder will live in a barrack-like room with about 100 other inmates.

Allenwood prisoners also can take college courses, work at area industries or play softball in a local league. They are eligible for community family visits, a program under which Magruder would be allowed to go home for one day every two months.

Santarelli Quits LEAA; News Stories In Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has accepted the resignation of Donald E. Santarelli, who said recently that the revelations of Watergate have "measurably cheapened" government service.

The White House announced Tuesday that Santarelli has resigned from his $40,000-a-year job as head of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, a Justice Department Agency which directs crime-fighting projects.

Santarelli, in a letter to Nixon made public by the White House, said he was resigning because he felt that recent news reports, "wrongful that they are, may harmfully affect my ability to continue to serve credibly your administration."

In the letter sent to the White House on Saturday, Santarelli denied that he meant to suggest that Nixon should resign because of the Watergate scandal.

The dispute over news accounts arose May 26 with an Associated Press report based on an interview with Santarelli. During the interview, Santarelli said the Watergate scandal has made the government "a nastier place to be these days." He said he wanted to leave government soon but meantime would "very assiduously avoid" mentioning Nixn's name.

Santarelli subsequently complained of a misunderstanding in the ground rules of the interview and said he didn't know his remarks would be published.

However, the entire interview was tape recorded by the AP reporter who offered in advance to exclude any portions Santarelli wanted off the record. At no point during the ensuing exchange did Santarelli make such a request. He did not deny the accuracy of the quotations at the time.

Atty. Gen. William Saxbe said the AP story was discussed during a Cabinet meeting last week but that he "thought the situation was salvageable" until publication Sunday of a Philadelphia Inquirer account based on another interview with Santarelli.

In that interview, also tape recorded, Santarelli said Nixon should resign because "there is no White House anymore."

He continued, "it pains me, but I think he should resign. After all, you've got the cleanest vice president in history over there, his whole life's been gone over by every agency imaginable, he's got USDA Prime stamped on every haunch."

Once again Santarelli claimed he had not meant his remarks to be published and he alleged that his comments were distorted.

In the letter to Nixon, Santarelli said, "above all, I wish to make clear that the report that I even suggested your resignation is one of those infamous journalistic contextual contortions that give words wholly different meaning than was intended."

He told Nixon, "I have supported you since joining your administration in 1969 and continue that support today."

Nixon accepted the resignation "with deep gratitude for his contributions to the conduct of the nation's law enforcement program."

Saxbe told reporters that "as far as I know he's leaving voluntarily. We certainly didn't lean on him, and I'm sure the White House didn't."

Asked how he feels about Santarelli's departure, Saxbe said "the whole situation is just a damn shame."

In the Philadelphia newspaper account, Santarelli was quoted as criticizing Saxbe for his administration of the department and expressing the view that LEAA is independent of it.

"I thought he'd tell me such things, and he never suggested he had any problems," Saxbe said. "I was hurt. I thought we had a good relationship, but it's obvious we didn't."

Santarelli, 36, will remain on the job until the President nominates a successor, who must be approved by the Senate. He was appointed to the job about a year ago after serving as an aide to the deputy attorney general.

UPI

NEW CHAIRMAN . . . of 1974-75 Democratic Governors' Conference, Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, left, chats with Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas during session.

Governors Hear Call For Political Reforms

Seattle, Wash. (UPI) — Common Cause Chairman John W. Gardner said Tuesday most states have reformed standards for political ethics, but the Nixon administration "has been totally unresponsive — and the Congress almost equally so" despite the horrors of Watergate.

With the nation's worst political scandal still bringing fresh surprises, Gardner said, the federal response to calls for ethical reform "has been discouraging in the extreme."

"When the citizens ask 'What did you do to prevent future Watergates? What did you do to give us open and accountable government?' Most members of Congress will have to say, if they're honest, 'We did as little as we could get away with,' " Gardner said.

Gardner's comments came in remarks prepared for delivery to a panel titled "States and ethics in Government." Gardner shared the speakers platform with Govs. William Milliken of Michigan, Reuben Askew of Florida and Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin at the second day of the 1974 National Governors' Conference.

Confidence At Stake

Lucey and Milliken, leaders among governors on political reform, have introduced a resolution urging that prime attention be focused on the issue lest public confidence in elected officials be irretrievably eroded.

While castigating the federal government, Gardner congratulated the states on their progress in ensuring ethical conduct by candidates and officeholders.

He noted that in the 18 months since the last presidential elections, 40 states have enacted "significant statutes" to deal with governmental secrecy and financial contributions — "the two chief obstacles to responsive, accountable government."

But he noted that eight states had dragged their feet — Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia.

He urged the governors of those states to badger their legislatures until laws are passed to make politics scrupulously clean at the state level.

'Time Of Peril'

Milliken, who told a prayer breakfast in Michigan recently that "When the final transcript is read, nothing will be deleted," said the ethical problems that nurtured Watergate present the nation with a "time of peril for the nation and unique opportunity for the states."

"The abuses of Watergate," said the Michigan Republican, "have cast a shadow across this land that has turned public opinion against public officials at all levels. The best way to erase it is with the bright light of public scrutiny."

Lucey, a Democrat, said the fallout from Watergate has "choked in the polluted air of scandal, dishonesty and bureaucratic inertia . . . institutions that once breathed with life."

He called on his fellow governors to exert their best efforts — not only at the state level, but nationally — to remove the "cancer" of Watergate.

School Bond OKd In Prague

Lincoln Star Special

Prague — Voters here, in a special election Tuesday gave overwhelming approval to a $320,000 school bond issue for construction of an addition to the existing Prague High School building.

The unofficial tally was 252 for the proposal compared to 64 against.

Plans call for the funds to be used for a new gymnasium, locker rooms, vocational shop and stairs.

Woman Reports Litterbug; Kidnap Suspect Arrested

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tipped off by a woman who thought she was reporting a litterbug, FBI agents arrested an oil field supplier Tuesday in the kidnaping of one of Tulsa's richest businessman.

Authorities refused to say whether the $700,000 paid for the businessman's release was recovered.

FBI agents took Freddie D. Smith, 45, into custody at his home less than 24 hours after the kidnaping of Walter H Helmerich III, 51.

Police said they were led to Smith by a license plate number reported by a woman who saw the ransom drop and thought someone was littering

"The woman called the police department to complain about the littering," said Police Chief Lloyd Ruddell. "When the officer arrived, she said another car had come along and picked up the litter and drove away with it

"The officer put two and two together right away and knew some sort of extortion was going on."

Officers spotted the car believed used in the kidnaping in Smith's driveway in a hilly residential area where homes sell for $40,000 to $80,000. They kept Smith under surveillance, then arrested him.

Smith, the father of two teenaged children, was arraigned on a charge of violating a federal law on extortionate demands and ordered held under $1 million bond. A preliminary hearing was set for June 12.

Helmerich, president of Helmerich and Payne Inc., a worldwide oil drilling firm, was driving to work Monday morning when he was stopped by a man dressed as a workman. He was held captive for eight hours until the ransom was paid by his father.

"I guess I made a mistake," Helmerich said Tuesday. "I always drive the same way to work. I go on this quiet little residential street.

"Only Monday I saw a man who was dressed like a flagman. He was wearing one of those orange vests and a blue hat and was carrying a little sign that said 'stop'.

"So I stopped and he said they were repairing a gas main ahead and asked me to cut off my engine. I did, and that's when he stuck a gun at the back of my head."

Irish Earl And Wife Kidnaped

DUBLIN (AP) — The earl of Donoughmore and his wife were kidnaped early Wednesday by three armed and masked men who invaded their home in County Tipperary, police reported.

They were driven off in a car toward Dublin, about 120 miles from the house at Knocklofty, near Clonmel. A huge police search was launched and air and seaports were alerted.

Police declined to speculate on the motive behind the kidnaping. There had been speculation here that Irish republicans might stage an operation to protest the death in a British prison of republican hunger striker Michael Gaughan.

A police spokesman said the kidnapers were all aged about 25.

Divorce In Works

Mrs. Donna Mutscher, Miss America of 1964, has sued former Texas House Speaker Gus Mutscher for divorce He was ordered by State District Court in Austin not to dispose of any of the couple's property and to appear at a court hearing Friday In her divorce petition, Mrs. Mutscher seeks custody of their only child, Gus Hurley Mutscher, 3, now living with his father. Mrs. Mutscher, 32, has a daughter by a previous marriage. The couple are shown during his conspiracy-bribery trial in 1972.

Frontier Replies To Opposition To Flight

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines has filed its response to opposition over its request for temporary authority to service an Omaha-Chicago route with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington, officials said Tuesday.

The Denver-based airline said it asked for the "exemption authority" a month ago, on the grounds that the service is badly needed, and Tuesday answered opposition claims from American Airlines, Continental Airlines, and the city of Omaha.

Omaha officials said they opposed giving Frontier temporary service authority because it might complicate the original case to determine a permanent carrier for the route which has been before the CAB for more than two years.

Frontier Tuesday reiterated its claim that passengers are being inconvenienced by a lack of seats because of a monopoly on the route by United Airlines. Officials said the interim service is needed since no date of settlement of the original case is in sight.

Frontier Airlines was supported in their application for temporary service authority by the cities of Lincoln and Grand Island in Nebraska and Chicago.

The airline would fly two flights into O'Hare International Airport and one into Midway Airport in Chicago daily. Frontier quit serving Midway and requested permission to serve O'Hare two years ago because of a lack of connecting flights.

The airline is competing with several other airlines, including American, for rights to the route.

Reburial Approved

Cody, Wyo. (UPI) — Promoter Bob Edgar said the Veterans Administration has approved the reburial of mountain man John "Liver-eating" Johnston in the Wyoming mountains as planned months ago by a California seventh grade class.

Edgar, owner of Old Trail Town, said Rufus H. Wilson, director of the Va National Cemetery Service, phoned him with the news to go ahead.

He said the reburial would be held Saturday.

Peace Corps Funded

Washinton (UPI)—President Nixon has signed a bill authorizing $82.2 million in federal spending for the Peace Corps in the current fiscal year.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 6-5

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 6-5
